I am very glad to know that the Sacred Books of the East, published years ago by the Clarendon Press, Oxford, which have been out-of-print for a number of years, will now be available to all students of religion and philosophy. The enterprise of the publishers is commendable and I hope the books will be widely read.

PREFATORY NOTE TO THE NEW EDITION

Since 1948 the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), upon the recommendation of the General Assembly of the United Nations, has been concerned with facilitating the translation of the works most representative of the culture of certain of its Member States, and, in particular, those of Asia.

One of the major difficulties confronting this programme is the lack of translators having both the qualifications and the time to undertake translations of the many outstanding books meriting publication. To help overcome this difficulty in part, UNESCO's advisers in this field (a panel of experts convened every other year by the International Council for Philosophy and Humanistic Studies), have recommended that many worthwhile translations published during the 19th century, and now impossible to find except in a limited number of libraries, should be brought back into print in low-priced editions, for the use of students and of the general public. The experts also pointed out that in certain cases, even though there might be in existence more recent and more accurate translations endowed with a more modern apparatus of scholarship, a number of pioneer works of the greatest value and interest to students of Eastern religions also merited republication.

This point of view was warmly endorsed by the Indian National Academy of Letters (Sahitya Akademi), and the Indian National Commission for Unesco.

It is in the spirit of these recommendations that this work from the famous series "Sacred Books of the East" is now once again being made available to the general public as part of the UNESCO Collection of Representative Works.

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

First, the man distinguished between eternal and perishable. Later he discovered within himself the germ of the Eternal. This discovery was an epoch in the history of the human mind and the East was the first to discover it

To watch in the Sacred Books of the East the dawn of this religious consciousness of man, must always remain one of the most inspiring and hallowing sights in the whole history of the world. In order to have a solid foundation for a comparative study of the Religions of the East, we must have before all things, complete and thoroughly faithful translation of their Sacred Books in which some of the ancient sayings were preserved because they were so true and so striking that they could not be forgotten. They contained eternal truths, expressed for the first time in human language.

With profoundest reverence for Dr S. Radhakrishnan, President of India, who inspired us for the task, our deep sense of gratitude for Dr. C. D. Deshmukh & Dr D. S. Kothari, for encouraging assistance, esteemed appreciation of UNESCO for the warm endorsement of the cause, and finally with indebtedness to Dr. H. Rau, Director, Max Muller Bhawan, New Delhi, in procuring us the texts of the Series for reprint, we humbly conclude.

THE DHAMMAPADA, A CANONICAL BOOK

THE Dhammapada forms part of the Pāli Buddhist canon, though its exact place varies according to different authorities, and we have not as yet a sufficient number of complete MSS. of the Tipiṭaka to help us to decide the question<sup>1</sup>.

Those who divide that canon into three Piṭakas or baskets, the Vinaya-piṭaka, Sutta-piṭaka, and Abhidhamma-piṭaka, assign the Dhammapada to the Sutta-piṭaka. That Piṭaka consists of five Nikāyas the Dīgha-nikāya, the Magghima-nikāya, the Samyutta-nikāya, the Anguttara-nikāya, and the Khuddaka-nikāya. The fifth, or Khuddaka-nikāya, comprehends the following works. 1. Khuddaka-pāṭha; 2. DHAMMAPADA; 3. Udāna; 4. Itivuttaka; 5. Suttanipāta; 6. Vimānavatthu; 7. Petavatthu; 8. Theragāthā; 9. Therīgāthā; 10. Gāthaka; 11. Niddesa; 12. Paṭisambhida; 13. Apadāna; 14. Buddhavaṃsa, 15. Kariyā-piṭaka.

According to another division<sup>2</sup>, however, the whole Buddhist canon consists of five Nikāyas the Dīgha-nikāya, the Magghima-nikāya, the Samyutta-nikāya, the Anguttara-nikāya, and the fifth, the Khuddaka-nikāya, which Khuddaka-nikāya is then made to comprehend the whole of the Vinaya (discipline) and Abhidhamma (metaphysics), together with the fifteen books beginning with the Khuddaka-pāṭha.

The order of these fifteen books varies, and even, as it would seem, their number. The Dīghabhāṇaka school admits twelve books only, and assigns them all to the Abhidhamma, while the Magghimabbhāṇakas admit fifteen books, and assign them to the Sutta-piṭaka. The order of the fifteen books is: 1. Gāthaka [10], 2. Māhāniddesa [11], 3. Kullāniddesa [11], 4. Paṭisambhidāmagga [12]; 5. Suttanipāṭa [5]; 6. DHAMMAPADA [2], 7. Udāna [3], 8. Itivuttaka [4], 9. Vimānavatthu [6]; 10. Petavatthu [7], 11. Theragāthā [8], 12. Therīgāthā [9], 13. Karīyāpiṭaka [15], 14. Apadāna [13]; 15. Buddhavaṃsa [14]<sup>1</sup>.

The Khuddaka-pāṭha is left out in the second list, and the number is brought to fifteen by dividing Niddesa into Māhāniddesa and Kullāniddesa.

There is a commentary on the Dhammapada in Pāli, and supposed to be written by Buddhaghosa<sup>2</sup>, in the first half of the fifth century A.D. In explaining the verses of the Dhammapada, the commentator gives for every or nearly every verse a parable to illustrate its meaning, which is likewise believed to have been uttered by Buddha in his intercourse with his disciples, or in preaching to the multitudes that came to hear him.

DATE OF THE DHAMMAPADA.

The only means of fixing the date of the Dhammapada is trying to ascertain the date of the Buddhist canon of which it forms a part, or the date of Buddhaghosa, who wrote a commentary on it. This, however, is by no means easy, and the evidence on which we have to rely is such that we must not be surprised if those who are accustomed to test historical and chronological evidence in Greece and Rome, decline to be convinced by it. As a general rule, I quite agree that we cannot be too sceptical in assigning a date to ancient books, particularly if we intend to use them as documents for tracing the history of human thought. To the initiated, I mean to those who have themselves worked in the mines of ancient Oriental literature, such extreme scepticism may often seem unscientific and uncalled for. They are more or less aware of hundreds of arguments, each by itself, it may be, of small weight, but all combined proving irresistible. They are conscious, too, of having been constantly on the look out for danger, and, as all has gone on smoothly, they feel sure that, in the main, they are on the right road. Still it is always useful to be as incredulous as possible, particularly against oneself, and to have before our eyes critics who will not yield one inch beyond what they are forced to yield by the strongest pressure of facts.

The age of our MSS. of the canonical books, either in Pāli or Sanskrit, is of no help to us. All Indian MSS. are comparatively modern, and one who has probably handled more Indian MSS. than anybody else, Mr. A. Burnell, has lately expressed his conviction that 'no MS. written one thousand years ago is now existent in India, and that it is almost impossible to find one written five hundred years ago, for most MSS. which claim to be of that date are merely copies of old MSS. the dates of which are repeated by the copyists<sup>1</sup>.'

Nor is the language, whether Sanskrit or Pāli, a safe guide for fixing dates. Both languages continue to be written to our own time, and though there are some characteristic marks to distinguish more modern from more ancient Buddhist Sanskrit and Pāli, this branch of critical scholarship requires to be cultivated far more extensively and accurately before true scholars would venture to fix the date of a Sanskrit or Pāli text on the strength of linguistic evidence alone<sup>2</sup>.

The Buddhists themselves have no difficulty in assigning a date to their sacred canon. They are told in that canon itself that it was settled at the First Council, or immediately after the death of Buddha, and they believe that it was afterwards handed down by means of oral tradition, or actually written down in books by order of Kāśyapa, the president of the First Council<sup>1</sup>. Buddhaghosa, a learned and in some respects a critical scholar, living in the beginning of the fifth century A D, asserts that the canon which he had before him, was the same as that fixed by the First Council<sup>2</sup>.

Several European students have adopted the same opinion, and, so far as I know, no argument has yet been advanced showing the impossibility of the native view, that some collection of Buddha's doctrines was made immediately after his death at Rāgagaha, and that it was finally settled at what is called the Second Council, or the Council of Vesālī. But what is not impossible is not therefore true, nor can anything be gained by appealing to later witnesses, such as, for instance, Hiouen Tshang, who travelled through India in the seventh century, and wrote down anything that he could learn, little concerned whether one statement tallied with the other or not<sup>3</sup>. He says that the Tipiṭaka was written down on palm leaves by Kāśyapa at the end of the First Council. But what can be the weight of such a witness, living more than a thousand years after the event, compared with that, for instance, of the Mahāvamsa, which dates from the fifth century of our era, and

<sup>2</sup> See Childers, s. v. Tipiṭaka. There is a curious passage in Buddhaghosa's account of the First Council. 'Now one may ask,' he says, 'Is there or is there not in this first Parāṅka anything to be taken away or added?' I reply, There is nothing in the words of the Blessed Buddha that can be taken away, for the Buddhas speak not even a single syllable in vain, yet in the words of disciples and devatās there are things which may be omitted, and these the elders who made the recension, did omit. On the other hand, additions are everywhere necessary, and accordingly, whenever it was necessary to add anything, they added it. If it be asked, What are the additions referred to? I reply, Only sentences necessary to connect the text, as 'at that time,' 'again at that time' and so forth.'

tells us in the account of Mahinda's missionary journey to Ceylon (241/318), that the son of Asoka had to spend three years in learning the Tipiṭaka by heart from the mouth of a teacher<sup>1</sup>. No mention is then made of any books or MSS, when it would have been most natural to do so<sup>2</sup>. At a later time, during the reign of King Vattagâmani<sup>3</sup> (88-76 B C), the same chronicle, the Mahāvamsa, tells us that 'the profoundly wise priests had theretofore orally (mukhapâtḥena) perpetuated the Pāli of the Piṭakattaya and its Attḥakathā (commentary), but that at this period the priests, foreseeing the perdition of the people assembled, and in order that the religion might endure for ages, recorded the same in books (poṭṭhakesu likhāpayum)'<sup>4</sup>.

No one has yet questioned the dates of the Dīpavamsa, about 400 A.D., or of the first part of the Mahāvamsa, between 459-477 A.D., and though no doubt there is an interval of nearly 600 years between the composition of the Mahāvamsa and the recorded writing down of the Buddhist canon under Vattagâmani, yet we must remember that the Ceylonese chronicles were confessedly founded on an older Attḥakathā preserved in the monasteries of the island, and representing an unbroken line of local tradition.

My own argument therefore, so long as the question was only whether we could assign a pre-Christian date to the Pāli Buddhist canon, has always been this. We have the commentaries on the Pāli canon translated from Sinhalese into Pāli, or actually composed, it may be, by Buddhaghosa. Buddhaghosa confessedly consulted various

<sup>4</sup> The same account is given in the Dīpavamsa XX, 20, and in the Sārasaṅgraha, as quoted by Spence Hardy, Legends, p 192. As throwing light on the completeness of the Buddhist canon at the time of King Vattagâmani, it should be mentioned that, according to the commentary on the Mahāvamsa (Turnour, p 111), the sect of the Dhammarūpikas established itself at the Abhayavāhāra, which had been constructed by Vattagâmani, and that one of the grounds of their secession was their refusing to acknowledge the Parivāra (thus I read instead of Parivāna) as part of the Vinaya-piṭaka. According to the Dīpavamsa (VII, 42) Mahinda knew the Parivāra

MSS., and gives various readings, just as any modern scholar might do. This was in the beginning of the fifth century A.D., and there is nothing improbable, though I would say no more, in supposing that some of the MSS., consulted by Buddhaghosa, dated from the first century B.C., when Vattagâmani ordered the sacred canon to be reduced to writing.

There is one other event with reference to the existence of the sacred canon in Ceylon, recorded in the Mahāvamsa, between the time of Buddhaghosa and Vattagâmani, viz. the translation of the Suttas from Pâli into the language of Ceylon, during the reign of Buddhadâsa, 339-368 A.D. If MSS. of that ancient translation still existed, they would, no doubt, be very useful for determining the exact state of the Pâli originals at that time<sup>1</sup>. But even without them there seems no reason to doubt that Buddhaghosa had before him old MSS. of the Pâli canon, and that these were in the main the same as those written down at the time of Vattagâmani.

BUDDHAGHOSA'S AGE.

The whole of this argument, however, rested on the supposition that Buddhaghosa's date in the beginning of the fifth century A.D. was beyond the reach of reasonable doubt. 'His age,' I had ventured to say in the Preface to Buddhaghosa's Parables (1870), 'can be fixed with greater accuracy than most dates in the literary history of India.' But soon after, one of our most celebrated Pâli scholars, the great Russian traveller, Professor Joh Minayeff, expressed in the Mélanges Asiatiques (13/25 April, 1871) the gravest doubts as to Buddhaghosa's age, and thus threw the whole Buddhist chronology, so far as it had then been accepted by all, or nearly all scholars, back into chaos. He gave as his chief reason that Buddhaghosa was not, as I supposed, the contemporary of Mahânâma, the author of the Mahāvamsa, but of another Mahānāma, the king of Ceylon.

<sup>1</sup> A note is added, stating that several portions of the other two divisions also of the Piṭakattaya were translated into the Sinhalese language, and that these alone are consulted by the priests, who are unacquainted with Pâli. On the other hand, it is stated that the Sinhalese text of the Aṭṭhakathā exists no longer. See Spence Hardy, Legends, p. xxv, and p. 69.

Professor Minayeff is undoubtedly right in this, but I am not aware that I, or anybody else, had ever questioned so palpable a fact. There are two Mahānāmas; one, the king who reigned from 410–432 A D; the other, the supposed author of the Mahāvamsa, the uncle and protector of King Dhātusena, 459–477. ‘Dhātusena,’ I had written, ‘was the nephew of the historian Mahānāma, and owed the throne to the protection of his uncle. Dhātusena was in fact the restorer of a national dynasty, and after having defeated the foreign usurpers (the Damilo dynasty) “he restored the religion which had been set aside by the foreigners”’ (Mahāv. p. 256). Among his many pious acts it is particularly mentioned that he gave a thousand, and ordered the Dīpavamsa to be promulgated. As Mahānāma was the uncle of Dhātusena, who reigned from 459–477, he may be considered as a trustworthy witness with regard to events that occurred between 410 and 432. Now the literary activity of Buddhaghosa in Ceylon falls in that period<sup>1</sup>.

These facts being admitted, it is surely not too great a stretch of probability to suppose, as I did, that a man whose nephew was king in 459–477, might have been alive in 410–432, that is to say, might have been a contemporary of Buddhaghosa. I did not commit myself to any further theories. The question whether Mahānāma, the uncle of Dhātusena, was really the author of the Mahāvamsa, the question whether he wrote the second half of the 37th chapter of that work, or broke off his chronicle in the middle of that chapter, I did not discuss, having no new materials to bring forward beyond those on which Turnour and those who followed him had founded their conclusions, and which I had discussed in my History of Sanskrit Literature (1859), p. 267. All I said was, ‘It is difficult to determine whether the 38th as well as the (whole of the) 37th chapter came from the pen of Mahānāma, for the Mahāvamsa was afterwards continued by different writers, even to the middle of the last century. But, taking into account all the circumstances of the case, it is most probable that Mahânâma carried on the history to his own time, to the death of Dhātusena, 477 A. D.<sup>1</sup>

What I meant by 'all the circumstances of the case' might easily be understood by any one who had read Turnour's Preface to the Mahāvamsa. Turnour himself thought at first that Mahânâma's share in the Mahāvamsa ended with the year 301 A. D., and that the rest of the work, called the Sulu Wansé, was composed by subsequent writers.<sup>1</sup> Dharmakīrti is mentioned by name as having continued the work to the reign of Prākrama Bāhu (A. D. 1266). But Turnour afterwards changed his mind.<sup>2</sup> Considering that the account of Mahāsena's reign, the first of the Seven Kings, terminates in the middle of a chapter, at verse 48, while the whole chapter is called the Sattarāṅgiko, 'the chapter of the Seven Kings,' he naturally supposed that the whole of that chapter, extending to the end of the reign of his nephew Dhātusena, might be the work of Mahânâma, unless there were any strong proofs to the contrary. Such proofs, beyond the tradition of writers of the MSS., have not, as yet, been adduced.<sup>3</sup>

But even if it could be proved that Mahânâma's own pen did not go beyond the 48th verse of the 37th chapter, the historical trustworthiness of the concluding portion of that chapter, containing the account of Buddhaghosa's literary activity, nay, even of the 38th chapter, would be little affected thereby. We know that both the Mahāvamsa and the somewhat earlier Dīpavamsa were founded on the Sinhalese Atthakathās, the commentaries and chronicles preserved in the Mahāvihāra at Anurādhapura. We also know that that Vihāra was demolished by Mahāsena, and deserted by nearly all its inmates for the space of nine years (p. 235), and again for the space of nine months

(p. 237). We can well understand therefore why the older history, the Dīpavaṃsa, should end with the death of Mahāsena (died 302 A.D.), and why in the Mahāvamsa too there should have been a break at that date. But we must not forget that, during Mahānāma's life, the Mahāvihāra at Anurādhapura was restored, that some kind of chronicle, called the Dīpavaṃsa, whether it be a general name of any 'chronicle of the island,' or of our Dīpavaṃsa, or, it may be, even of our Mahāvamsa, was ordered to be published or promulgated (dīpetum) under Dhātusena, the nephew and protégé of Mahānāma. Therefore, even if we do not insist on the personal authorship of Mahānāma, we may certainly maintain that historical entries had been made in the chronicles of Anurādhapura during Dhātusena's reign, and probably under the personal auspices of Mahānāma, so that if we find afterwards, in the second half of the 37th chapter of his Mahāvamsa an account of events which had happened between the destruction of the Mahāvihāra and the reign of Dhātusena, and among them an account of so important an event as the arrival of Buddhaghosa from Magadha and his translation of the Sinhalese Atthakathā into the language of Magadha, we may well suppose that they rest on the authority of native chronicles, written not long after the events, and that therefore, 'under all the circumstances of the case,' the age of Buddhaghosa can be fixed with greater accuracy than most dates in the literary history of India.

There is one difficulty still remaining with regard to the date of the historian Mahānāma which might have perplexed Turnour's mind, and has certainly proved a stumbling-block to myself. Turnour thought that the author of the commentary on the Mahāvamsa, the Vamsatthappakāsinī, was the same as the author of the Mahāvamsa, viz. Mahānāma. The date of that commentary, however, as we know now, must be fixed much later, for it speaks of a schism which took place in the year 601 A.D., during the reign of Agrabōdhi (also called Dhātāpatisso). Turnour<sup>1</sup> looked upon that passage as a later interpolation, because he thought the evidence for the identity of the author and the commentator of the Mahāvamsa too strong to be set aside. He trusted chiefly to a passage in the commentary, and if that passage had been correctly rendered, the conclusion which he drew from it could hardly be resisted. We read in the Mahāvamsa (p. 254).

‘Certain members of the Moriyān dynasty, dreading the power of the (usurper) Subhō, the bālattho, had settled in various parts of the country, concealing themselves. Among them there was a certain landed proprietor Dhātusena, who had established himself at Nandivāpi. His son named Dhātā, who lived at the village Ambiliyāgo, had two sons, Dhātusena and Silatissabodhi, of unexceptional descent. Their mother’s brother (Mahānāma), devoted to the cause of religion, continued to reside (at Anurādhapura) in his sacerdotal character, at the edifice built by the minister Dīghasandana. The youth Dhātusena became a priest in his fraternity, and on a certain day, while he was chaunting at the foot of a tree, a shower of rain fell, and a Nāga, seeing him there, encircled him in his folds, and covered him and his book with his hood . . . Causing an image of Mahā Mahinda to be made, and conveying it to the edifice (Ambamālaka) in which the thera’s body had been burnt, in order that he might celebrate a great festival there, and that he might also promulgate the contents of the Dīpavamsa, distributing a thousand pieces, he caused it to be read aloud<sup>1</sup>.

If we compare with this extract from the Mahāvamsa a passage from the commentary as translated by Turnour, we can well understand how he arrived at the conclusion that it was written by the same person who wrote the Mahāvamsa.

Turnour translates (p. liv)

‘Upon these data by me, the thera, who had, with due

<sup>1</sup> Mr Turnour added a note in which he states that Dīpavamsa is here meant for Mahāvamsa, but whether brought down to this period, or only to the end of the reign of Mahāsena, to which alone the Tikā extends, there is no means of ascertaining (p. 257)

solemnity, been invested with the dignified title of Mahânâma, resident at the parivena founded by the minister Dîghasandana, endowed with the capacity requisite to record the narrative comprised in the Mahāvamsa, in due order, rejecting only the dialect in which the Singhalese Attakathâ are written, but retaining their import and following their arrangement, the history, entitled the Palapadôruvamsa (Padyapadânuvamsa), is compiled. As even in times when the despotism of the ruler of the land, and the horrors arising from the inclemencies of the seasons, and when panics of epidemics and other visitations prevailed, this work escaped all injury; and moreover, as it serves to perpetuate the fame of the Buddhas, their disciples, and the Paché Buddhas of old, it is also worthy of bearing the title of Vamsatthappakâsinî'

As the evidence of these two passages in support of the identity of the author and the commentator of the Mahāvamsa seemed to me very startling, I requested Mr. Rhys Davids to copy for me the passage of the commentary.

The passage runs as follows.

Yâ ettavatâ mahāvamsatthânusârakusalena Dighasandana-patînâ kârâpita-mahâparivenavâsinâ Mahânâmo ti garûhi gahitanâmadheyyena thereva pubba-Sîhala-bhâsitâya Sîhalattakathâya bhâsantaram eva vaggiya atthasâram eva gahetva tantinayânurûpena katassa imassa Padyapadânuvamsassa atthavannanâ mayâ tam eva sannissitena âraddhâ, padesissariya-dubbuttibhaya-rogabhayâdi-vividha-antarâya-yuttakâle pi anantarâyena nittihânam upagatâ, sâ buddha-buddhasâvaka-pakkabuddhâdînam porânânam kikkam pubbavamsatthappakâsanato ayam Vamsatthappakâsinî nâmâ ti dhâretabbâ. . . . Padyapadânuvamsavannanâ Vamsatthappakâsinî nittitâ.

Mr. Rhys Davids translates this.

'The commentary on this Padyapadânuvamsa, which (latter work) was made (in the same order and arrangement, and retaining the sense, but rejecting the dialect, of the Singhalese commentary formerly expressed in the Singhalese tongue) by the elder who bore the name of Mahânâma, which he had received from the venerable, who resided at the Mahāpari*vena* built by the minister Dīghasanda, and who was well able to conform to the sense of the Mahāvamsa—(this commentary) which was undertaken by me out of devotion to that (history), and which (though thus undertaken) at a time full of danger of various kinds—such as the danger from disease, and the danger from drought, and the danger from the government of the province—has been safely brought to a conclusion—this (commentary), since it makes known the meaning of the history of old, the mission of the ancients, of the Buddhas, of their disciples, and of the Paṭṭhaka Buddhas, should bear the name Vamsatthappakāsini

‘End of the Vamsatthappakāsini, the commentary on the Padyapadānuvamsa’

This shows clearly that Turnour made a mistake in translating this exceedingly involved, yet perfectly intelligible, passage, and that so far from proving that the author of the commentary was the same person as the author of the text<sup>1</sup>, it proves the very contrary. Nay, I feel bound to add, that we might now argue that as the commentator must have lived later than 601 A D, the fact that he too breaks off at verse 48 of chapter 37, seems to show that at his time also the Mahāvamsa did not extend as yet beyond that verse. But even then, the fact that with the restoration of the Mahāvihāra of Anurādhapura an interest in historical studies revived in Ceylon, would clearly show that we may trust the date of Buddhaghosa, as fixed by the second part of the 37th chapter of the Mahāvamsa, at all events till stronger evidence is brought forward against such a date.

Now I am not aware of any such evidence<sup>2</sup>. On the contrary, making allowance for a difference of some ten or twenty years, all the evidence which we can gain from other quarters tends to confirm the date of Buddha-

 assign to Buddhaghosa the date of 930–543 = 387 A D which can easily be reconciled with his accepted date. If he is called the contemporary of Siripāla, we ought to know who that Siripāla is.

ghosa<sup>1</sup> I therefore feel no hesitation in here reprinting that story, as we find it in the Mahāvamsa, not free from legendary ingredients, it is true, yet resting, I believe, on a sound foundation of historical fact

‘A Brāhman youth, born in the neighbourhood of the terrace of the great Bo-tree (in Magadha), accomplished in the “viggā” (knowledge) and “sippa” (art), who had achieved the knowledge of the three Vedas, and possessed great aptitude in attaining acquirements, indefatigable as a schismatic disputant, and himself a schismatic wanderer over Gambudīpa, established himself, in the character of a disputant, in a certain vihāra<sup>2</sup>, and was in the habit of rehearsing, by night and by day with clasped hands, a discourse which he had learned, perfect in all its component parts, and sustained throughout in the same lofty strain. A certain Mahāthera, Revata, becoming acquainted with him there, and (saying to himself), “This individual is a person of profound knowledge, it will be worthy (of me) to convert him,” enquired, “Who is this who is braying like an ass?” The Brāhman replied to him, “Thou canst define, then, the meaning conveyed in the bray of asses.” On the Thera rejoining, “I can define it,” he (the Brāhman) exhibited the extent of the knowledge he possessed. The Thera criticised each of his propositions, and pointed out in what respect they were fallacious. He who had been thus refuted, said, “Well, then, descend to thy own creed,” and he propounded to him a passage from the Abhidhamma (of the Piṭakattaya). He (the Brāhman) could not divine the signification of that passage, and enquired, “Whose manta is this?”—“It is Buddha’s manta.” On his exclaiming, “Impart it to me,” the Thera replied, “Enter the sacerdotal order.” He who was desirous of acquiring the knowledge of the Piṭakattaya, subsequently coming to this conviction, “This is the sole road” (to salvation), became a convert to that faith. As he was as profound in his eloquence (ghosa) as Buddha himself, they conferred on him the appellation of Buddhaghosa (the voice of Buddha), and throughout the world he became as renowned as Buddha. Having there (in Gāmbudīpa) composed an original work called Ñānodaya (Rise of Knowledge), he, at the same time, wrote the chapter called Atthasālinī, on the Dhammasaṅgani (one of the commentaries on the Abhidhamma).

‘Revata Thera then observing that he was desirous of undertaking the compilation of a general commentary on the Piṭakattaya, thus addressed him: “The text alone of the Piṭakattaya has been preserved in this land, the Atthakathā are not extant here, nor is there any version to be found of the schisms (vāda) complete. The Sinhalese Atthakathā are genuine. They were composed in the Sinhalese language by the inspired and profoundly wise Mahinda, who had previously consulted the discourses (kathāmagga) of Buddha, authenticated at the three convocations, and the dissertations and arguments of Sāriputta and others, and they are extant among the Sinhalese. Preparing for this, and studying the same, translate them according to the rules of the grammar of the Māgadhas. It will be an act conducive to the welfare of the whole world.”

‘Having been thus advised, this eminently wise personage rejoicing therein, departed from thence, and visited this island in the reign of this monarch (i.e. Mahānāma, 410–432). On reaching the Mahāvihāra (at Anurādhapura), he entered the Mahāpadhāna hall, the most splendid of the apartments in the vihāra, and listened to the Sinhalese Atthakathā, and the Theravāda, from the beginning to the end, propounded by the Thera Sanghapāla, and became thoroughly convinced that they conveyed the true meaning of the doctrines of the Lord of Dhamma. Thereupon paying reverential respect to the priesthood, he thus petitioned: “I am desirous of translating the Atthakathā, give me access to all your books.” The priesthood, for the purpose of testing his qualifications, gave only two gāthās, saying, “Hence prove thy qualification, having satisfied ourselves on this point, we will then let thee have all our books.” From these (taking these gāthā for his text), and consulting the Piṭakattaya together with the Attakathā, and condensing them into an abridged form, he composed the work called the Visuddhimagga. Thereupon, having assembled the priesthood, who had acquired a thorough knowledge of the doctrines of Buddha, at the Bo-tree, he commenced to read out the work he had composed. The devatās, in order that they might make his (Buddhaghosa's) gifts of wisdom celebrated among men, rendered that book invisible. He, however, for a second and third time re-composed it. When he was in the act of producing his book for the third time, for the purpose of propounding it, the devatās restored the other two copies also. The assembled priests then read out the three books simultaneously. In those three versions there was no variation whatever from the orthodox Theravādas in passages, in words, or in syllables. Thereupon, the priesthood rejoicing, again and again fervently shouted forth, saying, "Most assuredly this is Metteya (Buddha) himself," and made over to him the books in which the Piṭakattaya were recorded, together with the Attakathā. Taking up his residence in the secluded Ganthākara-vihāra (at Anurādhapura), he translated, according to the grammatical rules of the Māgadhās, which is the root of all languages, the whole of the Sinhalese Attakathā (into Pāli). This proved an achievement of the utmost consequence to all beings, whatever their language.

'All the Theras and Ākariyas held this compilation in the same estimation as the text (of the Piṭakattaya). Thereafter, the objects of his mission having been fulfilled, he returned to Gambudīpa, to worship at the Bo-tree (at Uruvelāya, or Uruvilvā, in Magadha).'

<sup>2</sup> The Burmese entertain the highest respect for Buddhaghosa. Bishop Bigandet, in his Life or Legend of Gaudama (Rangoon, 1866) writes 'It is perhaps as well to mention here an epoch which has been, at all times famous in the history of Buddhism in Burma. I allude to the voyage which a Religious of Thaton named Budhagosa, made to Ceylon, in the year of religion 943 = 400 A.D. The object of this voyage was to procure a copy of the scriptures. He succeeded in his undertaking. He made use of the Burmese or rather Talaing his literary labours written by a man, himself a priest, and who may well have known Buddhaghosa during his stay in Ceylon. It is true that the statement of his writing the same book three times over without a single various reading, partakes a little of the miraculous, but we find similar legends mixed up with accounts of translations of other sacred books, and we cannot contend that writers who believed in such legends are therefore altogether unworthy to be believed as historical witnesses.

But although the date which we can assign to Buddhaghosa's translation of the commentaries on the Pāli Tīpitaka proves the existence of that canon, not only for the beginning of the fifth century of our era, but likewise, though it may be, with less stringency, for the first century before our era, the time of Vaṭṭagāmanī, the question whether Buddhaghosa was merely a compiler and translator of old commentaries and more particularly of the commentaries brought to Ceylon by Mahinda (241 B C), or whether he added anything of his own<sup>1</sup>, requires to be more carefully examined. The Buddhists themselves have no difficulty on that point. They consider the Atthakathās or commentaries as old as the canon itself. To us, such a supposition seems improbable, yet it has never been proved to be impossible. The Mahāvamsa tells us that Mahinda, the son of Asoka, who had become a priest, learnt the whole of the Buddhist canon, as it then was, in three years (p 37)<sup>2</sup>, and that at the end of the Third Council he was despatched to Ceylon, in order to establish there the religion of Buddha (p 71). The king of Ceylon, Devānampīya Tissa, was converted, and Buddhism soon became the dominant characters in transcribing the manuscripts, which were written with the characters of Magatha. The Burmans lay much stress upon that voyage, and always carefully note down the year it took place. In fact, it is to Buddhaghosa that the people living on the shores of the Gulf of Martaban owe the possession of the Buddhist scriptures. From Thaton, the collection made by Buddhaghosa was transferred to Pagan; six hundred and fifty years after it had been imported from Ceylon. See ibid p 392.

<sup>2</sup> He learnt the five Nikāyas, and the seven sections (of the Abhidhamma), the two Vibhaṅgas of the Vīṃsaya, the Parivāra and the Khandhaka. See Dīpavamsa VII 42.

religion of the island. The Tīpitaka and the Atthakathā, such as they had been collected or settled at the Third Council in 242 B C, were brought to Ceylon by Mahinda, who promulgated them orally, the Tīpitaka in Pāli, the Atthakathā in Sinhalese, together with an additional Atthakathā of his own. It does not follow that Mahinda knew the whole of that enormous literature by heart, for, as he was supported by a number of priests, they may well have divided the different sections among them, following the example of Ānanda and Upālī at the First Council. The same applies to their disciples also. But the fact of their transmitting the sacred literature by oral tradition<sup>1</sup> was evidently quite familiar to the author of the Mahāvamsa. For when he comes to describe the reign of Vattagāmaṇi (88-76 B C) he simply says 'The profoundly wise priests had heretofore orally perpetuated the Pāli Pitakattaya and its Atthakathā (commentaries). At this period these priests, foreseeing the perdition of the people (from the perversions of the true doctrines), assembled, and in order that the religion might endure for ages, wrote the same in books'. No valid objection has yet been advanced to our accepting Buddhaghosa's Atthakathās as a translation and new redaction of the Atthakathās which were reduced to writing under Vattagāmaṇi<sup>2</sup>, and these again as a translation of the old Atthakathās brought to Ceylon by Mahinda<sup>3</sup>. There is prima facie evidence in favour of the truth of historical events vouched for by such works as the Dīpavamsa and the Mahāvamsa so far back at least as Mahinda, because we know that historical events were recorded in the monasteries of Ceylon long before Mahānāma's time. Beyond Mahinda we move in legendary history, and must be ready to surrender every name and every date as soon as rebutting evidence has been produced, but not till then.

I cannot, therefore, see any reason why we should not treat the verses of the Dhammapada, if not as the utterances of Buddha, at least as what were believed by the members of the Council under Asoka, in 242 B C, to have been the utterances of the founder of their religion, nor can I see that Professor Minayeff has shaken the date of Buddhaghosa and the general credibility of the Ceylonese tradition, that he was the translator and editor of commentaries which had existed in the island for many centuries, whether from the time of Vattagamani or from the time of Mahinda

DATE OF THE BUDDHIST CANON

We now return to the question of the date of the Buddhist canon, which, as yet, we have only traced back to the first century before Christ, when it was reduced to writing in Ceylon under King Vattagamani. The question is, how far beyond that date we may trace its existence in a collected form, or in the form of the three Pīṭakas or baskets. There may be, and we shall see that there is, some doubt as to the age of certain works, now incorporated in the Tipiṭaka. We are told, for instance, that some doubt attached to the canonicity of the Kariyā-piṭaka, the Apadāna, and the Buddhavaṃsa<sup>1</sup>, and there is another book of the Abhidhamma-piṭaka, the Kathāvatthu, which was reported to be the work of Tissa Moggaliputta, the president of the Third Council. Childers, s v, stated that it was composed by the apostle Moggaliputtatissa, and delivered by him at the Third Mahāsaṅgīti. The same scholar, however, withdrew this opinion on p 507 of his valuable Dictionary, where he says 'It is a source of great regret to me that in my article on Kathāvatthupakkaranam I inadvertently followed James D'Alwis in the stupendous blunder of his assertion that the Kathāvatthu was added by Moggaliputtatissa' at the Third Convocation. The Kathāvatthu is one of the Abhidhamma books, mentioned by Buddhaghosa as having been rehearsed at the First Convocation, immediately after Gotama's death, and the passage in Mahāvamsa upon which D'Alwis rests his assertion is as follows, Kathāvatthupakkaranam paravādappamaddanam abhāsi Tissatthero ka tasmim sangīti-maṇḍale, which simply means 'in that Convocation-assembly the Thera Tissa also recited (Buddha's) heresy-crushing Kathâvatthuppakarana'

This mistake, for I quite agree with Childers that it was a mistake, becomes however less stupendous than at first sight it would appear, when we read the account given in the Dīpavamsa. Here the impression is easily conveyed that Moggaliputta was the author of the Kathâvatthu, and that he recited it for the first time at the Third Council 'Wise Moggaliputta,' we read<sup>1</sup>, 'the destroyer of the schismatic doctrines, firmly established the Theravâda, and held the Third Council. Having destroyed the different (heretical) doctrines, and subdued many shameless people, and restored splendour to the (true) faith, he proclaimed (pakâsayi) (the treatise called) Kathâvatthu'. And again 'They all were sectarians<sup>2</sup>, opposed to the Theravâda, and in order to annihilate them and to make his own doctrine resplendent, the Thera set forth (desesi) the treatise belonging to the Abhidhamma, which is called Kathâvatthu'<sup>3</sup>.

At present, however, we are not concerned with these smaller questions. We treat the canon as a whole, divided into three parts, and containing the books which still exist in MSS, and we want to find out at what time such a collection was made. The following is a short abstract of the Tipiṭaka, chiefly taken from Childers' Pāli Dictionary

Taking this collection as a whole we may lay it down as self-evident that the canon, in its collected form, cannot be older than any of the events related therein

There are two important facts for determining the age of the Pāli canon, which, as Dr Oldenberg<sup>4</sup> has been the first to show, should take precedence of all other arguments, viz

1 That in the Tiṭṭhaka, as we now have it, no mention is made of the so-called Third Council, which took place at Pāṭaliputta, under King Asoka, about 242 B C

2 That in the Tiṭṭhaka, as we now have it, the First Council of Rāgagaha (477 B C) and the Second Council of Vesālī (377 B C) are both mentioned

From these two facts it may safely be concluded that the Buddhist canon, as handed down to us, was finally closed

after the Second and before, or possibly at, the Third Council. Nay, the fact that the description of the two Councils stands at the very end of the Kullavagga may be taken, as Dr Oldenberg remarks, as an indication that it was one of the latest literary contributions which obtained canonical authority, while the great bulk of the canon may probably claim a date anterior to the Second Council.

This fact, namely, that the collection of the canon, as a whole, must have preceded the Second Council rests on an argument which does great credit to the ingenuity of Dr Oldenberg. The Second Council was convoked to consider the ten deviations<sup>1</sup> from the strict discipline of the earliest times. That discipline had been laid down first in the Pāṭimokkha rules, then in the commentary now included in the Vibhanga, lastly in the Mahāvagga and Kullavagga. The rules as to what was allowed or forbidden to a Bhikkhu were most minute<sup>2</sup>, and they were so firmly established that no one could have ventured either to take away or to add anything to them as they stood in the sacred code. In that code itself a distinction is made between the offences which were from the first visited with punishment (pārāṇika and pāṭittiya) and those misdemeanours and crimes which were put down as punishable at a later time (dukkata and thullakkaya). With these classes the code was considered as closed, and if any doubt arose as to the criminality of certain acts, it could be settled at once by an appeal to the Vinaya-piṭaka. Now it so happens that, with one exception, the ten deviations that had to be considered at the Second Council, are not provided for in the Vinaya-piṭaka, and I quite agree with Dr Oldenberg's argument that, if they had been mentioned in the Vinaya-piṭaka, the Second Council would have been objectless. A mere appeal to chapter and verse in the existing Piṭaka would then have silenced all dissent. On the other side, if it had been possible to add anything to the canon, as it then existed, the ten, or nine, deviations might have been condemned by a few additional paragraphs of the canon, without convoking a new Council

I think we may be nearly certain, therefore, that we possess the principal portion of the Vinaya-piṭaka as it existed before the Council of Vesālī

So far I quite agree with Dr Oldenberg. But if he proceeds to argue<sup>1</sup> that certain portions of the canon must have been finally settled before even the First Council took place, or was believed to have taken place, I do not think his arguments conclusive. He contends that in the Parinibbāna-sutta, which tells of the last days of Buddha's life, of his death, the cremation of his body, and the distribution of his relics, and of Subhadda's revolt, it would have been impossible to leave out all mention of the First Council, if that Council had then been known. It is true, no doubt, that Subhadda's disloyalty was the chief cause of the First Council, but there was no necessity to mention that Council. On the contrary, it seems to me that the unity of the Parinibbāna-sutta would have been broken if, besides telling of the last days of Buddha, it had also given a full description of the Council. The very title, the Sutta of the Great Decease, would have become inappropriate, if so important a subject as the first Sangīti had been mixed up with it. However, how little we may trust to such general arguments, is best shown by the fact that in some very early Chinese renderings of the Hīnayāna text of the Mahāparinibbāna-sutta the story is actually carried on to the First Council, two (Nos 552 and 119) mentioning the rehearsal under Kāśyapa, while the third (No 118) simply states that the Tipiṭaka was then collected.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>2</sup> There are several Chinese translations of Sūtras on the subject of the Mahāparinirvāṇa. Three belong to the Mahāyāna school: 1. Mahāparinirvāṇa-sūtra translated by Dharmarakṣa about 414-423 A.D., afterwards revised 424-453 (Nos 113, 114). 2. Translation by Fa-hian and Buddhābhadda, about 415 A.D., less complete (No 120). 3. Translation (vaipulya) by Dharmarakṣa I i.e. Kū Fa-hu about 261-308 A.D. (No 116). Three belong to the Hīnayāna school: 1. Mahāparinirvāṇa-sūtra translated by Po fa tsu about 290-306 A.D. (No 552). 2. Translation under the Eastern Tsin dynasty 317-420 A.D. (No 119). 3. Translation by Fa-hian, about 415 A.D. (No 118).

We must be satisfied therefore, so far as I can see at present, with fixing the date, and the latest date, of a Buddhist canon at the time of the Second Council, 377 B C. That some works were added later, we know, that many of the treatises included in the canon existed before that Council, can hardly be doubted. The second chapter of the Dhammapada, for instance, is called the Appamâda-vagga, and if the Mahāvamsa (p 25) tells us that at the time when Asoka was converted by Nigrodha, that Buddhist priest explained to him the Appamâda-vagga, we can hardly doubt that there existed then a collection (vagga) of verses on Appamâda, such as we now possess in the Dhammapada and in the Samyutta-nikâya.<sup>1</sup>

With regard to the Vinaya, I should even feel inclined to admit, with Dr Oldenberg, that it must have existed in a more or less settled form before that time. What I doubt is whether such terms as Pīṭaka, basket, or Tīpīṭaka, the three baskets, i.e. the canon, existed at that early time. They have not been met with, as yet, in any of the canonical books, and if the Dīpavamsa (IV, 32) uses the word 'Tīpīṭaka,' when describing the First Council, this is due to its transferring new terms to older times. If Dr Oldenberg speaks of a Dvīpīṭaka<sup>2</sup> as the name of the canon before the third basket, that of the Abhidhamma, was admitted, this seems to me an impossible name, because at the time when the Abhidhamma was not yet recognised as a third part of the canon, the word pīṭaka had probably no existence as a technical term.<sup>3</sup>

We must always, I think, distinguish between the three portions of the canon, called the basket of the Suttas, the basket of Vinaya, and the basket of Abhidhamma, and the three subjects of Dhamma (sutta), Vinaya, and Abhidhamma, treated in these baskets. The subjects existed and were taught long before the three baskets were definitely arranged. Dhamma had originally a much wider meaning than Sutta-piṭaka. It often means the whole teaching of Buddha, and even when it refers more particularly to the Sutta-piṭaka, we know that the Dhamma there taught deals largely with Vinaya and Abhidhamma doctrines. Even the fact that at the First Council, according to the description given in the Kullavagga, the Vinaya and Dhamma only were rehearsed, though proving the absence at that time of the Abhidhamma, as a separate Piṭaka, by no means excludes the subject of the Abhidhamma having been taught under the head of Dhamma. In the Mahākaruṇāpundarika-sūtra the doctrine of Buddha is divided into Dharma and Vinaya, the Abhidharma is not mentioned. But the same text knows of all the twelve Dharmapraṣaṅganāni<sup>1</sup>, the 1 Sūtra, 2 Geyā, 3 Vyākaraṇa, 4 Gāthā, 5 Udāna, 6 Nidāna, 7 Avadāna, 8 Itivuttaka, 9 Gāthaka, 10 Vaipulya, 11 Adbhutadharma, 12 Upadeśa, some of these being decidedly metaphysical.

To my mind nothing shows so well the historical character both of the Kullavagga and of Buddhaghosa in the Introduction to his commentary on the Dīgha-nikāya, as that the former, in its account of the First Council, should know only of the Vinaya, as rehearsed by Upālī, and the Dhamma, as rehearsed by Ānanda, while the much later Buddhaghosa, in his account of the First Council<sup>2</sup>, divides the Dhamma into two parts, and states that the second part, the Abhidhamma, was rehearsed after the first part, the Dhamma. Between the time of the Kullavagga and the time of Buddhaghosa the Abhidhamma must have assumed its recognised position by the side of Vinaya and Sutta. It must be left to further researches to determine, if possible, the time when the name of piṭaka was first used, and when Tipiṭaka was accepted as the title of the whole canon

Whenever we see such traces of growth, we feel that we are on historical ground, and in that sense Dr Oldenberg's researches into the growth of the Vinaya, previous to the Second Council, deserve the highest credit. He shows, in opposition to other scholars, that the earliest elements of Vinaya must be looked for in the short Pātimokkha rules, which were afterwards supplemented by explanations, by glosses and commentaries, and in that form answered for some time every practical purpose. Then followed a new generation who, not being satisfied, as it would seem, with these brief rules and comments, wished to know the occasion on which these rules had been originally promulgated. What we now call the Vibhanga, i.e. the first and second divisions of the Vinaya-piṭaka, is a collection of the stories, illustrating the origin of each rule, of the rules themselves (the Pātimokkha), and of the glosses and comments on these rules.

The third and fourth books, the Mahāvagga and Kullavagga, are looked upon as possibly of a slightly later date. They treat, in a similar manner as the Vibhanga, on the rules not included in that collection, and give a general picture of the outward life of the monks. While the Vibhanga deals chiefly with the original so-called pārāgika, sanghādisesa, and pāṭittiya offences, the Khandhaka, i.e. the Mahāvagga and Kullavagga, treats of the so-called dukkata and thullakāya crimes. The arrangement is the same, story, rule, and comment succeeding each other in regular sequence.

If we follow the guidance of the Vinaya-piṭaka, we should be able to distinguish the following steps in the growth of Buddhism before the Second Council of Vesālī:

- 1 Teaching of Buddha and his disciples (543/477 A.D. Buddha's death)
- 2 Collection of Pātimokkha rules (first code)
- 3 Comment and glosses on these rules
- 4 Stories in illustration of these rules (vibhaṅga)
- 5 Mahāvagga and Kullavagga (Khandhaka)

6 Council of Vesālī for the repression of ten abuses
(443/377 A D)

7 Description of First and Second Councils in Kullavagga
The Kullavagga ascribes the settlement of the canon to the First Council, and does not even claim a revision of that canon for the Second Council. The Dīpavamsa claims a revision of the canon by the 700 Arhats for the Second Council.

CHRONOLOGY

In order to bring the Council of Vesālī in connection with the chronology of the world, we must follow the Buddhist historians for another century. One hundred and eighteen years after the Council of Vesālī they place the anointment of King Asoka, during whose reign a Third Council, under the presidency of Tissa Moggaliputta, took place at Pāṭaliputta, the new capital adopted by that king, instead of Rāḡagaha and Vesālī. This Council is chiefly known to us through the writings of the southern Buddhists (Dīpavamsa, Mahāvamsa, and Buddhaghosa), who belong to the school of Moggaliputta (Theravāda or Vibhaggavāda), which ruled supreme at Pāṭaliputta, while Upagupta, the chief authority of the northern Buddhists, is altogether ignored in the Pāli chronicles.

Now it is well known that Asoka was the grandson of Kandagutta, and Kandagutta the contemporary of Alexander the Great. Here we see land, and I may refer to my History of Sanskrit Literature, published in 1859, for the process by which the storm-tossed ship of Indian chronology has been landed in the harbour of real historical chronology. We are told by the monks of the Mahāvihāra in Ceylon that Asoka was crowned, according to their computation, 146 + 18 years before the accession of Dutthagāmaṇi, 161 B C, i.e. 325 B C, that between his coronation and his father's death four years had elapsed (329 B C), that his father Bindusāra had reigned twenty-eight years<sup>1</sup> (357-329 B C), and Bindusāra's father, Kan-dagutta, twenty-four years (381-357) As we know that Kandagutta, whom the Ceylonese place 381-357 B C, was king of India after Alexander's conquest, it follows that Ceylonese chronology is wrong by more than half a century For reasons stated in my History of Sanskrit Literature, I fix the exact fault in Ceylonese chronology as sixty-six years, assigning to Kandagutta the dates 315-291, instead of 381-357 This gives us 291-263 for Bindusâra, 259 for Asoka's abhisheka,  $259 + 118 = 377$  for the Council of Vesâlî, and  $377 + 100 = 477$  for Buddha's death, instead of 543 B C<sup>1</sup>

These dates are, of course, approximate only, and they depend on one or two points on which people may differ But, with that reservation, I see no ground whatever for modifying the chronological system which I put forward more than twenty years ago Professor Westergaard and Professor Kern, who have since suggested different dates for the death of Buddha, do not really differ from me in principle, but only in their choice of one or the other alternative, which I readily admit as possible, but not as more certain than my own Professor Westergaard<sup>2</sup>, for instance, fixes Buddha's death at 368 (370), instead of 477 This seems a wide difference, but it is so in appearance only

Following Justinus, who says that Sandrokyptos<sup>3</sup> had conquered the empire of India at the time when Seleucus laid the foundations of his own greatness, I had accepted 315<sup>4</sup>, half-way between the murder of Porus and the taking of Babylon by Seleucus, as the probable beginning

of Kandragupta's reign Westergaard prefers 320 as a more likely date for Kandragupta, and therefore places the death of the last Nanda and the beginning of Asoka's royal pretensions 268. Here there is a difference between him and me of five years, which depends chiefly on the view we take as to the time when Seleucus really laid what Justinus calls the foundation of his future greatness. Secondly, Westergaard actually adopts the idea, at which I only hinted as possible, that the southern Buddhists made two Asokas out of one, and two Councils out of one. Trusting in the tradition that 118 years elapsed between Buddha's death and the Council under Asoka (at Pāṭaliputra), and that the Council took place in the king's tenth year (as was the case with the imaginary Kālāsoka's Council), he gets  $268 - 10 = 258$  as the date of the Council, and 368 or 370 as the date of Buddha's death<sup>1</sup>.

The two points on which Westergaard differs from me, seem to me questions which should be kept before our mind in dealing with early Buddhist history, but which, for the present at least, admit of no definite solution.

The same remark seems to me to apply to the calculations of another eminent Sanskrit scholar, Professor Kern.<sup>2</sup> He lays great stress on the general untrustworthiness of Indian chronology, and I am the last to differ from him on that point. He then places the beginning of Kandragupta's reign in 322 B C. Allowing twenty-four years to him and twenty-eight to his son Bindusāra, he places the beginning of Asoka's reign in 270. Asoka's inscriptions would fall about 258. As Asoka reigned thirty-six or thirty-seven years, his death would fall in 234 or 233 B C. Like Westergaard, Professor Kern too eliminates Kālāsoka, as a kind of chronological Asoka, and the Council of Vaisālī, and therefore places Buddha's death, according to the northern tradition, 100 or 110 years before Dharmāsoka, i.e.  $270 + 100$  or  $+ 110 = 370$  or 380<sup>3</sup>, while, according to the southern

tradition, that 118 years elapsed between Asoka's accession and Buddha's death, the Ceylonese monks would seem originally to have retained  $270 + 118^1 = 388$  B C as Buddha's Nirvāṇa, a date which, as Professor Kern holds, happens to coincide with the date assigned to the death of Mahāvira, the founder of the Jain religion

Here we see again that the moot point is the beginning of Kandragupta's reign in accordance with the information supplied by Greek historians. Professor Kern places it in 322, Westergaard in 320, I myself in 315. That difference once granted, Dr Kern's reasoning is the same as my own. According to the traditions which we follow, Buddha's death took place 100, 110, 118, or 228 years before Asoka. Hence Professor Westergaard arrives at 368 or 370 B C. Professor Kern at 370 (380) or 388 B C, I myself at 477 B C. Every one of these dates is liable to certain objections, and if I prefer my own date, 477 B C, it is simply because it seems to me liable to neither more nor less reservations than those of Professor Westergaard and Professor Kern, and because, so long as we always remember the grounds of our differences, namely, the beginning of Kandragupta's reign, and the additional century, every one of these dates furnishes a good hypothesis to work on, until we can arrive at greater certainty in the ancient chronology of India.

To my mind all dates beyond Kandragupta are as yet purely tentative, resting far more on a chronological theory than on actual tradition, and though I do not doubt the historical character of the Council of Vaisālī, I look upon the date assigned to it, on the authority of the Dīpavamsa and Mahāvamsa, as, for the present, hypothetical only.

<sup>1</sup> When Professor Kern states that the Mahāvamsa (p. 22) places the Third Council 218 years after Buddha's death, this is not so. Asoka's abhisheka takes place in that year. The prophecy that a calamity would befall their religion 118 years after the Second Council (Mahāvamsa p. 28) does not refer to the Council, but to Kandāsoka's accession,  $477 - 218 = 259$  B C.

Though the preceding table, embodying in the main the results at which I arrived in my History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature, still represents what I hold to be true or most probable with respect to Indian chronology, previous to the beginning of our era, yet I suppose I may be expected to say here a few words on the two latest attempts to fix the date of Buddha's death, the one by Mr Rhys Davids in the Numismata Orientalia, Part VI, 1877, the other by Dr Buhler in the Indian Antiquary, 1877 and 1878<sup>1</sup> Mr Rhys Davids, to whom we owe so much for the elucidation of the history of Buddha's religion, accepts Westergaard's date for the beginning of Kandragupta's reign, 320 B C, instead of 322 (Kern), 315 (myself), and as he assigns (p 41) to Bindusâra 25 years instead of 28 (Mahāvamsa, p 21), he arrives at 268 as the year of Asoka's coronation<sup>2</sup> He admits that the argument derived from the mention of the five foreign kings in one of Asoka's inscriptions, dated the twelfth year of his reign, is too precarious to enable us to fix the date of Asoka's reign more definitely, and though, in a general way, that inscription confirms the date assigned by nearly all scholars to Asoka in the middle of the third century B C, yet there is nothing in it that Asoka might not have written in 247 quite as well as in 258-261 What chiefly distinguishes Mr Rhys Davids' chronology from that of his predecessors is the shortness of the period between Asoka's coronation and Buddha's death On the strength of an examination of the list of kings and the list of the so-called patriarchs, he reduces the traditional 218 years to 140 or 150, and thus arrives at 412 B C as the probable beginning of the Buddhist era

In this, however, I cannot follow him, but have to follow Dr Buhler As soon as I saw Dr Buhler's first essay on the Three New Edicts of Asoka, I naturally felt delighted at the unexpected confirmation which he furnished of the date which I had assigned to Buddha's death, 477 B C And though I am quite aware of the danger of unexpected confirmations of one's own views, yet, after carefully weighing the objections raised by Mr Rhys Davids and Professor Pischel against Dr Buhler's arguments, I cannot think that they have shaken Dr Buhler's position. I fully admit the difficulties in the phraseology of these inscriptions but I ask, Who could have written these inscriptions, if not Asoka? And how, if written by Asoka, can the date which they contain mean anything but 256 years after Buddha's Nirvāṇa? These points, however, have been argued in so masterly a manner by Dr Buhler in his 'Second Notice,' that I should be afraid of weakening his case by adding anything of my own, and must refer my readers to his 'Second Notice.' Allowing that latitude which, owing to the doubtful readings of MSS, and the constant neglect of odd months, we must allow in the interpretation of Buddhist chronology, Asoka is the only king we know of who could have spoken of a thirty-fourth year since the beginning of his reign and since his conversion to Buddhism. And if he calls that year, say the very last of his reign (222 B C), 256 after the departure of the Master, we have a right to say that as early as Asoka's time, Buddha was believed to have died about 477 B C. Whether the inscriptions have been accurately copied and rightly read is, however, a more serious question, and the doubts raised by Dr Oldenberg (Mahāvagga, p xxxviii) make a new collation of the originals absolutely indispensable, before we can definitely accept Dr Buhler's interpretation.

I cannot share Dr Buhler's opinion<sup>1</sup> as to the entire worthlessness of the Gaina chronology in confirming the date of Buddha's death. If the Svetāmbara Gainas place the death of Mahāvīra 470 before Vikramāditya, 1 e 56 B C + 470 = 526 B C, and the Dīgambaras 605, 1 e 78 A D deducted from 605 = 527 B C, this so far confirms Dr Buhler's and Dr Jacobi's brilliant discovery that Mahāvīra was the same as Nigāṇṭha Nātaputta, who died at Pāvā during Buddha's lifetime<sup>2</sup>. Most likely 527 is too early a date, while another tradition fixing Mahāvīra's death 155 years before Kandragupta<sup>1</sup>, 470 B C, is too late. Yet they both show that the distance between Asoka (259–222 B C), the grandson of Kandragupta (315–291 B C), and the contemporaries of Buddha was by the Gainas also believed to be one of two rather than one century.

When I saw that the date of Buddha's death, 477 B C, which in my History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature (1859) I had myself tried to support by such arguments as were then accessible, had received so powerful a support by the discovery of the inscriptions of Sahasrām, Rūpnāth, and Bairāt, due to General Cunningham, who had himself always been an advocate of the date 477 B C, and through their careful decipherment by Dr Buhler, I lost no time in testing that date once more by the Dīpavaṃsa, that Ceylonese chronicle having lately become accessible through Dr Oldenberg's edition and translation<sup>2</sup>. And here I am able to say that, before having read Dr Buhler's Second Notice, I arrived, though by a somewhat different way, at nearly the same conclusions as those so well worked out by Dr Buhler in his restoration of the Episcopal Succession (therāvali) of the Buddhists, and therefore feel convinced that, making all such allowances as the case requires, we know now as much of early Buddhist chronology as could be known at the time of Asoka's Council, 242 B C.

Taking the date of Buddha's death 477 B C for granted, I found that Upālī, who rehearsed the Vinaya at the First Council, 477 B C, had been in orders sixty years in the twenty-fourth year of Agātasatru, i e 461 B C, which was the sixteenth year A B. He must therefore<sup>3</sup> have been born in 541 B C, and he died 447 B C, i e thirty years A B, at the age of 94. This is said to have been the sixth year of Udāyī, and so it is,  $453 - 6 = 447$  B C.

In the year 461 B C Dāsaka received orders from Upālī, who was then 80 years of age, and when Dāsaka had been in orders forty-five years (Dīpavaṃsa IV, 41), he ordained Saunaka. This would give us  $461 - 45 = 416$  B C, while the tenth year of Nāgadāsa,  $429 - 10$ , would give us 419 A D. Later on the Dīpavaṃsa (V, 78) allows an interval of forty years between the ordinations of Dāsaka and Saunaka, which would bring the date of Saunaka's ordination to 421 B C, instead of 419 or 416 B C. Here there is a fault which must be noted. Dāsaka died  $461 - 64 = 397$  A D, which is called the eighth year of Śiśunāga, and so it is,  $405 - 8 = 397$  A D.

When Saunaka had been in orders forty years, i e  $416 - 40 = 376$ , Kālāsoka is said to have reigned a little over ten years, i e  $387 - 11 = 376$  A D, and in that year Saunaka ordained Siggava. He died  $416 - 66 = 350$  A D, which is called the sixth year of the Ten, while in reality it is the ninth,  $359 - 6 = 353$  A D. If, however, we take 419 as the year of Saunaka's ordination, his death would fall  $419 - 66 = 353$  B C.

Siggava, when he had been in orders sixty-four years, ordained Tishya Maudgaliputra. This date  $376 - 64 = 312$  B C is called more than two years after Kāndragupta's accession, and so it very nearly is,  $315 - 2 = 313$ .

Siggava died when he had been in orders seventy-six years, i e  $376 - 76 = 300$  A D. This year is called the fourteenth year of Kāndragupta, which it very nearly is,  $315 - 14 = 301$ .

When Tishya had been in orders sixty<sup>1</sup> years, he ordained Mahendra,  $312 - 60 = 252$  B C. This is called six years after Asoka's coronation,  $259 - 6 = 253$ , and so it very nearly is. He died  $312 - 80 = 232$  B C, which is called the twenty-sixth year of Asoka, and so it very nearly is.

BUDDHIST PATRIARCHS

	Birth	Ordination	Ordination of successor	Death	Age	Patriarchate
Upālī	(Generally 20 years before ordination)	527 (60)	461	447	94	30
Dāsaka		461	416 } 419 } 421 }	397	84	50
		45 } 42 } 40 }
Saunaka	"	416 } 419 } 421 } (40)	376 } 379 } 381 }	350 353	86	44 (47)
Siggava	"	376½ (64)	312½	300½	96	50 (52)
Tishya	"	312½ (60)	253	233	100	68
Mahendra	273	253	"	193	80	40
						282 (284)

If we test the dates of this table by the length of time assigned to each patriarchate, we find that Upālī ruled thirty years, from Buddha's death, 477 to 447, Dāsaka fifty years. To Saunaka forty-four years are assigned, instead of forty-seven, owing to a fault pointed out before, and to Siggava fifty-two years, or fifty-five<sup>1</sup> instead of fifty. Tishya's patriarchate is said to have lasted sixty-eight years, which agrees with previous statements.

Lastly, the years of the death of the six patriarchs, as fixed according to the reigns of the kings of Magadha, agree extremely well.

Upālī died in the sixth year of Udāyī, 1 c 453—6=447 B C

Dāsaka died in the eighth year of Sisunāga, 1 c 405—8=397 B C

Saunaka died in the sixth year of the Ten, 1 c 359—6=353 B C, showing again the difference of three years.

 $315-14=301$  B C

Tishya died in the twenty-sixth or twenty-seventh year of Asoka, 1 e  $259-27=233$  B C

This general and more than general agreement between dates taken from the history of the kings and the history of the patriarchs leaves on my mind a decided impression of a tradition which, though not strictly historical, in our sense of the word, represents at all events the result of such enquiries as could be made into the past ages of Buddhism at the time of Asoka. There are difficulties in that tradition which would certainly have been avoided, if the whole chronology had been simply made up but there is no doubt a certain method too perceptible throughout, which warns us that we must not mistake a smooth chronology for solid history

THE TITLE OF DHAMMAPADA

The title of Dhammapada has been interpreted in various ways. It is an ambiguous word, and has been accepted as such by the Buddhists themselves. Dhamma has many meanings. Under one aspect it means religion, particularly the religion taught by Buddha, the law which every Buddhist should accept and observe. Under another aspect dhamma is virtue, or the realisation of the law.

Pada also has many meanings. In the Abhidhāna-padīpikā it is explained by place, protection, Nirvāṇa, cause, word, thing, portion, foot, footstep.

Hence dhammapada may mean 'footstep of religion,' and thus the title was first rendered by Gogerly, only that he used the plural instead of the singular, and called it 'The Footsteps of Religion,' while Spence Hardy still more freely called it 'The Paths of Religion.' It may be quite true, as pointed out by Childers, that pada by itself never means path. But it means footstep, and the footstep towards a thing is much the same as what we call the path to a thing. Thus we read, verse 21, 'appamādo amatapadam,' earnestness is the step, 1 e the path that leads to immortality Again, 'pamādo maḥkuno padam can hardly mean anything but that thoughtlessness is the path of death, is the path that leads to death The commentator, too, rightly explains it here by amatasya adhigamupāya, the means of obtaining immortality, <sup>1</sup> i.e. Nirvāṇa, or simply by upayo, and even by maggo, the way If we compare verses 92 and 93 of our text, and verses 254 and 255, we see that pada is used synonymously with gati, going In the same manner dhammapada would mean the footstep or the footpath of virtue, <sup>1</sup> i.e. the path that leads to virtue, and supply a very appropriate title for a collection of moral precepts In verses 44 and 45 'path of virtue' seems to be the most appropriate meaning for dhammapada<sup>1</sup>, and it is hardly possible to assign any other meaning to it in the following verse (Kundāsutta, v 6)

Yo dhammapade sudesite
Magge gīvatī saññato satimā,
Anavagga-padāni sevamāno
Tatīyam bhikkhum āhu maggagīvim,

'He who lives restrained and attentive in the way that has been well pointed out, in the path of the law, cultivating blameless words, such a Bhikkhu they call a Maggagīvi (living in the way)'

I therefore think that 'Path of Virtue,' or 'Footstep of the Law,' was the idea most prominent in the mind of those who originally framed the title of this collection of verses It seems to me that Buddhaghosa also took the same view, for the verse which D'Alwis<sup>2</sup> quotes from the introduction of Buddhaghosa's commentary,—

Sampatta-saddhammapado satthā dhammapadam subham Desesi,

and which he translates, 'The Teacher who had reached the very depths (lit bottom) of Saddhamma, preached this holy Dhammapada,'—lends itself far better to another translation, viz 'The Teacher who had gained a firm

footing in the Good Law, showed (preached) the holy Path of the Law'

Gogerly, again, who may generally be taken as a faithful representative of the tradition of the Buddhists still preserved in Ceylon, translates the title by the 'Footsteps of Religion,' so that there can be little doubt that the priests of that island accept Dhammapada in the sense of 'Vestiges of Religion,' or, from a different point of view, 'The Path of Virtue'

M L Feer<sup>1</sup> takes a slightly different view and assigning to pada the meaning of foot or base, he translates Dhammapada by Loi fondamentale, or Base de la Religion

But it cannot be denied that the title of Dhammapada was very soon understood in a different sense also, namely, as 'Sentences of Religion' Pada means certainly a foot of a verse, a verse, or a line, and dhammapadam actually occurs in the sense of a 'religious sentence' Thus we read in verse 102, 'Though a man recite a hundred Gâthâs made up of senseless words, one dhammapadam, i e one single word or line of the law, is better, which if a man hears, he becomes quiet' But here we see at once the difficulty of translating the title of 'dhammapadam' by 'religious sentences' Dhammapadam means one law verse, or wise saw, not many Professor Fausboll, who in his excellent edition of the Dhammapada translated that title by 'a collection of verses on religion,' appeals to such passages as verses 44 and 102 in support of his interpretation But in verse 42 dhammapadam sudesitam, even if it does not mean the path of the law, could never mean 'versus legis bene enarratos,' but only versum legis bene enarratum, as Dr Fausboll himself renders ekam dhammapadam, in verse 102, by unus legis versus Buddhaghosa, too when he speaks of many law verses uses the plural, for instance<sup>2</sup>, 'Be it known that the Gâthâ consists of the Dhammapadâni, Theragâthâ, Therīgâthâ, and those unmixed (detached) Gâthâ not comprehended in any of the above-named Suttânta.'

The only way in which Dhammapada could be defended in the sense of 'Collection of Verses of the Law,' would be if we took it for an aggregate compound. But such aggregate compounds, in Sanskrit at least, are possible with numerals only, for instance, tribhuvanam, the three worlds, ĥaturyugam, the four ages<sup>1</sup>. It might therefore be possible in Pāli, too, to form such compounds as dasapadam, a collection of ten padas, a work consisting of ten padas, a decamerone, but it would in no wise follow that we could in that language attempt such a compound as Dhammapadam, in order to express a collection of law verses<sup>2</sup>. Mr Beal<sup>3</sup> informs us that the Chinese seem to have taken Dhammapada in the sense of 'stanzas of law,' 'law texts,' or 'scripture texts'.

It should be remembered, also, that the idea of representing life, and particularly the life<sup>4</sup> of the faithful, as a path of duty or virtue leading to deliverance, (in Sanskrit dharmapatha,) is very familiar to Buddhists. The four great truths of their religion<sup>4</sup> consist in the recognition of the following principles: 1 that there is suffering, 2 that there is a cause of that suffering, 3 that such cause can be removed, 4 that there is a way of deliverance, viz the doctrine of Buddha. This way is the ashṭāṅga-mārga, the eightfold way<sup>5</sup>, taught by Buddha, and leading to Nirvāṇa<sup>6</sup>. The faithful advances on that road, padāṭṭham,

<sup>6</sup> See Spence Hardy Manual p 496. Should not ĥaturvidha dharmapada, mentioned on p 497, be translated by the fourfold path of the Law? It can hardly be the fourfold word of the Law.

step by step, and it is therefore called paṭipadā, lit the step by step

If we make allowance for these ambiguities, inherent in the name of Dhammapada, we may well understand how the Buddhists themselves play with the word pada (see v 45) Thus we read in Mr Beal's translation of a Chinese version of the Prātimoksha <sup>1</sup>

'Let all those who desire such birth,
Who now are living in the world,
Guard and preserve these Precepts, as feet'

TRANSLATION

In translating the verses of the Dhammapada, I have followed the edition of the Pāli text, published in 1855 by Dr Fausboll, and I have derived great advantage from his Latin translation, his notes, and his copious extracts from Buddhaghosa's commentary I have also consulted translations, either of the whole of the Dhammapada, or of portions of it, by Burnouf, Gogerly <sup>2</sup>, Upham, Weber, and others Though it will be seen that in many places my translation differs from those of my predecessors, I can only claim for myself the name of a very humble gleaner in this field of Pāli literature The greatest credit is due to Dr Fausboll, whose edition princeps of the Dhammapada will mark for ever an important epoch in the history of Pāli scholarship, and though later critics have been able to point out some mistakes, both in his text and in his translation, the value of their labours is not to be compared with that of the work accomplished single-handed by that eminent Danish scholar

the Sacred Books of the East, I have been able to avail myself of 'Notes on Dhammapada, published by Childers in the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (May, 1871), and of valuable hints as to the meaning of certain words and verses scattered about in the Pâli Dictionary of that much regretted scholar, 1875 I have carefully weighed the remarks of Mr James D'Alwis in his 'Buddhist Nirvana, a review of Max Muller's Dhammapada' (Colombo, 1871), and accepted some of his suggestions Some very successful renderings of a number of verses by Mr Rhys Davids in his 'Buddhism,' and a French translation, too, of the Dhammapada, published by Fernand Hù<sup>1</sup>, have been consulted with advantage

It was hoped for a time that much assistance for a more accurate understanding of this work might be derived from a Chinese translation of the Dhammapada<sup>2</sup>, of which Mr S Beal published an English translation in 1878 But this hope has not been entirely fulfilled It was, no doubt, a discovery of great interest, when Mr Beal announced that the text of the Dhammapada was not restricted to the southern Buddhists only, but that similar collections existed in the north, and had been translated into Chinese It was equally important when Schiefner proved the existence of the same work in the sacred canon of the Tibetans But as yet neither a Chinese nor a Tibetan translation of the Pâli Dhammapada has been rendered accessible to us by translations of these translations into English or German, and what we have received instead, cannot make up for what we had hoped for

The state of the case is this There are, as Mr Beal informs us, four principal copies of what may be called Dhammapada in Chinese, the first dating from the Wu dynasty, about the beginning of the third century A D This translation, called Fa-kheu-king, is the work of a

Shaman Wei-ki-lan and others Its title means 'the Sutra of Law verses,' kheu being explained by gâthâ, a verse, a word which we shall meet with again in the Tibetan title, Gathasangraha. In the preface the Chinese translator states that the Shamans in after ages copied from the canonical scriptures various gathâs, some of four lines and some of six, and attached to each set of verses a title, according to the subject therein explained. This work of extracting and collecting is ascribed to Tsun-lc-Fa-*lc*ou, i.e. Ārya-Dharmatrata, the author of the Samyuktabhidharma-sāstra and other works, and the uncle of Vasumitra. If this Vasumitra was the patriarch who took a prominent part in the Council under Kanishka, Dharmatrata's collection would belong to the first century B.C., but this is, as yet, very doubtful.

In the preface to the Fa-kheu king we are told that the original, which consisted of 500 verses, was brought from India by Wei-ki-lan in 223 A.D., and that it was translated into Chinese with the help of another Indian called Tsang-sin. After the translation was finished, thirteen sections were added, making up the whole to 752 verses, 14,580 words, and 39 chapters<sup>1</sup>.

If the Chinese translation is compared with the Pāli text, it appears that the two agree from the 9th to the 35th chapter (with the exception of the 33rd), so far as their subjects are concerned, though the Chinese has in these chapters 79 verses more than the Pāli. But the Chinese translation has eight additional chapters in the beginning (viz. On Intemperance, Inciting to Wisdom, The Sravaka, Simple Faith, Observance of Duty, Reflection, Loving-kindness, Conversation), and four at the end (viz. Nirvāṇa, Birth and Death, Profit of Religion, and Good Fortune), and one between the 24th and 25th chapter of the Pāli text (viz. Advantageous Service), all of which are absent in our Pāli texts. This, the most ancient <sup>1</sup> Beal Dhammapada p. 30. The real number of verses however, is 760. In the Pāli text too there are five verses more than stated in the Index. See M. M., Buddhaghosha's Parables, p. ix, note, Beal loc. cit. p. 11, note.

Chinese translation of Dharmatrāta's work, has not been rendered into English by Mr Beal, but he assures us that it is a faithful reproduction of the original. The book which he has chosen for translation is the Fa-kheu-pi-u, i e parables connected with the Dhammapada, and translated into Chinese by two Shamans of the western Tsin dynasty (A D 265-313). These parables are meant to illustrate the teaching of the verses, like the parables of Buddhaghosa, but they are not the same parables, nor do they illustrate all the verses.

A third Chinese version is called Kuh-yan-king, i e the Sūtra of the Dawn (avadāna?), consisting of seven volumes. Its author was Dharmatrāta, its translator Ku-fo-nien (Buddhasmṛiti), about 410 A D. The MS of the work is said to have been brought from India by a Shaman Sangha-bhadanga of Kipin (Cabul), about 345 A D. It is a much more extensive work in 33 chapters, the last being, as in the Pāli text, on the Brāhmaṇa.

A fourth translation dates from the Sung dynasty (800 or 900 A D), and in it, too, the authorship of the text is ascribed to Ārya-Dharmatrāta.

A Tibetan translation of a Dhammapada was discovered by Schiefner in the 28th volume of the Sūtras, in the collection called Udānavarga. It contains 33 chapters, and more than 1000 verses, of which about one-fourth only can be traced in the Pāli text. The same collection is found also in the Tangur, vol 71 of the Sūtras, foll 1-53, followed by a commentary, the Udānavarga-vivarana by the Ākārya Pragñāvarman. Unfortunately Schiefner's intention of publishing a translation of it (Mélanges Asiatiques, tom viii p 560) has been frustrated by his death. All that he gives us in his last paper is the Tibetan text with translation of another shorter collection, the Gāthāsaṅgraha by Vasubandhu, equally published in the 72nd volume of the Sūtras in the Tangur, and accompanied by a commentary.

SPELLING OF BUDDHIST TERMS

I had on a former occasion<sup>1</sup> pleaded so strongly in favour of retaining, as much as possible, the original Sanskrit forms of Pāli Buddhist terms, that I feel bound to confess openly that I hold this opinion no longer, or, at all events, that I see it is hopeless to expect that Pāli scholars will accept my proposal. My arguments were these 'Most of the technical terms employed by Buddhist writers come from Sanskrit, and in the eyes of the philologist the various forms which they have assumed in Pāli, in Burmese, in Tibetan, in Chinese, in Mongolian, are only so many corruptions of the same original form. Everything, therefore, would seem to be in favour of retaining the Sanskrit forms throughout, and of writing, for instance, Nirvāṇa instead of the Pāli Nibbana, the Burmese Nīban or Nepbhān, the Siamese Niruphan, the Chinese Nīpan. The only hope, in fact, that writers on Buddhism will ever arrive at a uniform and generally intelligible phraseology seems to lie in their agreeing to use throughout the Sanskrit terms in their original form, instead of the various local disguises and disfigurements which they present in Ceylon, Burmah, Siam, Tibet, China, and Mongolia.'

I fully admitted that many Buddhist words have assumed such a strongly marked local or national character in the different countries and in the different languages in which the religion of Buddha has found a new home, that to translate them back into Sanskrit might seem as affected, nay, prove in certain cases as misleading, as if, in speaking of priests and kings, we were to speak of presbyters and cynings. The rule by which I meant mainly to be guided was to use the Sanskrit forms as much as possible, in fact, everywhere except where it seemed affected to do so. I therefore wrote Buddhaghosha instead of the Pāli Buddhaghosa, because the name of that famous theologian, 'the Voice of Buddha,' seemed to lose its significance if turned into Buddhaghosa But I was well aware what may be said on the other side The name of Buddhaghosa, 'Voice of Buddha,' was given him after he had been converted from Brahmanism to Buddhism, and it was given to him by people to whom the Pāli word ghosa conveyed the same meaning as ghosha does to us On the other hand, I retained the Pāli Dhammapada instead of Dharmapada, simply because, as the title of a Pāli book, it has become so familiar that to speak of it as Dharmapada seemed like speaking of another work We are accustomed to speak of Samanas instead of Sramanas, for even in the days of Alexander's conquest, the Sanskrit word Sramana had assumed the prakritized or vulgar form which we find in Pāli, and which alone could have been rendered by the later Greek writers (first by Alexander Polyhistor, 80-60 B C) by σάμναιος<sup>1</sup> As a Buddhist term, the Pāli form Samana has so entirely supplanted that of Sramana that, even in the Dhammapada (v 388), we find an etymology of Samana as derived from sam, 'to be quiet,' and not from śram, 'to toil' But if we speak of Samanas, we ought also to speak of Bāhmanas instead of Brāhmanas, for this word had been replaced by bāhmana at so early a time, that in the Dhammapada it is derived from a root vah, 'to remove, to separate, to cleanse'<sup>2</sup>

I still believe that it would be best if writers on Buddhist literature and religion were to adopt Sanskrit throughout as the lingua franca For an accurate understanding of the original meaning of most of the technical terms of Buddhism a knowledge of their Sanskrit form is indispensable; and nothing is lost, while much would be gained, if, even in the treating of southern Buddhism, we were to

Speak of the town of Srāvastī instead of Sāvattthī in Pāli, Sevet in Sinhalese, of Tīṣṭaka, 'the three baskets,' instead of Tīṣṭaka in Pāli, Tunpitaka in Sinhalese, of Arthakathā, 'commentary,' instead of Attakathā in Pāli, Atuwāva in Sinhalese, and therefore also of Dharmapada, 'the path of virtue,' instead of Dhammapada

But inclinations are stronger than arguments Pāli scholars prefer their Pāli terms, and I cannot blame them for it Mr D'Alwis (Buddhist Nirvāṇa, p 68) says 'It will be seen how very difficult it is to follow the rule rigidly We are, therefore, inclined to believe that in translating Pāli works, at least, much inconvenience may not be felt by the retention of the forms of the language in which the Buddhist doctrines were originally delivered' For the sake of uniformity, therefore, I have given up my former plan I use the Pāli forms when I quote from Pāli, but I still prefer the Sanskrit forms, not only when I quote from Sanskrit Buddhist books, but also when I have to speak of Buddhism in general I speak of Nirvāṇa, dharma, and bhīkṣu, rather than of Nibbāna, dhamma, and bhikkhu, when discussing the meaning of these words without special reference to southern Buddhism, but when treating of the literature and religion of the Theravāda school I must so far yield to the arguments of Pāli scholars as to admit that it is but fair to use their language when speaking of their opinions

CHAPTER I

THE TWIN-VERSES

1 All that we are is the result of what we have thought it is founded on our thoughts, it is made up of our thoughts If a man speaks or acts with an evil thought, pain follows him, as the wheel follows the foot of the ox that draws the carriage

1 Dharma, though clear in its meaning, is difficult to translate It has different meanings in different systems of philosophy, and its peculiar application in the phraseology of Buddhism has been fully elucidated by Burnouf, Introduction à l'Histoire du Bouddhisme, p 41 seq He writes 'Je traduis ordinairement ce terme par condition, d'autres fois par lois, mais aucune de ces traductions n'est parfaitement complète, il faut entendre par dharma ce qui fut qu'une chose est ce qu'elle est, ce qui constitue sa nature propre, comme l'a bien montré Lassen, à l'occasion de la célèbre formule, "Ye dharmâ hetuprabhavâ"' Etymologically the Latin for ma expresses the same general idea which was expressed by dar-ma See also Burnouf, Lotus de la bonne Loi, p 524 Fausbøll translates 'Nature a mente principium ducunt,' which shows that he rightly understood dharma in the Buddhist sense Gogerly (see Spence Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p 28) translates 'Mind precedes action,' which, if not wrong, is at all events wrongly expressed, while Professor Weber's rendering, 'Die Pflichten aus dem Herz folgern,' is quite inadmissible D'Alwis (Buddhist Nirwana, p 70 seq), following the commentary, proposes to give a more technical interpretation of this verse, viz 'Mind is the leader of all its faculties Mind is the chief (of all its faculties) The very mind is made up of those (faculties) If one speaks or acts with a polluted mind, then affliction follows him as the wheel follows the feet of the bearer (the bullock)' To me this technical acceptance

2 All that we are is the result of what we have thought it is founded on our thoughts, it is made up of our thoughts If a man speaks or acts with a pure thought, happiness follows him, like a shadow that never leaves him

3 'He abused me, he beat me, he defeated me, he robbed me,'—in those who harbour such thoughts hatred will never cease

4 'He abused me, he beat me, he defeated me, he robbed me,'—in those who do not harbour such thoughts hatred will cease seems not applicable here, where we have to deal with the simplest moral precepts, and not with psychological niceties of Buddhist philosophy It should be stated, however, that Childers, who first (s v dhamma) approved of my translation, seems afterwards to have changed his opinion On p 120 of his excellent Pāli Dictionary he said 'Three of the five khandhas, viz vedanā, saññā, and sankhāra, are collectively termed dhammā (plur), "mental faculties," and in the first verse of Dhammapada the commentator takes the word dhammā to mean those three faculties But this interpretation appears forced and unnatural, and I look upon Dr Max Muller's translation, "All that we are is the result of what we have thought," as the best possible rendering of the spirit of the phrase mano pub bangamā dhammā' But on p 577 the same scholar writes 'Of the four mental khandhas the superiority of viññāna is strongly asserted in the first verse of Dhammapada, 'The mental faculties (vedanā, saññā, and sankhāra) are dominated by Mind, they are governed by Mind, they are made up of Mind' That this is the true meaning of the passage I am now convinced, see D'Alwis, Nirwana, pp 70-75' I do not deny that this may have been the traditional interpretation, at all events since the days of Buddhaghosa, but the very legend quoted by Buddhaghosa in illustration of this verse shows that its simpler and purely moral interpretation was likewise supported by tradition, and I therefore adhere to my original translation

2 See Beal, Dhammapada, p 169

3 On akkokkhi, see Kakkīyana VI, 4, 17 D'Alwis, Pāli Grammar p 38 note 'When akkokkhi means "he abused," it is derived from krus, not from krudh' See Senart, Kakkīyana, l c

5 For hatred does not cease by hatred at any time hatred ceases by love, this is an old rule

6 The world does not know that we must all come to an end here,—but those who know it, their quarrels cease at once

7 He who lives looking for pleasures only, his senses uncontrolled, immoderate in his food, idle, and weak, Māra (the tempter) will certainly overthrow him, as the wind throws down a weak tree

8 He who lives without looking for pleasures, his senses well controlled, moderate in his food, faithful and strong, him Māra will certainly not overthrow, any more than the wind throws down a rocky mountain

9 He who wishes to put on the yellow dress without having cleansed himself from sin, who disregards also temperance and truth, is unworthy of the yellow dress

6 Pare is explained by 'fools,' but it has that meaning by implication only. It is oi πολλοι, cf Vinaya, ed Oldenberg, vol 1 p 5, l 4. Yamāmase, a 1 pers plur imp Ātm, but really a Le in Pāli. See Fausbøll, Five Gātakas, p 38

7 Māra must be taken in the Buddhist sense of 'tempter,' or 'evil spirit'. See Burnouf, Introduction, p 76. 'Māra est le démon de l'amour, du péché et de la mort, c'est le tentateur et l'ennemi de Buddha'. As to the definite meaning of vīrya, see Burnouf, Lotus, p 548

In the Buddhistical Sanskrit, kuṣṭha, 'idle,' is the exact counterpart of the Pāli kuṣṭa, see Burnouf, Lotus, p 548. On the change of Sanskrit d into Pāli t, see Kuhn, Beiträge zur Pali Grammatik, p 40, Weber, Ind Studien, XIII, p 135

9 The dark yellow dress, the Kāsāva or Kāshāya, is the distinctive garment of the Buddhist priests. See Vishṇu sūtra LXIII, 36. The play on the words anikkasāvo kāsāvam, or in Sanskrit anishkashāyaḥ kashāyam, cannot be rendered in English. Kashāya means 'impurity,' nish-kashāya, 'free from impurity,' anish-kashāya, 'not free from impurity,' while kashāya is the name of the yellowish

10 But he who has cleansed himself from sin, is well grounded in all virtues, and regards also temperance and truth, he is indeed worthy of the yellow dress.

11 They who imagine truth in untruth, and see untruth in truth, never arrive at truth, but follow vain desires

12 They who know truth in truth, and untruth in untruth, arrive at truth, and follow true desires

13 As rain breaks through an ill-thatched house, passion will break through an unreflecting mind

‘Know that this yellow coloured garment on a man who is not free from impurity, serves only for the purpose of cupidity, my opinion is, that it is meant to supply the means of living to those shavelings, who carry their virtue or the dharma like a flag’

(I read vṛtyartham, according to the Bombay edition, instead of kṛtārtham, the reading of the Calcutta edition)

On the exact colour of the dress, see Bishop Bigandet, The Life or Legend of Gaudama, the Budha of the Burmese, Rangoon, 1866, p 504 Cf Gāṭaka, vol II p 198

10 With regard to sīla, ‘virtue,’ see Burnouf, Lotus, p 547

11, 12 Sāra, which I have translated by ‘truth,’ has many meanings in Sanskrit It means the sap of a thing, then essence or reality, in a metaphysical sense, the highest reality, in a moral sense, truth It is impossible in a translation to do more than indicate the meaning of such words, and in order to understand them fully, we must know not only their definition, but their history See Beal, Dhammapada, p 64

15 Kṛhṣṭa is klīṣṭa, a participle of klīṣ It means literally, mourns in the next, he mourns in both. He mourns and suffers when he sees the evil of his own work.

16 The virtuous man delights in this world, and he delights in the next, he delights in both. He delights and rejoices, when he sees the purity of his own work.

17 The evil-doer suffers in this world, and he suffers in the next, he suffers in both. He suffers when he thinks of the evil he has done, he suffers more when going on the evil path.

18 The virtuous man is happy in this world, and he is happy in the next, he is happy in both. He is happy when he thinks of the good he has done, he is still more happy when going on the good path.

19 The thoughtless man, even if he can recite a large portion (of the law), but is not a doer of it, has no share in the priesthood, but is like a cowherd counting the cows of others.

what is spoilt. The abstract noun klesa, 'evil or sin,' is constantly employed in Buddhist works, see Burnouf, Lotus, p. 443.

16 Like klīṣhā in the preceding verse, visuddhi in the present has a technical meaning. One of Buddhaghosa's most famous works is called Visuddhi-magga. See Burnouf, Lotus, p. 844, Beal, Dhammapada, p. 67.

17, 18 'The evil path and the good path' are technical expressions for the descending and ascending scale of worlds through which all beings have to travel upward or downward, according to their deeds, see Bigandet, Life of Gaudama, p. 5, note 4, and p. 449, Burnouf, Introduction, p. 599, Lotus, p. 865, l. 7, l. 11. Fausboll translates 'heaven and hell,' which comes to the same, cf. vv. 126, 306.

19 In taking sahitam in the sense of samhitam or samhitā, I follow the commentator who says, Tīrīṭakassa Buddhavaṇanass' etam nāman, but I cannot find another passage where the Tīrīṭka, or any portion of it, is called Sahita. Samhita in vv. 100-102 has a different meaning. The fact that some followers of Buddha were

20 The follower of the law, even if he can recite only a small portion (of the law), but, having forsaken passion and hatred and foolishness, possesses true knowledge and serenity of mind, he, caring for nothing in this world or that to come, has indeed a share in the priesthood allowed to learn short portions only of the sacred writings by heart, and to repeat them, while others had to learn a larger collection, is shown by the story of Kakkhupāla, p 3, of Mahākāla, p 26, &c See Childers, s v sahita

20 Sāmañña, which I have rendered by 'priesthood,' expresses all that belongs to, or constitutes a real Samana or Sramana, this being the Buddhist name corresponding to the Brāhmaṇa, or priest, of the orthodox Hindus. Buddha himself is frequently called the Good Samana. Fausbøll takes the abstract word sāmañña as corresponding to the Sanskrit sāmānya, 'community,' but Weber has well shown that it ought to be taken as representing śrāmaṇya. He might have quoted the Sāmañña phala sutta, of which Burnouf has given such interesting details in his Lotus, p 449 seq. Fausbøll also, in his notes on v 332, rightly explains sāmaññatā by śrāmaṇyatā. See Childers, s v sāmañña

Anupādiyāno, which I have translated by 'caring for nothing,' has a technical meaning. It is the negative of the fourth Nidāna, the so-called Upādāna, which Koppen has well explained by Anhanglichkeit, 'taking to the world, loving the world'. Koppen, Die Religion des Buddha, p 610. Cf Suttampāta, v 470

CHAPTER II

ON EARNESTNESS<sup>1</sup>

21 Earnestness is the path of immortality (Nirvâna), thoughtlessness the path of death Those who are in earnest do not die, those who are thoughtless are as if dead already

22 Those who are advanced in earnestness, having understood this clearly, delight in earnestness, and rejoice in the knowledge of the Ariyas (the elect)

23 These wise people, meditative, steady, always possessed of strong powers, attain to Nirvâna, the highest happiness

21 Apramâda, which Fausboll translates by 'vigilantia,' Gogerly by 'religion,' Childers by 'diligence,' expresses literally the absence of that giddiness or thoughtlessness which characterizes the state of mind of worldly people It is the first entering into oneself, and hence all virtues are said to have their root in apramâda. (Ye keṁ kusalâ dhammâ sabbe te appamâdamûlakâ) I have translated it by 'earnestness,' sometimes by 'reflection' 'Immortality,' amrîtâ, is explained by Buddhaghosa as Nirvâna Amrîta is used, no doubt, as a synonym of Nirvâna, but this very fact shows how many different conceptions entered from the very first into the Nirvâna of the Buddhists See Childers, s v nibbâna, p 269

This verse, as recited to Asoka, occurs in the Dîpavamsa VI, 53, and in the Mahāvamsa, p 25 See also Sanatsugâtiya, translated by Telang, Sacred Books of the East, vol viii p 138

22 The Ariyas, the noble or elect, are those who have entered on the path that leads to Nirvâna, see Köppen, p 396 Their knowledge and general status is minutely described, see Köppen, p 436

23 Childers, s v nibbâna, thinks that nibbâna here and in many other places means Arhatship

24 If an earnest person has roused himself, if he is not forgetful, if his deeds are pure, if he acts with consideration, if he restrains himself, and lives according to law,—then his glory will increase

25 By rousing himself, by earnestness, by restraint and control, the wise man may make for himself an island which no flood can overwhelm

26 Fools follow after vanity, men of evil wisdom The wise man keeps earnestness as his best jewel

27 Follow not after vanity, nor after the enjoyment of love and lust! He who is earnest and meditative, obtains ample joy

28 When the learned man drives away vanity by earnestness, he, the wise, climbing the terraced heights of wisdom, looks down upon the fools, serene he looks upon the toiling crowd, as one that stands on a mountain looks down upon them that stand upon the plain

29 Earnest among the thoughtless, awake among the sleepers, the wise man advances like a racer, leaving behind the hack

30 By earnestness did Maghavan (Indra) rise to the lordship of the gods People praise earnestness, thoughtlessness is always blamed

31 A Bhikshu (mendicant) who delights in earnestness, who looks with fear on thoughtless-

THOUGHT

33 As a fletcher makes straight his arrow, a wise man makes straight his trembling and unsteady thought, which is difficult to guard, difficult to hold back,

34 As a fish taken from his watery home and thrown on the dry ground, our thought trembles all over in order to escape the dominion of Mâra (the tempter)

35 It is good to tame the mind, which is difficult to hold in and flighty, rushing wherever it listeth, a tamed mind brings happiness

36 Let the wise man guard his thoughts, for they are difficult to perceive, very artful, and they rush wherever they list thoughts well guarded bring happiness

37 Those who bridle their mind which travels far, moves about alone, is without a body, and hides in the chamber (of the heart), will be free from the bonds of Mâra (the tempter)

38 If a man's thoughts are unsteady, if he does not know the true law, if his peace of mind is troubled, his knowledge will never be perfect

39 If a man's thoughts are not dissipated, if

39 Fausbøll traces anavassuta, 'dissipated,' back to the Sanskrit

his mind is not perplexed, if he has ceased to think of good or evil, then there is no fear for him while he is watchful root śya, 'to become rigid,' but the participle of that root would be śīta, not śyuta. Professor Weber suggests that anavassuta stands for the Sanskrit anavasruta, which he translates unbefleckt, 'unspotted'. If avasruta were the right word, it might be taken in the sense of 'not fallen off, not fallen away,' but it could not mean 'unspotted,' cf. dhairyam no 'susruvat', 'our firmness ran away'. I have little doubt, however, that avassuta represents the Sanskrit avasruta, and is derived from the root sru, here used in its technical sense, peculiar to the Buddhist literature, and so well explained by Burnouf in his Appendix XIV (Lotus, p. 820). He shows that, according to Hemaṅdra and the Gīṇa alankāra, āśravakṣaya, Pāli āsavaśamkhaya is counted as the sixth abhigñā, wherever six of these intellectual powers are mentioned, instead of five. The Chinese translate the term in their own Chinese fashion by 'stultationis finis,' but Burnouf claims for it the definite sense of destruction of faults or vices. He quotes from the Lalitavistara (Adhyaya XXII, ed. Rājendra Lal Mitra, p. 448) the words uttered by Buddha when he arrived at his complete Buddhahood —

Sushkā āśravā na punaś śravanti,

'The vices are dried up, they will not flow again,'

and he shows that the Pāli Dictionary, the Abhidhānappadīpikā, explains āsava simply by kāma, 'love, pleasure of the senses'. In the Mahāparinibbāna-sutta, three classes of āsava are distinguished, the kāmāsavā, the bhavāsavā, and the aviggāsavā. See also Burnouf, Lotus, p. 665, Childers, s. v. asavo.

That sru means 'to run,' and is in fact a merely dialectic variety of śru, has been proved by Burnouf, while Boehtlingk thinks the substitution of s for ś is a mistake. Asrava therefore, or āśrava, meant originally 'the running out towards objects of the senses' (cf. sanga, ālāya, &c.), and had nothing to do with asrāva, 'a running, a sore,' Atharva-veda I, 2, 4. This conception of the original purport of ā + sru or av + sru is confirmed by a statement of Colebrooke's, who, when treating of the Gāṇas, writes (Miscellaneous Essays, I, 382) 'Āśrava is that which directs the embodied spirit (īśravatyiti puruṣam) towards external objects. It is the occupation and employment (vṛtti or pravṛtti) of the senses or organs on sensible objects. Through the means of the senses it

40 Knowing that this body is (fragile) like a jar, and making this thought firm like a fortress, one should attack Māra (the tempter) with the weapon of knowledge, one should watch him when conquered, and should never rest

41 Before long, alas! this body will lie on the earth, despised, without understanding, like a useless log

42 Whatever a hater may do to a hater, or affects the embodied spirit with the sentiment of tacton, colour, smell, and taste Or it is the association or connection of body with right and wrong deeds It comprises all the karmas, for they (āśravayanti) pervade, influence, and attend the doer, following him or attaching to him It is a misdirection (mithyā-pravṛtti) of the organs, for it is vain, a cause of disappointment, rendering the organs of sense and sensible objects subservient to fruition Samvara is that which stops (samvṛṇoti) the course of the foregoing, or closes up the door or passage to it, and consists in self-command or restraint of organs internal and external, embracing all means of self control and subjection of the senses, calming and subduing them'

For a full account of the āśravas, see Laṭṭa-vistara, ed Calc pp 445 and 552, where Kṣhīṇāśrava is given as a name of Buddha. Āśrāva occurs in Āpastamba's Dharma-sūtras II, 5, 9, where the commentator explains it by objects of the senses, by which the soul is made to run out It is better, however, to take āśrāva here, too, as the act of running out, the affections, appetites, passions

40 Anivesana has no doubt a technical meaning, and may signify, one who has left his house, his family and friends, to become a monk A monk shall not return to his home, but travel about, he shall be anivesana, 'homeless,' anāgāra, 'houseless' But I doubt whether this can be the meaning of anivesana here, as the sentence, let him be an anchorite, would come in too abruptly I translate it therefore in a more general sense, let him not return or turn away from the battle, let him watch Māra, even after he is vanquished, let him keep up a constant fight against the adversary, without being attached to anything or any body

CHAPTER IV

FLOWERS<sup>1</sup>

44 Who shall overcome this earth, and the world of Yama (the lord of the departed), and the world of the gods? Who shall find out the plainly shown path of virtue, as a clever man finds out the (right) flower?

45 The disciple will overcome the earth, and the world of Yama, and the world of the gods. The disciple will find out the plainly shown path of virtue, as a clever man finds out the (right) flower.

44, 45 If I differ from the translation of Fausboll and Weber, it is because the commentary takes the two verbs, vigessati and paṭessati, to mean in the end the same thing, i.e. sakkhi karissati, 'he will perceive'. I have not ventured to take vigessate for viga- missati, though it should be remembered that the overcoming of the earth and of the worlds below and above, as here alluded to, is meant to be achieved by means of knowledge. Paṭessati, 'he will gather' (cf vi 41, Indische Sprüche, 4560), means also, like 'to gather' in English, 'he will perceive or understand,' and the dhammapada, or 'path of virtue,' is distinctly explained by Buddha ghosa as consisting of the thirty seven states or stations which lead to Bodhi. (See Burnouf, Lotus, p 430, Hardy, Manual, p 497.) Dhammapada might, no doubt, mean also 'a law verse,' and sudesita, 'well taught,' and this double meaning may be intentional here as elsewhere. Buddha himself is called Mārga-darsaka and Mārga desika (cf Lal Vist p 551). There is a curious similarity between these verses and verses 6540-41, and 9939 of the Sānti-parva.

Pushpāñña vānvantam anyatragatamanasam,

Anavāpteshu kāmeshu mṛtyur abhyeti mānavam

'Death approaches man like one who is gathering flowers, and

46 He who knows that this body is like froth and has learnt that it is as unsubstantial as a mirage, will break the flower-pointed arrow of Mâra, and never see the king of death

47 Death carries off a man who is gathering flowers and whose mind is distracted, as a flood carries off a sleeping village

48 Death subdues a man who is gathering flowers, and whose mind is distracted, before he is satiated in his pleasures

49 As the bee collects nectar and departs without injuring the flower, or its colour or scent, so let a sage dwell in his village

50 Not the perversities of others, not their sins whose mind is turned elsewhere, before his desires have been fulfilled'

Suptam vyâghram mahaugho vâ mrityur âdâya gakkhati, Saññinvânakam evainam kâmanâm avitrptikam

'As a stream (carries off) a sleeping tiger, death carries off this man who is gathering flowers, and who is not satiated in his pleasures'

This last verse, particularly, seems to me clearly a translation from Pâli, and the kam of saññinvânakam looks as if put in metri causâ

46 The flower arrows of Mâra, the tempter, are borrowed from Kâma, the Hindu god of love. For a similar expression see Lalita vistara, ed. Calc p 40, l 20, mâyâmarîkîsadrisâ vidyutphe nopamâs kapalâh. It is on account of this parallel passage that I prefer to translate marîkî by 'mirage,' and not by 'sunbeam,' as Fausboll, or by 'solar atom,' as Weber proposes. The expression, 'he will never see the king of death,' is supposed to mean Arhatship by Childers, s v nibbâna, p 270

47 See Thiessen, Die Legende von Kîsâgotamî, p 9

48 Antaka, 'death,' is given as an explanation of Mâra in the Amarakosha and Abhidhânappadîpika (cf Fausboll, p 210)

49 See Beal, Catena, p 159, where vv 49 and 50 are ascribed to Wessabhu, 1 e Visvabhû. See also Der Weise und der Thor, p 134.

CHAPTER V

THE FOOL

60 Long is the night to him who is awake , long is a mile to him who is tired , long is life to the foolish who do not know the true law

61 If a traveller does not meet with one who is his better, or his equal, let him firmly keep to his solitary journey , there is no companionship with a fool

62 ' These sons belong to me, and this wealth belongs to me,' with such thoughts a fool is tormented He himself does not belong to himself, how much less sons and wealth ?

63 The fool who knows his foolishness, is wise at least so far But a fool who thinks himself wise, he is called a fool indeed

64 If a fool be associated with a wise man even all his life, he will perceive the truth as little as a spoon perceives the taste of soup

65 If an intelligent man be associated for one minute only with a wise man, he will soon perceive the truth, as the tongue perceives the taste of soup

66 Fools of little understanding have themselves

60 ' Life,' samsâra, is the constant revolution of birth and death which goes on for ever until the knowledge of the true law or the true doctrine of Buddha enables a man to free himself from samsâra, and to enter into Nirvâna See Buddhaghosha's Parables, Parable XIX, p 134

61 Cf Suttanipâta, v 46

63 Cf Beal, Dhammapada, p 77

65 Cf Beal, Dhammapada, p 78

for their greatest enemies, for they do evil deeds which must bear bitter fruits

67 That deed is not well done of which a man must repent, and the reward of which he receives crying and with a tearful face

68 No, that deed is well done of which a man does not repent, and the reward of which he receives gladly and cheerfully

69 As long as the evil deed done does not bear fruit, the fool thinks it is like honey but when it ripens, then the fool suffers grief

70 Let a fool month after month eat his food (like an ascetic) with the tip of a blade of Kusa grass, yet is he not worth the sixteenth particle of those who have well weighed the law

67 See Beal, I c p 78

69 Taken from the Samyutta nikāya, where, however, we read thānanhi instead of madhuvā, see Feer, Comptes Rendus, 1871, p 64

70 The commentator clearly takes sankhāta in the sense of sankhyāta, 'reckoned,' for he explains it by ñātadhammā, tuḥita-dhammā. The eating with the tip of Kusa grass has reference to the fastings performed by the Brahmans, but disapproved of, except as a moderate discipline, by the followers of Buddha. This verse seems to interrupt the continuity of the other verses which treat of the reward of evil deeds, or of the slow but sure ripening of every sinful act. See Childers, s v sankhāta

71 I am not at all certain of the simile, unless muḍḍatī, as applied to milk, can be used in the sense of changing or turning sour. In Manu IV, 172, where a similar sentence occurs, the commentators are equally doubtful. Nādharmas karito loke sadyaḥ phalaṭi gaur iva, 'for an evil act committed in the world does not bear fruit at once, like a cow,' or 'like the earth (in due season),' or 'like milk'. See Childers, Notes, p 6

72 And when the evil deed, after it has become known, brings sorrow to the fool, then it destroys his bright lot, nay, it cleaves his head

73 Let the fool wish for a false reputation, for precedence among the Bhikshus, for lordship in the convents, for worship among other people !

74 ' May both the layman and he who has left the world think that this is done by me , may they be subject to me in everything which is to be done or is not to be done,' thus is the mind of the fool, and his desire and pride increase

75 ' One is the road that leads to wealth, another the road that leads to Nirvâna,' if the Bhikshu, the disciple of Buddha, has learnt this, he will not yearn for honour, he will strive after separation from the world

72 I take ñattam for gñāpitam, the causative of gñātam, for which in Sanskrit, too, we have the form without i, gñāptam. This gñāptam, 'made known revealed,' stands in opposition to the āhanna, 'covered, hid,' of the preceding verse. Sukkamsa, which Fausboll explains by suklāmsa, has probably a more technical and special meaning. Childers traces ñattam to the Vedic gñātram, 'knowledge'. Fausboll refers to Gâtaka, vol 1 p 445, v 118.

75 Viveka, which in Sanskrit means chiefly understanding, has with the Buddhists the more technical meaning of separation, whether separation from the world and retirement to the solitude of the forest (kāya viveka), or separation from idle thoughts (kitta-vveka), or the highest separation and freedom (Nirvâna)

CHAPTER VI

THE WISE MAN (PANDITA)

76 If you see an intelligent man who tells you where true treasures are to be found, who shows what is to be avoided, and administers reproofs, follow that wise man, it will be better, not worse, for those who follow him

77 Let him admonish, let him teach, let him forbid what is improper<sup>1</sup>—he will be beloved of the good, by the bad he will be hated

78 Do not have evil-doers for friends, do not have low people for friends have virtuous people for friends, have for friends the best of men

79 He who drinks in the law lives happily with a serene mind the sage rejoices always in the law, as preached by the elect (Ariyas)

80 Well-makers lead the water (wherever they like), fletchers bend the arrow, carpenters bend a log of wood, wise people fashion themselves

78 It is hardly possible to take mitte kalyāṇe in the technical sense of kalyāṇa-mitra, 'ein geistlicher Rath,' a spiritual guide Burnouf (Introd p 284) shows that in the technical sense kalyāṇa-mitra was widely spread in the Buddhist world

79 Ariya, 'elect, venerable,' is explained by the commentator as referring to Buddha and other teachers

80 See verses 33 and 145, the latter being a mere repetition of our verse The netikās, to judge from the commentary and from the general purport of the verse, are not simply water-carriers, but builders of canals and aqueducts, who force the water to go where it would not go by itself The Chinese translator says, 'the pilot manages his ship' See Beal, l c p 79

81 As a solid rock is not shaken by the wind, wise people falter not amidst blame and praise

82 Wise people, after they have listened to the laws, become serene, like a deep, smooth, and still lake

83 Good people walk on whatever befall, the good do not prattle, longing for pleasure, whether touched by happiness or sorrow wise people never appear elated or depressed

84 If, whether for his own sake, or for the sake of others, a man wishes neither for a son, nor for wealth, nor for lordship, and if he does not wish for his own success by unfair means, then he is good, wise, and virtuous

85 Few are there among men who arrive at the other shore (become Arhats), the other people here run up and down the shore

83 The first line is very doubtful I have adopted, in my translation, a suggestion of Mr Childers, who writes, 'I think it will be necessary to take sabbattha in the sense of "everywhere," or "under every condition," paññakhandādibhedesu, sabbadhammesu, says Buddhaghosha I do not think we need assume that B means the word vigahanti to be a synonym of vaganti I would rather take the whole sentence together as a gloss upon the word vaganti —vaganāṇi arahattañānena apakaddhantā khandarāgam vigahanti, vaganti means that, ridding themselves of lust by the wisdom which Arhatship confers, they cast it away' I am inclined to think the line means 'the righteous walk on (unmoved) in all the conditions of life' Nindā, pasamsā, sukha, dukkha are four of the eight lokadhammas, or earthly conditions, the remaining lokadhammas are lābha, alābha, yasa, ayasa

In v 245, passatā, 'by a man who sees,' means 'by a man who sees clearly or truly' In the same manner vrag may mean, not simply 'to walk,' but 'to walk properly,' or may be used synonymously with pravrag

85 'The other shore' is meant for Nirvāṇa, 'this shore' for common life On reaching Nirvāṇa, the dominion of death is

86 But those who, when the law has been well preached to them, follow the law, will pass across the dominion of death, however difficult to overcome

87, 88 A wise man should leave the dark state (of ordinary life), and follow the bright state (of the Bhikkhu) After going from his home to a homeless state, he should in his retirement look for enjoyment where there seemed to be no enjoyment Leaving all pleasures behind, and calling nothing his own, the wise man should purge himself from all the troubles of the mind

overcome The commentator supplies tāntvā, 'having crossed,' in order to explain the accusative maññudheyyam Possibly pāram essanti should here be taken as one word, in the sense of overcoming

87, 88 Dark and bright are meant for bad and good, cf Suttanipāta, v 526, and Dhp v 167 Leaving one's home is the same as becoming a mendicant, without a home or family, an anāgāra, or anchorite A man in that state of viveka, or retirement (see v 75, note), sees, that where before there seemed to be no pleasure there real pleasure is to be found, or vice versâ A similar idea is expressed in verse 99 See Burnouf, Lotus, p 474, where he speaks of 'Le plaisir de la satisfaction, né de la distinction'

The five troubles or evils of the mind are passion, anger, ignorance, arrogance, pride, see Burnouf, Lotus, pp 360, 443 As to pariyodapeyya, see verse 183, and Lotus, pp 523, 528, as to akāṅkṣāno, see Mahābh XII, 6568, 1240

89 The elements of knowledge are the seven Sambodhvaṅgas, on which see Burnouf, Lotus, p 796 D'Alwis explains them as the thirty seven Bodhipakkhiya dhammā Khīṇāsavā, which I have translated by 'they whose frailties have been conquered,' may also be taken in a more metaphysical sense, as explained in the note to v 39 The same applies to the other terms occurring in this verse, such as āḍāna, anupādāya, &c Dr Fausbøll seems inclined to

ing to anything, rejoice in freedom from attachment, whose appetites have been conquered, and who are full of light, are free (even) in this world take âsava in this passage, and in the other passages where it occurs, as the Pali representative of âsraya. But âsraya, in Buddhist phraseology, means rather the five organs of sense with manas, 'the soul,' and these are kept distinct from the âsavâs, 'the inclinations, the appetites, passions, or vices'. The commentary on the Abhidharma, when speaking of the Yogâkâras, says, 'En réunissant ensemble les réceptacles (âsraya), les choses reçues (âsrîta) et les supports (alambana), qui sont chacun composés de six termes, on a dix huit termes qu'on appelle "Dhâtus" ou contenants. La collection des six réceptacles, ce sont les organes de la vue, de l'ouïe, de l'odorat, du goût, du toucher, et le "manas" (ou l'organe du cœur), qui est le dernier. La collection des six choses reçues, c'est la connaissance produite par la vue et par les autres sens jusqu'au "manas" inclusivement. La collection des six supports, ce sont la forme et les autres attributs sensibles jusqu'au "Dharma" (la loi ou l'être) inclusivement'. See Burnouf, Introduction, p. 449.

Parinibbata is again a technical term, the Sanskrit parinivṛta meaning 'freed from all worldly fetters,' like vimukta. See Burnouf, Introduction, p. 590. See Childers, s. v. nibbâna, p. 270, and Notes on Dhammapada, p. 3, and D. Alwis, Buddhist Nirvâna, p. 75.

CHAPTER VII

THE VENERABLE (ARHAT)

90 There is no suffering for him who has finished his journey, and abandoned grief, who has freed himself on all sides, and thrown off all fetters

91 They depart with their thoughts well-collected, they are not happy in their abode, like swans who have left their lake, they leave their house and home

92 Men who have no riches, who live on recognised food, who have perceived void and unconditioned freedom (Nirvâṇa), their path is difficult to understand, like that of birds in the air

91 Satīmanto, Sanskrit smṛtīmantaḥ, 'possessed of memory,' but here used in the technical sense of sati, the first of the Bodhyangas. See Burnouf, Introduction, p 797. Clough translates it by 'intense thought,' and this is the original meaning of smar, even in Sanskrit. See Lectures on the Science of Language, vol II p 332

Uvvyuṅgantu, which Buddhaghosa explains by 'they exert themselves,' seems to me to signify in this place 'they depart,' i.e. they leave their family, and embrace an ascetic life. See note to verse 235. See also Rhys Davids, Mahāparinibbāna-sutta, Sacred Books of the East, vol XI p 22

92 Suññato and animitto are adjectives belonging to vimokkho, one of the many names of Nirvâṇa, or, according to Childers, s v nibbāna, p 270, Arhatship, see Burnouf, Introduction, pp 442, 462, on sūnya. The Sanskrit expression sūnyatānirmitāprazāhitam occurs in L'enfant égaré, 5 a, l 4. Nimitta is cause in the most general sense, i.e. what causes existence. The commentator explains it chiefly in a moral sense. Rāgādinimittābhāvena animittam, tehi ka vimuttan ti animitto vimokkho, i.e. owing to the absence of passion and other causes, without causation, because freed from

93 He whose appetites are stilled, who is not absorbed in enjoyment, who has perceived void and unconditioned freedom (Nirvāṇa), his path is difficult to understand, like that of birds in the air

94 The gods even envy him whose senses, like horses well broken in by the driver, have been subdued, who is free from pride, and free from appetites

95 Such a one who does his duty is tolerant like the earth, like Indra's bolt, he is like a lake without mud, no new births are in store for him

96 His thought is quiet, quiet are his word and deed, when he has obtained freedom by true knowledge, when he has thus become a quiet man

these causes, therefore it is called freedom without causation See Childers, Pāli Dictionary, p 270, col 2, line 1

The simile is intended to compare the ways of those who have obtained spiritual freedom to the flight of birds, it being difficult to understand how the birds move on without putting their feet on anything This, at least, is the explanation of the commentator The same metaphor occurs Mahābh XII, 6763 Childers translates, 'leaving no more trace of existence than a bird in the air'

95 Without the hints given by the commentator, we should probably take the three similes of this verse in their natural sense, as illustrating the imperturbable state of an Arahanta, or venerable person The earth is always represented as an emblem of patience, the bolt of Indra, if taken in its technical sense, as the bolt of a gate, might likewise suggest the idea of firmness, while the lake is a constant representative of serenity and purity The commentator, however, suggests that what is meant is, that the earth, though flowers are cast on it, does not feel pleasure, nor the bolt of Indra displeasure, although less savoury things are thrown upon it, and that in like manner a wise person is indifferent to honour and dishonour

96 That this very natural threefold division, thought, word, and deed, the trividha dvāra or the three doors of the Buddhists (Hardy, Manual, p 494), was, not peculiar to the Buddhists or unknown to

97 The man who is free from credulity, but knows the uncreated, who has cut all ties, removed all temptations, renounced all desires, he is the greatest of men

the Brahmins, has been proved against Dr Weber by Professor Koppen in his 'Religion des Buddha,' I, p. 445. He particularly called attention to Manu XII, 4-8, and he might have added Mahābh XII, 4059, 6512, 6549, 6554, XIII, 5677, &c. Dr Weber has himself afterwards brought forward a passage from the Atharva veda, VI, 96, 3 (yak lakshushā manasā yak ka vākā upānma), which, however, has a different meaning. A better one was quoted by him from the Taitt Ar X, 1, 12 (yan me manasā, vākā, karmanā vā dushkrītam krītam). Similar expressions have been shown to exist in the Zend-avesta, and among the Manichæans (Lassen, Indische Alterthumskunde, III, p. 414, see also Boehtlingk's Dictionary, s v kâya, and Childers, s v kâyo). There was no ground, therefore, for supposing that this formula had found its way into the Christian liturgy from Persia, for, as Professor Cowell remarks (Journal of Philology, vol vii p. 215), Greek writers, such as Plato, employ very similar expressions, e g Protag p. 348, 30, πρὸς ἄνω ἔργον καὶ λόγον καὶ διανοήματα. In fact, the opposition between words and deeds occurs in almost every writer, from Homer downwards, and the further distinction between thoughts and words is clearly implied even in such expressions as, 'they say in their heart'. That the idea of sin committed by thought was not a new idea, even to the Jews, may be seen from Prov xxiv 9, 'the thought of foolishness is sin'. In the Âpastamba-sûtras, lately edited by Professor Bühler, we find the expression, atho yatnīka manasā vākā lakshushā vā sankalpajan dhyāyaty āhābhivipasyaty vā tathaiva tad bhavātityu-padisanti, 'they say that whatever a Brahman intending with his mind, voice, or eye, thinks, says, or looks, that will be'. This is clearly a very different division, and it is the same which is intended in the passage from the Atharva veda, quoted above. In the mischief done by the eye, we have, perhaps, the first indication of the evil eye (Mahābh XII, 3417. See Dhammapada, vv 231-234).

On the technical meaning of tādī, see Childers, s v D'Alwis (p. 78) has evidently received the right interpretation, but has not understood it. Mādrīsa also is used very much like tādīsa, and from it mārīso, a venerable person, in Sanskrit mārsha.

98 In a hamlet or in a forest, in the deep water or on the dry land, wherever venerable persons (Arahanta) dwell, that place is delightful

99 Forests are delightful , where the world finds no delight, there the passionless will find delight, for they look not for pleasures

CHAPTER VIII

THE THOUSANDS

100 Even though a speech be a thousand (of words), but made up of senseless words, one word of sense is better, which if a man hears, he becomes quiet

101 Even though a Gâthâ (poem) be a thousand (of words), but made up of senseless words, one word of a Gâthâ is better, which if a man hears he becomes quiet

102 Though a man recite a hundred Gâthâs made up of senseless words, one word of the law is better which if a man hears, he becomes quiet

103 If one man conquer in battle a thousand times thousand men, and if another conquer himself, he is the greatest of conquerors

104, 105 One's own self conquered is better than all other people, not even a god, a Gandharva, not Mâra with Brahman could change into defeat the

100 This Sahasravarga, or Chapter of the Thousands, is quoted by that name in the Mahāvastu (Minyeff, Mélanges Asiatiques, VI, p 583) Teshâm Bhagavân gâthânâm Dharmapadeshu sahasravargam bhâshati 'Sahasram api vakânâm anarthapadasamhitânâm, ekârthavatî sreyâ yâm srutvâ upasâmyati Sahasram api gâthânâm anarthapadasamhitânâm, ekârthavatî sreyâ yam srutvâ upasâmyati' (MS R A S Lond) Here the Pali text seems decidedly more original and perfect

104 Gitam, according to the commentator, stands for gito (lin gavipulliso, i e viparyâsa), see also Senart in Journal Asiatique, 1880, p 500

The Devas (gods), Gandharvas (furies), and other fanciful beings of the Brâhminic religion such as the Nagas, Sarpas, Garudas, &c.,

victory of a man who has vanquished himself, and always lives under restraint

106 If a man for a hundred years sacrifice month after month with a thousand, and if he but for one moment pay homage to a man whose soul is grounded (in true knowledge), better is that homage than a sacrifice for a hundred years

107 If a man for a hundred years worship Agni (fire) in the forest, and if he but for one moment pay homage to a man whose soul is grounded (in true knowledge), better is that homage than sacrifice for a hundred years

108 Whatever a man sacrifice in this world as an offering or as an oblation for a whole year in order to gain merit, the whole of it is not worth a quarter (a farthing), reverence shown to the righteous is better

were allowed to continue in the traditional language of the people who had embraced Buddhism. See the pertinent remarks of Burnouf, Introduction, pp 134 seq, 184. On Māra, the tempter, see v 7. Sâstram Aiyar, On the Gana Religion, p xx, says 'Moreover as it is declared in the Gana Vedas that all the gods worshipped by the various Hindu sects, viz Siva, Brahma, Vishnu, Ganapati, Subramanyan, and others, were devoted adherents of the above-mentioned Tirthankaras, the Ganas therefore do not consider them as unworthy of their worship, but as they are servants of Arugan, they consider them to be deities of their system, and accordingly perform certain pûgâs in honour of them, and worship them also'. The case is more doubtful with orthodox Buddhists 'Orthodox Buddhists,' as Mr D'Alwis writes (Attanagalu-vansa, p 55), 'do not consider the worship of the Devas as being sanctioned by him who disclaimed for himself and all the Devas any power over man's soul. Yet the Buddhists are everywhere idol-worshippers. Buddhism, however, acknowledges the existence of some of the Hindu deities, and from the various friendly offices which those Devas are said to have rendered to Gotama, Buddhists evince a respect for their idols'. See also Buddhaghosha's Parables, p 162

109 He who always greets and constantly reveres the aged, four things will increase to him, viz life, beauty, happiness, power

110 But he who lives a hundred years, vicious and unrestrained, a life of one day is better if a man is virtuous and reflecting

111 And he who lives a hundred years, ignorant and unrestrained, a life of one day is better if a man is wise and reflecting

112 And he who lives a hundred years, idle and weak, a life of one day is better if a man has attained firm strength

113 And he who lives a hundred years, not seeing beginning and end, a life of one day is better if a man sees beginning and end

114 And he who lives a hundred years, not seeing the immortal place, a life of one day is better if a man sees the immortal place

115 And he who lives a hundred years, not seeing the highest law, a life of one day is better if a man sees the highest law

109 Dr Fausbøll, in a most important note, called attention to the fact that the same verse, with slight variations, occurs in Manu. We there read, II, 121

Abhivâdanasîlasya nityam vṛddhopasevinah,

Katvâri sampravardhante âyur vidyâ yaso balam

Here the four things are, life, knowledge, glory, power

In the Âpastamba sūtras, I, 2, 5, 15, the reward promised for the same virtue is svargam âyus ka, 'heaven and long life'. It seems, therefore, as if the original idea of this verse came from the Brahmans, and was afterwards adopted by the Buddhists. How largely it spread is shown by Dr Fausbøll from the Asiatic Researches, XX, p 259, where the same verse of the Dhammapada is mentioned as being in use among the Buddhists of Siam.

112 On kusîto, see note to verse 7

CHAPTER IX

EVIL

116 If a man would hasten towards the good, he should keep his thought away from evil, if a man does what is good slothfully, his mind delights in evil

117 If a man commits a sin, let him not do it again, let him not delight in sin pain is the outcome of evil

118 If a man does what is good, let him do it again, let him delight in it happiness is the outcome of good

119 Even an evil-doer sees happiness as long as his evil deed has not ripened, but when his evil deed has ripened, then does the evil-doer see evil

120 Even a good man sees evil days, as long as his good deed has not ripened, but when his good deed has ripened, then does the good man see happy days

121 Let no man think lightly of evil, saying in his heart, It will not come nigh unto me Even by the falling of water-drops a water-pot is filled, the fool becomes full of evil, even if he gather it little by little

122 Let no man think lightly of good, saying in his heart, It will not come nigh unto me Even by the falling of water-drops a water-pot is filled, the wise man becomes full of good, even if he gather it little by little 123 Let a man avoid evil deeds, as a merchant, if he has few companions and carries much wealth, avoids a dangerous road , as a man who loves life avoids poison

124 He who has no wound on his hand, may touch poison with his hand , poison does not affect one who has no wound , nor is there evil for one who does not commit evil

125 If a man offend a harmless, pure, and innocent person, the evil falls back upon that fool, like light dust thrown up against the wind

126 Some people are born again , evil-doers go to hell , righteous people go to heaven , those who are free from all worldly desires attain Nirvâṇa

127 Not in the sky, not in the midst of the sea, not if we enter into the clefts of the mountains, is there known a spot in the whole world where a man might be freed from an evil deed

128 Not in the sky, not in the midst of the sea, not if we enter into the clefts of the mountains, is there known a spot in the whole world where death could not overcome (the mortal)

125 Cf Suttanipāṭa, v 661, Indische Sprüche, 1582, Kathāsaritsāgara, 49, 222

126 For a description of hell and its long, yet not endless sufferings, see Buddhaghosha's Parables, p 132 The pleasures of heaven, too, are frequently described in these Parables and elsewhere Buddha himself enjoyed these pleasures of heaven, before he was born for the last time It is probably when good and evil deeds are equally balanced, that men are born again as human beings, this, at least, is the opinion of the Gainas Cf Chintāmaṇi, ed H Bower, Introd p xv

127 Cf St Luke xii 2, 'For there is nothing covered that shall not be revealed,' and Psalms cxxxix 8-12

CHAPTER X

PUNISHMENT

129 All men tremble at punishment, all men fear death, remember that you are like unto them, and do not kill, nor cause slaughter

130 All men tremble at punishment, all men love life, remember that thou art like unto them, and do not kill, nor cause slaughter

131 He who seeking his own happiness punishes or kills beings who also long for happiness, will not find happiness after death

129 One feels tempted, no doubt, to take upama in the sense of 'the nearest (der Nächste), the neighbour,' and to translate, 'having made oneself one's neighbour,' i.e. loving one's neighbour as oneself. But as upamām, with a short a, is the correct accusative of upamā, we must translate, 'having made oneself the likeness, the image of others, having placed oneself in the place of others.' This is an expression which occurs frequently in Sanskrit, cf. Hitopadesa I, 11

Prāṇā yathātmano 'bhīṣhā bhūtānām apī te tathā,

Ātmapamyena bhūteshu dayām kurvaṁti sādhaḥ

'As life is dear to oneself, it is dear also to other living beings by comparing oneself with others, good people bestow pity on all beings'

See also Hit. I, 12, Rām V, 23, 5, ātmānam upamām kṛtvā sveshu dāreshu ramyatām, 'making oneself a likeness, i.e. putting oneself in the position of other people, it is right to love none but one's own wife'. Dr Fausboll has called attention to similar passages in the Mahābhārata, XIII, 5569 seq.

130 Cf. St. Luke vi 31

131 Dr Fausboll points out the striking similarity between this verse and two verses occurring in Manu and the Mahābhārata —

132 He who seeking his own happiness does not punish or kill beings who also long for happiness, will find happiness after death

133 Do not speak harshly to anybody, those who are spoken to will answer thee in the same way Angry speech is painful, blows for blows will touch thee

134 If, like a shattered metal plate (gong), thou utter not, then thou hast reached Nirvâṇa, contention is not known to thee

135 As a cowherd with his staff drives his cows into the stable, so do Age and Death drive the life of men

136 A fool does not know when he commits his evil deeds but the wicked man burns by his own deeds, as if burnt by fire

137 He who inflicts pain on innocent and harmless persons, will soon come to one of these ten states

Manu V, 45

Yo 'himsakâṇi bhûtâṇi hinasty âtnasukhe~~kk~~hayâ,

Mahâbhârata XIII, 5568,

Ahimsakâṇi bhûtâṇi dandena vinihanti yaḥ,

Âtmanaḥ sukham i~~kk~~han sa pretya naiva sukhî bhavet

If it were not for ahimsakâṇi, in which Manu and the Mahâbhârata agree, I should say that the verses in both were Sanskrit modifications of the Pâli original The verse in the Mahâbhârata presupposes the verse of the Dhammapada

133 See Mahâbhârata XII, 4056

134 See Childers, s v nibbâna, p 270, and s v kâṁso, D Alwis, Buddhist Nirvâṇa, p 35

136 The metaphor of 'burning' for 'suffering' is very common in Buddhist literature Everything burns, i e everything suffers, was one of the first experiences of Buddha himself See v 146

138 He will have cruel suffering, loss, injury of the body, heavy affliction, or loss of mind,

139 Or a misfortune coming from the king, or a fearful accusation, or loss of relations, or destruction of treasures,

140 Or lightning-fire will burn his houses, and when his body is destroyed, the fool will go to hell

141 Not nakedness, not platted hair, not dirt, not fasting, or lying on the earth, not rubbing with dust,

138 'Cruel suffering' is explained by sīsaroga, 'headache,' &c 'Loss' is taken for loss of money 'Injury of the body' is held to be the cutting off of the arm, and other limbs 'Heavy afflictions' are, again, various kinds of diseases

139 Upasarga means 'accident, misfortune' Dr Fausboll translates rāgato va upassaggam by 'fulgentis (lunae) defectionem,' Dr Weber by 'Bestrafung vom König,' Beal by 'some governmental difficulty' Abbhakkhānam, Sanskrit abhyākhyānam, is a heavy accusation for high treason, or similar offences Beal translates, 'some false accusation' The 'destruction of pleasures or treasures' is explained by gold being changed to coals (see Buddha ghosha's Parables, p 98, Thiessen, Kisāgotamī, p 6), pearls to cotton seed, corn to potsherds, and by men and cattle becoming blind, lame, &c

141 Cf Hibbert Lectures, p 355 Dr Fausboll has pointed out that the same or a very similar verse occurs in a legend taken from the Divyāvadāna, and translated by Burnouf (Introduction, p 313 seq) Burnouf translates the verse 'Ce n'est ni la coutume de marcher nu, ni les cheveux nattés, ni l'usage d'argile, ni le choix des diverses espèces d'aliments, ni l'habitude de coucher sur la terre nue, ni la poussière, ni la malpropreté, ni l'attention à fuir l'abri d'un toit, qui sont capables de dissiper le trouble dans lequel nous jettent les désirs non-satisfaits, mais qu'un homme, maître de ses sens, calme, recueilli, chaste, évitant de faire du mal à aucune créature, accomplisse la Loi, et il sera, quoique paré d'ornements, un Brâhmane, un Çramana, un Religieux' See also Suttampāta, v 248

Walking naked and the other things mentioned in our verse are outward signs of a saintly life, and these Buddha rejects because they do not calm the passions Nakedness he seems to have not sitting motionless, can purify a mortal who has not overcome desires

142 He who, though dressed in fine apparel, exercises tranquillity, is quiet, subdued, restrained, chaste, and has ceased to find fault with all other beings, he indeed is a Brâhmana, an ascetic (sramana), a friar (bhikshu)

143 Is there in this world any man so restrained by humility that he does not mind reproof, as a well-trained horse the whip?

144 Like a well-trained horse when touched by rejected on other grounds too, if we may judge from the Sumâ-gadhâ-avadâna 'A number of naked friars were assembled in the house of the daughter of Anâtha-pindika. She called her daughter in law, Sumâgadhâ, and said, "Go and see those highly respectable persons." Sumâgadhâ, expecting to see some of the saints, like Sâriputra, Maudgalyâyana, and others, ran out full of joy. But when she saw these friars with their hair like pigeon wings, covered by nothing but dirt, offensive, and looking like demons, she became sad. "Why are you sad?" said her mother-in-law. Sumâgadhâ replied, "O mother, if these are saints, what must sinners be like?"'

Burnouf (Introduction, p. 312) supposed that the Gainas only, and not the Buddhists, allowed nakedness. But the Gainas, too, do not allow it universally. They are divided into two parties, the Svetambaras and Digambaras. The Svetambaras, clad in white, are the followers of Parsvanâtha, and wear clothes. The Digambaras, i.e. sky-clad, disrobed, are followers of Mahâvîra, resident chiefly in Southern India. At present they, too, wear clothing, but not when eating. See Sâstram Aiyar, p. xxi.

The gañâ, or the hair platted and gathered up in a knot, was a sign of a Saiva ascetic. The sitting motionless is one of the postures assumed by ascetics. Clough explains ukkuśika as 'the act of sitting on the heels,' Wilson gives for utka/ukâsana, 'sitting on the hams.' See Fausbøll, note on verse 140.

142 As to danaamdhâna, see Mahâbh. XII, 6559, and Suttanipâta, v. 34.

143, 144 I am very doubtful as to the real meaning of these verses. If their object is to show how reproof or punishment the whip, be ye active and lively, and by faith, by virtue, by energy, by meditation, by discernment of the law you will overcome this great pain (of reproof), perfect in knowledge and in behaviour, and never forgetful

should be borne, my translation would be right, though alpabodhati in the sense of parvī facere is strange 145 The same as verse 80 According to Fausboll and Subhūti we ought to render the verses by, 'What man is there found on earth so restrained by shame that he never provokes reproof, as a good horse the whip?' See Childers, s v appabodhati

CHAPTER XI

OLD AGE

146 How is there laughter, how is there joy, as this world is always burning? Why do you not seek a light, ye who are surrounded by darkness?

147 Look at this dressed-up lump, covered with wounds, joined together, sickly, full of many thoughts, which has no strength, no hold!

148 This body is wasted, full of sickness, and frail, this heap of corruption breaks to pieces, life indeed ends in death

148 Dr Fausboll informs me that Childers proposed the emendation maranantam hi givitam. The following extract from a letter, addressed by Childers to Dr Fausboll, will be read with interest — ‘As regards Dhp v 148, I have no doubt whatever I quite agree with you that the idea (mors est vita ejus) is a profound and noble one, but the question is, Is the idea there? I think not. Maranam tamhi givitam is not Pāli, I mean not a Pāli construction, and years ago even it grated on my ear as a harsh phrase. The reading of your MSS of the texts is nothing, your MSS of Dhammapada are very bad ones, and it is merely the vicious Sinhalese spelling of bad MSS, like kammantam for kammantam. But the comment sets the question at rest at once, for it explains maranantam by maranapariyosānam, which is exactly the same. I see there is one serious difficulty left, that all your MSS seem to have tamhi, and not am hi, but are you sure it is so? There was a Dhammapada in the India Office Library, and I had a great hunt for it a few days ago, but to my deep disappointment it is missing. I do not agree with you that the sentence “All Life is bounded by Death,” is trivial. It is a truism, but half the noblest passages in poetry are truisms, and unless I greatly mistake, this very passage will be found in many other literatures.’

Dr Fausboll adds —

‘I have still the same doubt as before, because of all my 149 Those white bones, like gourds thrown away in the autumn, what pleasure is there in looking at them ?

150 After a stronghold has been made of the bones, it is covered with flesh and blood, and there dwell in it old age and death, pride and deceit

151 The brilliant chariots of kings are destroyed, the body also approaches destruction, but the virtue of good people never approaches destruction,—thus do the good say to the good

152 A man who has learnt little, grows old like an ox, his flesh grows, but his knowledge does not grow

153, 154 Looking for the maker of this tabernacle, I shall have to run through a course of many births, so long as I do not find (him), and painful is birth again and again But now, maker of the tabernacle, thou hast been seen, thou shalt not make up

MSS reading maianam tamhi I do not know the readings of the London MSS The explanation of the commentary does not settle the question, as it may as well be considered an explanation of my reading as of the reading which Childers proposed —V FAUSBÖLL

149 In the Rudrāyanāvadāna of the Divyāvadāna this verse appears as,

Yānīmāny apariddhāni vikshiptāni diso disaḥ,

See Schiefner, Mél Asiat VIII, p 589, Gâtaka, vol 1 p 322

150 The expression mamsalohitalepanam is curiously like the expression used in Manu VI, 76, mâmsasomitalepanam, and in several passages of the Mahābhārata, XII, 12462, 12053, as pointed out by Dr Fausböll

153, 154 These two verses are famous among Buddhists, for they are the words which the founder of Buddhism is supposed to have uttered at the moment he attained to Buddhahood (See Spence Hardy, Manual, p 180) According to the Lalitavistara, however, the words uttered on that solemn occasion were those this tabernacle again All thy rafters are broken, thy ridge-pole is sundered, the mind, approaching the Eternal (visankhâra, nirvâna), has attained to the extinction of all desires quoted in the note to verse 39 In the commentary on the Brahmagâla this verse is called the first speech of Buddha, his last speech being the words in the Mahâparinibbâna sutta, 'Life is subject to age, strive in earnest' The words used in the Mahâparinibbâna sutta, Chap IV, 2, Katunnam dhammânam ananubodhâ appaivedhâ evam idam digham addhânam sandhâvitam samsâritam mamañ k' eva tumhâkañ ka, answer to the anticipation expressed in our verse

The exact rendering of this verse has been much discussed, chiefly by Mr D'Alwis in the Attanugaluvasa, p cxxviii, and again in his Buddhist Nirvâna, p 78, also by Childers, Notes on Dhammapada p 4, and in his Dictionary Gogerly translated 'Through various transmigrations I must travel, if I do not discover the builder whom I seek' Spence Hardy 'Through many different births I have run (to me not having found), seeking the architect of the desire resembling house' Fausboll 'Multiplices generationis revolutiones percurreram, non inveniens, domus (corporis) fabricatorem quaerens' And again (p 322) 'Multarum generationum revolutio mihi subeunda esset, nisi invenissem domus fabricatorem' Childers 'I have run through the revolution of countless births, seeking the architect of this dwelling and finding him not' D'Alwis 'Through transmigrations of numerous births have I run, not discovering, (though) seeking the house builder' All depends on how we take sandhavissam, which Fausboll takes as a conditional, Childers, following Trenckner, as an aorist, because the sense imperatively requires an aorist In either case, the dropping of the augment and the doubling of the s are, however, irregular Sandhavissam is the regular form of the future, and as such I translate it, qualifying, however, the future, by the participle present anibbisan, i e not finding, and taking it in the sense of, if or so long as I do not find the true cause of existence I had formerly translated anibbisan, as not resting (anurisan), but the commentator seems to authorise the meaning of not finding (avindanto, alabhanto), and in that case all the material difficulties of the verse seem to me to disappear

'The maker of the tabernacle' is explained as a poetical expression for the cause of new births, at least according to the views of

156 Men who have not observed proper discipline, and have not gained treasure in their youth, lie like broken bows, sighing after the past

Buddha's followers, whatever his own views may have been Buddha had conquered Māra, the representative of worldly temptations, the father of worldly desires, and as desires (tamhā) are, by means of upādāna and bhava, the cause of gāti, or 'birth,' the destruction of desires and the conquest of Māra are nearly the same thing, though expressed differently in the philosophical and legendary language of the Buddhists. Tamhā, 'thirst' or 'desire,' is mentioned as serving in the army of Māra (Lotus, p 443)

CHAPTER XII

SELF

157 If a man hold himself dear, let him watch himself carefully, during one at least out of the three watches a wise man should be watchful

158 Let each man direct himself first to what is proper, then let him teach others, thus a wise man will not suffer

159 If a man make himself as he teaches others to be, then, being himself well subdued, he may subdue (others), one's own self is indeed difficult to subdue

160 Self is the lord of self, who else could be the lord? With self well subdued, a man finds a lord such as few can find

161 The evil done by oneself, self-begotten, self-bred, crushes the foolish, as a diamond breaks a precious stone

162 He whose wickedness is very great brings himself down to that state where his enemy wishes him to be, as a creeper does with the tree which it surrounds

163 Bad deeds, and deeds hurtful to ourselves, are easy to do, what is beneficial and good, that is very difficult to do

157 The three watches of the night are meant for the three stages of life Cf St Mark xiii 37, 'And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch'

158 Cf Gâtaka, vol II p 441

161 The Chinese translation renders vagaram by 'steel drill'

164 The foolish man who scorns the rule of the venerable (Arahat), of the elect (Ariya), of the virtuous, and follows false doctrine, he bears fruit to his own destruction, like the fruits of the Kattaka reed

165 By oneself the evil is done, by oneself one suffers, by oneself evil is left undone, by oneself one is purified. Purity and impurity belong to oneself, no one can purify another

166 Let no one forget his own duty for the sake of another's, however great, let a man, after he has discerned his own duty, be always attentive to his duty

164 The reed either dies after it has borne fruit, or is cut down for the sake of its fruit

Ditthi, literally 'view,' is used even by itself, like the Greek 'haeresis,' in the sense of heresy (see Burnouf, Lotus, p 444). In other places a distinction is made between mikkhâdittthi (vv 167, 316) and sammâdittthi (v 319). If arahatam ariyânam are used in their technical sense, we should translate 'the reverend Arhats,'—Arhat being the highest degree of the four orders of Ariyas, viz Srotaâpanna, Śakadâgâmin, Anâgâmin, and Arhat. See note to verse 178

166 Attha, lit 'object,' must here be taken in a moral sense, as 'duty' rather than as 'advantage'. Childers rendered it by 'spiritual good'. The story which Buddhaghosa tells of the Thera Attadattha gives a clue to the origin of some of his parables, which seem to have been invented to suit the text of the Dhammapada rather than vice versâ. A similar case occurs in the commentary to verse 227

CHAPTER XIII

THE WORLD

167 Do not follow the evil law! Do not live on in thoughtlessness! Do not follow false doctrine!
Be not a friend of the world

168 Rouse thyself! do not be idle! Follow the law of virtue! The virtuous rests in bliss in this world and in the next

169 Follow the law of virtue, do not follow that of sin The virtuous rests in bliss in this world and in the next

170 Look upon the world as a bubble, look upon it as a mirage the king of death does not see him who thus looks down upon the world

171 Come, look at this glittering world, like unto a royal chariot, the foolish are immersed in it, but the wise do not touch it

172 He who formerly was reckless and afterwards became sober, brightens up this world, like the moon when freed from clouds

173 He whose evil deeds are covered by good deeds, brightens up this world, like the moon when freed from clouds

174 This world is dark, few only can see here, a few only go to heaven, like birds escaped from the net

175 The swans go on the path of the sun, they go through the ether by means of their miraculous

168, 169 See Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p 65

170 See Suttanipāta, v 1118

175 Hamsa may be meant for the bird, whether flamingo, or swan, or ibis (see Hardy, Manual, p 17), but it may also, I believe, power, the wise are led out of this world, when they have conquered Māra and his train

176 If a man has transgressed one law, and speaks lies, and scoffs at another world, there is no evil he will not do

177 The uncharitable do not go to the world of the gods, fools only do not praise liberality, a wise man rejoices in liberality, and through it becomes blessed in the other world

178 Better than sovereignty over the earth, better than going to heaven, better than lordship over all worlds, is the reward of the first step in holiness be taken in the sense of saint As to iddhi, 'magical power,' i e ṛiddhi, see Burnouf, Lotus, p 310, Spence Hardy, Manual, pp 498, 504, Legends, pp 55, 177, and note to verse 254

178 Sotāpatti, the technical term for the first step in the path that leads to Nirvāṇa There are four such steps, or stages, and on entering each, a man receives a new title —

(1) The Srotaâpanna, lit he who has got into the stream A man may have seven more births before he reaches the other shore, i e Nirvāṇa

(2) Sakṛdâgâmin, lit he who comes back once, so called because, after having entered this stage, a man is born only once more among men or gods Childers shows that this involves really two more births, one in the deva world, the other in the world of men Burnouf says the same, Introduction, p, 293

(3) Anâgâmin, lit he who does not come back, so called because, after this stage, a man cannot be born again in a lower world, but can only be born into a Brahman world, before he reaches Nirvāṇa

(4) Arhat, the venerable, the perfect, who has reached the highest stage that can be reached, and from which Nirvāṇa is perceived (sukkhavipassanâ, Lotus, p 849) See Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p 280, Burnouf, Introduction, p 209, Köppen, p 398, D'Alwis, Attanugaluvaṇsa, p cxxiv, Feer, Sutra en 42 articles, p 6

CHAPTER XIV

THE BUDDHA (THE AWAKENED)

179 He whose conquest is not conquered again, into whose conquest no one in this world enters, by what track can you lead him, the Awakened, the Omniscient, the trackless ?

180 He whom no desire with its snares and poisons can lead astray, by what track can you lead him, the Awakened, the Omniscient, the trackless ?

181 Even the gods envy those who are awakened and not forgetful, who are given to meditation, who are wise, and who delight in the repose of retirement (from the world)

182 Difficult (to obtain) is the conception of men, difficult is the life of mortals, difficult is the hearing of the True Law, difficult is the birth of the Awakened (the attainment of Buddhahood)

<sup>1</sup> 179, 180 Buddha, the Awakened, is to be taken as an appellative rather than as the proper name of the Buddha (see v 183) It means, anybody who has arrived at complete knowledge Anantagāram I take in the sense of, possessed of unlimited knowledge Apadam, which Dr Fausbøll takes as an epithet of Buddha and translates by 'non investigabilis,' is translated 'trackless,' in order to show the play on the word pada, see Childers, s v The commentator says 'The man who is possessed of even a single one of such conditions as rāga, &c, him ye may lead forward, but the Buddha has not even one condition or basis of renewed existence, and therefore by what track will you lead this unconditioned Buddha?' Cf Dhp vv 92, 420, and Gâtaka, vol 1 pp 79, 313

182. Mr Beal (Dhammapada, p 110) states that this verse occurs in the Sûtra of the Forty-two Sections

183 Not to commit any sin, to do good, and to purify one's mind, that is the teaching of (all) the Awakened

184 The Awakened call patience the highest penance, long-suffering the highest Nirvâna, for he is not an anchorite (pravragita) who strikes others, he is not an ascetic (sramana) who insults others

185 Not to blame, not to strike, to live restrained under the law, to be moderate in eating, to sleep and sit alone, and to dwell on the highest thoughts,—this is the teaching of the Awakened

183 This verse is again one of the most solemn verses among the Buddhists. According to Csoma Körösi, it ought to follow the famous Âryâ stanza, 'Ye dhammâ' (Lotus, p 522), and serve as its complement. But though this may be the case in Tibet, it was not so originally. The same verse (ascribed to Kanakamuni) occurs at the end of the Chinese translation of the Prâumoksha (Beal, J R A S XIX, p 473, Catena, p 159), in the Tibetan translation of the Gâthâsangraha, v 14 (Schiefner, Mél Asiat VIII, pp 568, 586, and Csoma Körösi, As Res XX, p 79) Burnouf has fully discussed the metre and meaning of our verse on pp 527, 528 of his 'Lotus'. He prefers sañittapandamanam, which Csoma translated by 'the mind must be brought under entire subjection' (svañittapandamanam), and the late Dr Mill by 'proprius intellectus subjugatio'. But his own MS of the Mahâpadhâna-sutta gave likewise sañittapariyodapanam, and this is no doubt the correct reading. (See D'Alwis, Attanugaluvasa, p cxxix). We found pariyodappeya in verse 88, in the sense of purging oneself from the troubles of thought. From the same verb, (pari) ava + dai, we may derive the name Avadâna, a legend, originally a pure and virtuous act, an apoteia, afterwards a sacred story, and possibly a story the hearing of which purifies the mind. See Boehtlingk-Roth, s v avadâna.

184 Childers, following the commentator, translates, 'Patience, which is long suffering, is the best devotion, the Buddhas declare that Nirvâna is the best (of things)'

185 Cf Suttanipâta, v 337 Pâumokkhe, 'under the law,' i e according to the law, the law which leads to Moksha, or 'freedom'. Prâumoksha is the title of the oldest collection of the moral laws

186 There is no satisfying lusts, even by a shower of gold pieces, he who knows that lusts have a short taste and cause pain, he is wise,

187 Even in heavenly pleasures he finds no satisfaction, the disciple who is fully awakened delights only in the destruction of all desires

188 Men, driven by fear, go to many a refuge, to mountains and forests, to groves and sacred trees

189 But that is not a safe refuge, that is not the best refuge, a man is not delivered from all pains after having gone to that refuge

190 He who takes refuge with Buddha, the Law, of the Buddhists (Burnouf, Introduction, p 300, Bigandet, The Life of Gaudama, p 439, Rhys Davids, Buddhism, p 162), and as it was common both to the Southern and the Northern Buddhists, pāṭimokkhe in our passage may possibly be meant, as Professor Weber suggests, as the title of that very collection. The commentator explains it by geṭṭhakaṣāṭṭha and pāṭimokkhaṣāṭṭha. Sayanāsam might stand for sayanāsanam, see Mahābh XII, 6684, but in Buddhist literature it is intended for sayanāsanam, see also Mahābh XII, 9978, sayyāsane. Fausboll now reads pānta instead of patthaṇi.

187 There is a curious similarity between this verse and verse 6503 (9919) of the Sāntiparva

Yaś ka kâmasukham loke, yaś ka divyam mahat sukham,

Trishnâkshayasukhasyaite nârhatâśh shodâśm kalâm

'And whatever delight of love there is on earth, and whatever is the great delight in heaven, they are not worth the sixteenth part of the pleasure which springs from the destruction of all desires. The two verses 186, 187 are ascribed to king Mandhātṛ, shortly before his death (Mél Asiat VIII, p 471, see also Gâtaka, vol 11 p 113)

188-192 These verses occur in Sanskrit in the Prâṇhâryasûtra, translated by Burnouf, Introduction, pp 162-189, see p 186. Burnouf translates rukkhaketyâni by 'arbres sacrés', properly, sacred shrines under or near a tree. See also Gâtaka, vol 1 p 97.

190 Buddha, Dharma, and Sangha are called the Trisarana (cf Burnouf, Intro. p 630). The four holy truths are the four statements that there is pain in this world, that the source of and the Church, he who, with clear understanding, sees the four holy truths —

191 Viz pain, the origin of pain, the destruction of pain, and the eightfold holy way that leads to the quieting of pain,—

192 That is the safe refuge, that is the best refuge, having gone to that refuge, a man is delivered from all pain

193 A supernatural person (a Buddha) is not easily found, he is not born everywhere Wherever such a sage is born, that race prospers

194 Happy is the arising of the awakened, happy is the teaching of the True Law, happy is peace in the church, happy is the devotion of those who are at peace

195, 196 He who pays homage to those who deserve homage, whether the awakened (Buddha) or their disciples, those who have overcome the host (of evils), and crossed the flood of sorrow, he who pays homage to such as have found deliverance and know no fear, his merit can never be measured by anybody

pain is desire, that desire can be annihilated, that there is a way (shown by Buddha) by which the annihilation of all desires can be achieved, and freedom be obtained That way consists of eight parts (See Burnouf, Introduction, p 630) The eightfold way forms the subject of Chapter XVIII (See also Feer, Journal As 1870, p 418, and Chips from a German Workshop, 2nd ed vol 1 p 251 seq)

202 There is no fire like passion, there is no losing throw like hatred, there is no pain like this body, there is no happiness higher than rest

203 Hunger is the worst of diseases, the body the greatest of pains, if one knows this truly, that is Nirvâna, the highest happiness

Sanskrit and in the Southern or Pâli texts, 1 e in the Avadâna-sataka, in the Samyutta nikâya See Feer, Comptes Rendus, 1871, p 44, and Journal As 1880, p 509 In the Avadâna sataka, the Sanskrit version is—

Gayo vaiiam prasavati, duḥkham sete parāgitaḥ

Upasântaḥ sukham sete hitvā gayaparāgayam

202 I take kali in the sense of an unlucky die which makes a player lose his game A real simile seems wanted here, as in verse 251, where, for the same reason, I translate graha by 'shark,' not by 'captivitas,' as Dr Fausboll proposes The same scholar translates kali in our verse by 'peccatum' If there is any object on to translating kali in Pâli by 'unlucky die,' I should still prefer to take it in the sense of the age of depravity, or the demon of depravity To judge from Abhidhânappadīpikā, 1106, kali was used for parāgaya, 1 e loss at game, a losing throw, and occurs in that sense again in verse 252 The Chinese translation has, 'there is no distress (poison) worse than hate' A similar verse occurs Mahābh Sāntip 175, v 35

'Body' for khandha is a free translation, but it is difficult to find any other rendering The Chinese translation also has 'body' According to the Buddhists each sentient being consists of five khandhas (skandha), or aggregates, the organized body (rūpa-khandha) with its four internal capacities of sensation (vedanā), perception (saṅgñā), conception (samskāra), knowledge (viṅṇāna) See Burnouf, Introd pp 589, 634, Lotus, p 335

203 Samskāra is the fourth of the five khandhas, but the commentator takes it here, as well as in verse 255, for the five khandhas together, in which case we can only translate it by 'body' See also verse 278 Childers proposes 'organic life' (Notes on Dhammapada, p 1) There is, however, another samskāra, that which follows immediately upon avidyā, 'ignorance,' as the second of the nidānas, or 'causes of existence,' and this too might be called the greatest pain, considering that it is the cause of birth, which is the cause of all pain Samskāra seems sometimes to have a different

204 Health is the greatest of gifts, contentedness the best riches, trust is the best of relationships, Nirvāṇa the highest happiness

205 He who has tasted the sweetness of solitude and tranquillity, is free from fear and free from sin, while he tastes the sweetness of drinking in the law

206 The sight of the elect (Arya) is good, to live with them is always happiness, if a man does not see fools, he will be truly happy

207 He who walks in the company of fools suffers a long way, company with fools, as with an enemy, is always painful, company with the wise is pleasure, like meeting with kinsfolk

208 Therefore, one ought to follow the wise, the intelligent, the learned, the much enduring, the dutiful, the elect, one ought to follow a good and wise man, as the moon follows the path of the stars and less technical meaning, being used in the sense of conceptions, plans, desires, as, for instance, in verse 368, where sankhârānam khayam is used much like tamhākhaya. Again, in his comment on verse 75, Buddhaghosa says upadhiviveko sankhârasangamīkam vinodeti, and again, upadhiviveko ka nirupadhînam puggalānam visankhâragatānām

For a similar sentiment, see Stanislas Julien, Lès Avadânas, vol 1 p 40, 'Le corps est la plus grande source de souffrance,' &c I should say that the khandhas in verse 202 and the sankhâras in verse 203 are nearly, if not quite, synonymous. I should prefer to read gigakkhâ-paramā as a compound Gigakkhâ, or as it is written in one MS, digakkhâ (Sk gighatsâ), means not only 'hunger,' but 'appetite, desire'

204 Childers translates, 'the best kinsman is a man you can trust'

205 Cf Suttanipâta, v 256

208 I should like to read sukho ka dhîrasamvâso

CHAPTER XVI

PLEASURE

209 He who gives himself to vanity, and does not give himself to meditation, forgetting the real aim (of life) and grasping at pleasure, will in time envy him who has exerted himself in meditation

210 Let no man ever look for what is pleasant, or what is unpleasant Not to see what is pleasant is pain, and it is pain to see what is unpleasant

211 Let, therefore, no man love anything, loss of the beloved is evil Those who love nothing, and hate nothing, have no fetters

212 From pleasure comes grief, from pleasure comes fear, he who is free from pleasure knows neither grief nor fear

213 From affection comes grief, from affection comes fear, he who is free from affection knows neither grief nor fear

214 From lust comes grief, from lust comes fear, he who is free from lust knows neither grief nor fear

215 From love comes grief, from love comes fear, he who is free from love knows neither grief nor fear

216 From greed comes grief, from greed comes fear, he who is free from greed knows neither grief nor fear

217 He who possesses virtue and intelligence,

who is just, speaks the truth, and does what is his own business, him the world will hold dear

218 He in whom a desire for the Ineffable (Nirvāṇa) has sprung up, who is satisfied in his mind, and whose thoughts are not bewildered by love, he is called ūrdhvamsrotas (carried upwards by the stream)

219 Kinsmen, friends, and lovers salute a man who has been long away, and returns safe from afar

220 In like manner his good works receive him who has done good, and has gone from this world to the other,—as kinsmen receive a friend on his return

218 Ūrdhvamsrotas or uddhamsoto is the technical name for one who has reached the world of the Avyāhas (Aviha), and is proceeding to that of the Akanishṭhas (Akanishṭha). This is the last stage before he reaches the formless world, the Arūpadhātu (See Buddhaghosha's Parables, p 123, Burnouf, Introduction, p 599) Originally ūrdhvamsrotas may have been used in a less technical sense, meaning one who swims against the stream, and is not carried away by the vulgar passions of the world.

CHAPTER XVII

ANGER

221 Let a man leave anger, let him forsake pride, let him overcome all bondage! No sufferings befall the man who is not attached to name and form, and who calls nothing his own

222 He who holds back rising anger like a rolling chariot, him I call a real driver, other people are but holding the reins

223 Let a man overcome anger by love, let him overcome evil by good, let him overcome the greedy by liberality, the liar by truth<sup>1</sup>

224 Speak the truth, do not yield to anger, give, if thou art asked for little, by these three steps thou wilt go near the gods

225 The sages who injure nobody, and who always control their body, they will go to the unchangeable place (Nirvâna), where, if they have gone, they will suffer no more

226 Those who are ever watchful, who study day and night, and who strive after Nirvâna, their passions will come to an end

227 This is an old saying, O Atula, this is not only of to-day 'They blame him who sits silent,

221 'Name and form' or 'mind and body' is the translation of nâma-rûpa, the ninth of the Buddhist Nidânas. Cf Burnouf, Introduction, p 501, see also Gogerly, Lecture on Buddhism, and Bigandet, The Life of Gaudama, p 454

223 Mahabh XII, 3550, asâdhum sadhunâ gayet. Cf Ten Gâtakas, ed Fausboll, p 5

227 It appears from the commentary that porânam and aggata-nam are neuters, referring to what happened formerly and what they blame him who speaks much, they also blame him who says little, there is no one on earth who is not blamed

228 There never was, there never will be, nor is there now, a man who is always blamed, or a man who is always praised

229, 230 But he whom those who discriminate praise continually day after day, as without blemish, wise, rich in knowledge and virtue, who would dare to blame him, like a coin made of gold from the Gambû river? Even the gods praise him, he is praised even by Brahman

231 Beware of bodily anger, and control thy body! Leave the sins of the body, and with thy body practise virtue!

232 Beware of the anger of the tongue, and control thy tongue! Leave the sins of the tongue, and practise virtue with thy tongue!

233 Beware of the anger of the mind, and control thy mind! Leave the sins of the mind, and practise virtue with thy mind!

234 The wise who control their body, who control their tongue, the wise who control their mind, are indeed well controlled happens to-day, and that they are not to be taken as adjectives referring to âśnam, &c. The commentator must have read atula instead of atulam, and he explains it as the name of a pupil whom Gautama addressed by that name. This may be so (see note to verse 166), but atula may also be taken in the sense of incomparable (Mahâbh XIII, 1937), and in that case we ought to supply, with Professor Weber, some such word as 'saw' or 'saying'.

230 The Brahman worlds are higher than the Deva worlds as the Brahman is higher than a Deva, see Hardy, Manual, p 25, Burnouf, Introduction, pp 134, 184

CHAPTER XVIII

IMPURITY

235 Thou art now like a sear leaf, the messengers of death (Yama) have come near to thee, thou standest at the door of thy departure, and thou hast no provision for thy journey

236. Make thyself an island, work hard, be wise !
When thy impurities are blown away, and thou art free from guilt, thou wilt enter into the heavenly world of the elect (Ariya)

237 Thy life has come to an end, thou art come near to death (Yama), there is no resting-place for thee on the road, and thou hast no provision for thy journey

238 Make thyself an island, work hard, be wise !
When thy impurities are blown away, and thou art free from guilt, thou wilt not enter again into birth and decay

239 Let a wise man blow off the impurities of his self, as a smith blows off the impurities of silver, one by one, little by little, and from time to time

240 As the impurity which springs from the iron,

235 Uyyoga seems to mean departure See Buddhaghosa's commentary on verse 152, p 319, l 1, Fausböll, Five Gātakas, p 35

236 'An island,' for a drowning man to save himself, (see verse 25) Dīpankara is the name of one of the former Buddhas, and it is also used as an appellative of the Buddha, but is always derived from dīpo, 'a lamp'

when it springs from it, destroys it, thus do a transgressor's own works lead him to the evil path

241 The taint of prayers is non-repetition, the taint of houses, non repair, the taint of the body is sloth, the taint of a watchman, thoughtlessness

242 Bad conduct is the taint of woman, greediness the taint of a benefactor, tainted are all evil ways, in this world and in the next

243 But there is a taint worse than all taints,—ignorance is the greatest taint O mendicants! throw off that taint, and become taintless!

244 Life is easy to live for a man who is without shame, a crow hero, a mischief-maker, an insulting, bold, and wretched fellow

245 But life is hard to live for a modest man, who always looks for what is pure, who is disinterested, quiet, spotless, and intelligent

246 He who destroys life, who speaks untruth, who in this world takes what is not given him, who goes to another man's wife,

247 And the man who gives himself to drinking intoxicating liquors, he, even in this world, digs up his own root

248 O man, know this, that the unrestrained are in a bad state, take care that greediness and vice do not bring thee to grief for a long time!

244 Pakkhandin is identified by Dr Fausboll with praskandin, one who jumps forward, insults, or, as Buddhaghosa explains it, one who meddles with other people's business, an interloper. At all events, it is a term of reproach, and as it would seem, of theological reproach

246 On the five principal commandments which are recapitulated in verses 246 and 247, see Buddhaghosha's Parables, p 153

248 Cf Mahābhārata XII, 4055, yeshām vṛttis ka samyatā. See also verse 307

249 The world gives according to their faith or according to their pleasure if a man frets about the food and the drink given to others, he will find no rest either by day or by night

250 He in whom that feeling is destroyed, and taken out with the very root, finds rest by day and by night

251 There is no fire like passion, there is no shark like hatred, there is no snare like folly, there is no torrent like greed

252 The fault of others is easily perceived, but that of oneself is difficult to perceive, a man winnows his neighbour's faults like chaff, but his own fault he hides, as a cheat hides the bad die from the gambler

253 If a man looks after the faults of others, and is always inclined to be offended, his own passions will grow, and he is far from the destruction of passions

254 There is no path through the air, a man is not a Samāna by outward acts The world

249 This verse has evidently regard to the feelings of the Bhikkhus or mendicants who receive either much or little, and who are exhorted not to be envious if others receive more than they themselves. Several of the Parables illustrate this feeling

251 Dr Fausboll translates gaho by 'captivitas,' Dr Weber by 'fetter' I take it in the same sense as grāha in Manu VI, 78, and Buddhaghosa does the same, though he assigns to grāha a more general meaning, viz anything that seizes, whether an evil spirit (yakkha), a serpent (agagara), or a crocodile (kumbhila)

Greed or thirst is represented as a river in Lalita-vistara, ed Calc p 482, trishnā-nadī tvegā praroshitā me gñānasūryena, 'the wild river of thirst is dried up by the sun of my knowledge'

252 See Childers, Notes, p 7, St Matthew vii 3

253 As to āsava, 'appetite, passion,' see note to verse 39

254 I have translated this verse very freely, and not in accord-deligh's in vanity, the Tathāgatas (the Buddhas) are free from vanity

255 There is no path through the air, a man is not a Samana by outward acts No creatures are eternal, but the awakened (Buddha) are never shaken

ance with Buddhaghosa's commentary Dr Fausbøll proposed to translate, 'No one who is outside the Buddhist community can walk through the air, but only a Samana,' and the same view is taken by Professor Weber, though he arrives at it by a different construction Now it is perfectly true that the idea of magical powers (riddhi) which enable saints to walk through the air, &c., occurs in the Dhammapada, see v 175, note But the Dhammapada may contain earlier and later verses, and in that case our verse might be an early protest on the part of Buddha against the belief in such miraculous powers We know how Buddha himself protested against his disciples being called upon to perform vulgar miracles 'I command my disciples not to work miracles,' he said, 'but to hide their good deeds, and to show their sins' (Burnouf, Introd p 170) It would be in harmony with this sentiment if we translated our verse as I have done As to bahira, I should take it in the sense of 'external,' as opposed to adhyātmika, or 'internal,' and the meaning would be, 'a Samana is not a Samana by outward acts, but by his heart' D Alwis translates (p 85) 'There is no footprint in the air, there is not a Samana out of the pale of the Buddhist community'

Prapañka, which I have here translated by 'vanity,' seems to include the whole host of human weaknesses, cf v 196, where it is explained by tamhādi/himānapapañka, in our verse by tamhādisu papañkesu cf Lalitā-vistara, p 564, anālayam nishprapañkam anutpādam asambhavam (dharmaśakram) As to Tathāgata, a name of Buddha, cf Burnouf, Introd p 75

255 Sankhāra for samskāra, cf note to verse 203 Creature does not, as Mr D Alwis (p 69) supposes, involve the Christian conception of creation

CHAPTER XIX

THE JUST

256, 257 A man is not just if he carries a matter by violence, no, he who distinguishes both right and wrong, who is learned and leads others, not by violence, but by law and equity, and who is guarded by the law and intelligent, he is called just

258 A man is not learned because he talks much, he who is patient, free from hatred and fear, he is called learned

259 A man is not a supporter of the law because he talks much, even if a man has learnt little, but sees the law bodily, he is a supporter of the law, a man who never neglects the law

260 A man is not an elder because his head is grey, his age may be ripe, but he is called 'Old-in-vain'

261 He in whom there is truth, virtue, love, restraint, moderation, he who is free from impurity and is wise, he is called an elder

262 An envious, greedy, dishonest man does not become respectable by means of much talking only, or by the beauty of his complexion

263 He in whom all this is destroyed, and taken out with the very root, he, when freed from hatred and wise, is called respectable

259 Buddhaghosa here takes law (dhamma) in the sense of the four great truths, see note to verse 190 Could dharmam kâyena passati mean 'he observes the law in his acts?' Hardly, if we compare expressions like dharmam vipassato, v 373

264 Not by tonsure does an undisciplined man who speaks falsehood become a Samana, can a man be a Samana who is still held captive by desire and greediness ?

265 He who always quiets the evil, whether small or large, he is called a Samana (a quiet man), because he has quieted all evil

266 A man is not a mendicant (Bhikshu) simply because he asks others for alms, he who adopts the whole law is a Bhikshu, not he who only begs

268, 269 A man is not a Muni because he observes silence (mona, i e mauna), if he is foolish

265 This is a curious etymology, because it shows that at the time when this verse was written, the original meaning of sramana had been forgotten. Sramana meant originally, in the language of the Brahmans, a man who performed hard penances, from sram, 'to work hard,' &c. When it became the name of the Buddhist ascetics, the language had changed, and sramana was pronounced samana. Now there is another Sanskrit root, sam, 'to quiet,' which in Pâli becomes likewise sam, and from this root sam, 'to quiet,' and not from sram, 'to tire,' did the popular etymology of the day and the writer of our verse derive the title of the Buddhist priests. The original form sramana became known to the Greeks as Σαρμᾱναί, that of samana as Σαμωναί, the former through Megasthenes, the latter through Bardesanes, 80-60 B.C. (See Lassen, Indische Alterthumskunde, II, 700.) The Chinese Shamen and the Tungusian Shamen come from the same source, though the latter has sometimes been doubted. See Schott, Über die doppelte Bedeutung des Wortes Schamane, in the Philosophical Transactions of the Berlin Academy, 1842, p. 463 seq.

266-270 The etymologies here given of the ordinary titles of the followers of Buddha are entirely fanciful, and are curious only as showing how the people who spoke Pâli had lost the etymological consciousness of their language. A Bhikshu is a beggar, and ignorant, but the wise who, taking the balance, chooses the good and avoids evil, he is a Muni, and is a Muni thereby, he who in this world weighs both sides is called a Muni

270 A man is not an elect (Ariya) because he injures living creatures, because he has pity on all living creatures, therefore is a man called Ariya

271, 272 Not only by discipline and vows, not only by much learning, not by entering into a trance, not by sleeping alone, do I earn the happiness of release which no worldling can know Bhikshu, be not confident as long as thou hast not attained the extinction of desires

1 e a Buddhist friar who has left his family and lives entirely on alms Muni is a sage, hence Sākya muni, a name of Gautama Muni comes from man, 'to think,' and from muni comes mauna, 'silence' Ariya, again, is the general name of those who embrace a religious life It meant originally 'respectable, noble' In verse 270 it seems as if the writer wished to guard against deriving ariya from ari, 'enemy' See note to verse 22

272 See Childers, Notes, p 7

CHAPTER XX

THE WAY

273 The best of ways is the eightfold, the best of truths the four words, the best of virtues passionlessness, the best of men he who has eyes to see

274 This is the way, there is no other that leads to the purifying of intelligence Go on this way! Everything else is the deceit of Māra (the tempter)

275 If you go on this way, you will make an end of pain! The way was preached by me, when I had understood the removal of the thorns (in the flesh)

276 You yourself must make an effort The Tathāgatas (Buddhas) are only preachers The thoughtful who enter the way are freed from the bondage of Māra

277 'All created things perish,' he who knows and sees this becomes passive in pain, this is the way to purity

273 The eightfold or eight membered way is the technical term for the way by which Nirvāṇa is attained (See Burnouf, Lotus, p 519) This very way constitutes the fourth of the Four Truths, or the four words of truth, viz Duḥkha, 'pain,' Samudaya, 'origin,' Nirodha, 'destruction,' Mārga, 'road' (Lotus, p 517) See note to verse 178 For another explanation of the Mārga, or 'way,' see Hardy, Eastern Monachism, p 280

274 The last line may mean, 'this way is the confusion of Māra,' i e the discomfiture of Māra

275 The salyas, 'arrows or thorns,' are the sokasalya, 'the arrows of grief' Buddha himself is called mahāsalya hartā, 'the great remover of thorns' (Lalita-vistara, p 550, Mahābh XII, 5616)

277 See v 255

278 'All created things are grief and pain,' he who knows and sees this becomes passive in pain, this is the way that leads to purity

279 'All forms are unreal,' he who knows and sees this becomes passive in pain, this is the way that leads to purity

280 He who does not rouse himself when it is time to rise, who, though young and strong, is full of sloth, whose will and thought are weak, that lazy and idle man will never find the way to knowledge

281 Watching his speech, well restrained in mind, let a man never commit any wrong with his body! Let a man but keep these three roads of action clear, and he will achieve the way which is taught by the wise

282 Through zeal knowledge is gotten, through lack of zeal knowledge is lost, let a man who knows this double path of gain and loss thus place himself that knowledge may grow

283 Cut down the whole forest (of lust), not a tree only! Danger comes out of the forest (of lust). When you have cut down both the forest (of lust) and its undergrowth, then, Bhikkhus, you will be rid of the forest and free!

278 See v 203

279 Dhamma is here explained, like sankhâra, as the five khandha, i.e. as what constitutes a living body

281 Cf Beal, Catena, p 159

282 Bhûri was rightly translated 'intelligentia' by Dr Fausböll. Dr Weber renders it by 'Gedeihen,' but the commentator distinctly explains it as 'vast knowledge,' and in the technical sense the word occurs after vidyâ and before medhâ, in the Lalita vistara, p 54<sup>1</sup>

283 A pun, vana meaning both 'lust' and 'forest'. See some mistaken remarks on this verse in D'Alwis, Nirvâna, p 86, and some good remarks in Childers, Notes, p 7

284 So long as the love of man towards women, even the smallest, is not destroyed, so long is his mind in bondage, as the calf that drinks milk is to its mother

286 'Here I shall dwell in the rain, here in winter and summer,' thus the fool meditates, and does not think of his death

287 Death comes and carries off that man, praised for his children and flocks, his mind distracted, as a flood carries off a sleeping village

288 Sons are no help, nor a father, nor relations, there is no help from kinsfolk for one whom death has seized

289 A wise and good man who knows the meaning of this, should quickly clear the way that leads to Nirvâna

285 Cf Gâtaka, vol 1 p 183

286 Antarâya, according to the commentator, gîvitântarâya, i.e. intentus, death. In Sanskrit, antarita is used in the sense of 'vanished' or 'perished'

287 See notes to verse 47, Thiessen, Kisâgotamî, p 11, and Mahâbh XII, 9944, 6540

CHAPTER XXI

MISCELLANEOUS

290 If by leaving a small pleasure one sees a great pleasure, let a wise man leave the small pleasure, and look to the great

291 He who, by causing pain to others, wishes to obtain pleasure for himself, he, entangled in the bonds of hatred, will never be free from hatred

292 What ought to be done is neglected, what ought not to be done is done, the desires of unruly, thoughtless people are always increasing

293 But they whose whole watchfulness is always directed to their body, who do not follow what ought not to be done, and who steadfastly do what ought to be done, the desires of such watchful and wise people will come to an end

294 A true Brâhmana goes scatheless, though he have killed father and mother, and two valiant kings, though he has destroyed a kingdom with all its subjects

295 A true Brâhmana goes scatheless, though he have killed father and mother, and two holy kings, and an eminent man besides

292 Cf Beal, Catena, p 264

294, 295 These two verses are either meant to show that a truly holy man who, by accident, commits all these crimes is guiltless, or they refer to some particular event in Buddha's history. The commentator is so startled that he explains them allegorically. Mr D'Alwis is very indignant that I should have supposed Buddha capable of pardoning patricide. 'Can it be believed,' he writes, 'that a Teacher, who held life, even the life of the minutest insect,

296 The disciples of Gotama (Buddha) are always well awake, and their thoughts day and night are always set on Buddha

297 The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their thoughts day and night are always set on the law

298 The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their thoughts day and night are always set on the church

299 The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their thoughts day and night are always set on their body

nay, even a living tree, in such high estimation as to prevent its wanton destruction, has declared that the murder of a Brâhmana, to whom he accorded reverence, along with his own Sangha, was blameless?' D Alwis, Nirvâna, p 88 Though something might be said in reply, considering the antecedents of king Agâtasatru, the patron of Buddha, and stories such as that quoted by the commentator on the Dhammapada (Beal, 1 c p 150), or in Der Weise und der Thor, p 306, still these two verses are startling, and I am not aware that Buddha has himself drawn the conclusion, which has been drawn by others, viz that those who have reached the highest Sambodhi, and are in fact no longer themselves, are outside the domain of good and bad, and beyond the reach of guilt Verses like 39 and 412 admit of a different explanation Still our verses being miscellaneous extracts, might possibly have been taken from a work in which such an opinion was advanced, and I find that Mr Childers, no mean admirer of Buddha, was not shocked by my explanation 'In my judgment,' he says, 'this verse is intended to express in a forcible manner the Buddhist doctrine that the Arhat cannot commit a serious sin' However, we have met before with far-fetched puns in these verses, and it is not impossible that the native commentators were right after all in seeing some puns or riddles in this verse D'Alwis, following the commentary, explains mother as lust, father as pride, the two valiant kings as heretical systems, and the realm as sensual pleasure, while veyyaggha is taken by him for a place infested with the tigers of obstruction against final beatitude Some confirmation of this interpretation is sup-

300 The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their mind day and night always delights in compassion

301 The disciples of Gotama are always well awake, and their mind day and night always delights in meditation

302 It is hard to leave the world (to become a friar), it is hard to enjoy the world, hard is the monastery, painful are the houses, painful it is to dwell with equals (to share everything in common), and the itinerant mendicant is beset with pain. Therefore let no man be an itinerant mendicant, and he will not be beset with pain

303 Whatever place a faithful, virtuous, celebrated, and wealthy man chooses, there he is respected

plied by a passage in the third book of the Lankâvatâra-sûtra, as quoted by Mr Beal in his translation of the Dhammapada, Introduction, p 5. Here a stanza is quoted as having been recited by Buddha, in explanation of a similar startling utterance which he had made to Mahâmati ‘Lust, or carnal desire, this is the Mother,

Ignorance, this is the Father,
The highest point of knowledge, this is Buddha,
All the kleras, these are the Rahats,
The five skandhas, these are the Priests,
To commit the five unpardonable sins
Is to destroy these five
And yet not suffer the pains of hell’

The Lankâvatâra sûtra was translated into Chinese by Bodhiruci (508-511), when it was written is doubtful. See also Gâtaka, vol II, p 263

302 This verse is difficult, and I give my translation as tentative only. Childers (Notes, p 11) does not remove the difficulties, and I have been chiefly guided by the interpretation put on the verse by the Chinese translator, Beal, Dhammapada, p 137

mountains, bad people are not seen, like arrows shot by night

305 He alone who, without ceasing, practises the duty of sitting alone and sleeping alone, he, subduing himself, will rejoice in the destruction of all desires alone, as if living in a forest

305 I have translated this verse so as to bring it into something like harmony with the preceding verses. Vanânte, according to a pun pointed out before (v 283), means both 'in the end of a forest,' and 'in the end of desires'

CHAPTER XXII

THE DOWNWARD COURSE

306 He who says what is not, goes to hell, he also who, having done a thing, says I have not done it After death both are equal, they are men with evil deeds in the next world

307 Many men whose shoulders are covered with the yellow gown are ill-conditioned and unrestrained, such evil-doers by their evil deeds go to hell

308 Better it would be to swallow a heated iron ball, like flaring fire, than that a bad unrestrained fellow should live on the charity of the land

309 Four things does a wreckless man gain who covets his neighbour's wife,—a bad reputation, an uncomfortable bed, thirdly, punishment, and lastly, hell

306 I translate niraya, 'the exit, the downward course, the evil path,' by 'hell,' because the meaning assigned to that ancient mythological name by Christian writers comes so near to the Buddhist idea of niraya, that it is difficult not to believe in some actual contact between these two streams of thought See also Mahābh XII, 7176 Cf Gāṭaka, vol II p 416, Suttanipāṭa, v 660

307, 308 These two verses are said to be taken from the Vinaya-piṭaka I, 4, 1, D Alwis, Nirvāṇa, p 29

308 The charity of the land, i e the alms given, from a sense of religious duty, to every mendicant that asks for it

309, 310 The four things mentioned in verse 309 seem to be repeated in verse 310 Therefore, apuññalābha, 'bad fame,' is the same in both gaṇi pāpikā must be niraya, danda must be nindā, and raṭṭi thokikā explains the anikāmasayyam Buddhaghosa

310 There is bad reputation, and the evil way (to hell), there is the short pleasure of the frightened in the arms of the frightened, and the king imposes heavy punishment, therefore let no man think of his neighbour's wife

311 As a grass-blade, if badly grasped, cuts the arm, badly practised asceticism leads to hell

312 An act carelessly performed, a broken vow, and hesitating obedience to discipline, all this brings no great reward

313 If anything is to be done, let a man do it, let him attack it vigorously! A careless pilgrim only scatters the dust of his passions more widely

314 An evil deed is better left undone, for a man repents of it afterwards, a good deed is better done, for having done it, one does not repent

315 Like a well-guarded frontier fort, with defences within and without, so let a man guard himself. Not a moment should escape, for they who allow the right moment to pass, suffer pain when they are in hell

316 They who are ashamed of what they ought not to be ashamed of, and are not ashamed of what they ought to be ashamed of, such men, embracing false doctrines, enter the evil path

317 They who fear when they ought not to fear, and fear not when they ought to fear, such men, embracing false doctrines, enter the evil path takes the same view of the meaning of anikâmasējya, i.e. yathâ lakṣhatī evam seyyam alabhitvâ, anikṣhitam parittakam eva kâlam seyyam labhati, 'not obtaining the rest as he wishes it, he obtains it, as he does not wish it, for a short time only'

313 As to raga meaning 'dust' and 'passion,' see Buddha-ghosha's Parables, pp 65, 66

318 They who forbid when there is nothing to be forbidden, and forbid not when there is something to be forbidden, such men, embracing false doctrines, enter the evil path

319 They who know what is forbidden as forbidden, and what is not forbidden as not forbidden, such men, embracing the true doctrine, enter the good path

CHAPTER XXIII

THE ELEPHANT

320 Silently shall I endure abuse as the elephant in battle endures the arrow sent from the bow for the world is ill-natured

321 They lead a tamed elephant to battle, the king mounts a tamed elephant, the tamed is the best among men, he who silently endures abuse

322 Mules are good, if tamed, and noble Sindhu horses, and elephants with large tusks, but he who tames himself is better still

323 For with these animals does no man reach the untrodden country (Nirvâna), where a tamed man goes on a tamed animal, viz on his own welltamed self

324 The elephant called Dhanapâlaka his temples running with sap, and difficult to hold, does not eat a morsel when bound, the elephant longs for the elephant grove

320. The elephant is with the Buddhists the emblem of endurance and self restraint. Thus Buddha himself is called Nâga, 'the Elephant' (Lal Vist p 553), or Mahânâga, 'the great Elephant' (Lal Vist p 553), and in one passage (Lal Vist p 554) the reason of this name is given, by stating that Buddha was sudânta, 'well tamed,' like an elephant. He descended from heaven in the form of an elephant to be born on earth.

Cf Manu VI, 47, ativâdâms titiksheta

323 I read, as suggested by Dr Fausboll, yath' attanâ sudan-tena danto dantena gakkhâti (cf verse 160) 'The India Office MS reads na hi etehi ihânehi gakkheya agatam disam, yath' attânam sudan-tena danto dantena gakkhâti. As to ihânehi instead of yânehi, see verse 224

325 If a man becomes fat and a great eater, if he is sleepy and rolls himself about, that fool, like a hog fed on wash, is born again and again

326 This mind of mine went formerly wandering about as it liked, as it listed, as it pleased, but I shall now hold it in thoroughly, as the rider who holds the hook holds in the furious elephant

327 Be not thoughtless, watch your thoughts! Draw yourself out of the evil way, like an elephant sunk in mud

328 If a man find a prudent companion who walks with him, is wise, and lives soberly, he may walk with him, overcoming all dangers, happy, but considerate

329 If a man find no prudent companion who walks with him, is wise, and lives soberly, let him walk alone, like a king who has left his conquered country behind,—like an elephant in the forest

330 It is better to live alone, there is no companionship with a fool, let a man walk alone, let him commit no sin, with few wishes, like an elephant in the forest

326 Yoniso, i e yonisaḥ, is rendered by Dr Fausbøll 'sapientia,' and this is the meaning ascribed to yonī by many Buddhist authorities. But the reference to Hemaṇḍandra (ed Boehtlingk and Rieu, p 281) shows clearly that it meant 'origin,' or 'cause'. Yoniso occurs frequently as a mere adverb, meaning 'thoroughly, radically' (Dhammapada, p 359), and yoniso manasikāra (Dhammapada, p 110) means 'taking to heart' or 'minding thoroughly,' or, what is nearly the same, 'wisely'. In the Lalita-vistara, p 41, the commentator has clearly mistaken yonisaḥ, changing it to ye 'niso, and explaining it by yamaṇisam, whereas M Foucaux has rightly translated it by 'depuis l'origine'. Professor Weber suspected in yonisaḥ a double entendre, but even grammar would show that our author is innocent of it. In Lalita vistara, p 544, l 4, ayonisa occurs in the sense of error

328, 329 Cf Suttanipāta, vv 44, 45

331 If an occasion arises, friends are pleasant, enjoyment is pleasant, whatever be the cause, a good work is pleasant in the hour of death, the giving up of all grief is pleasant

332 Pleasant in the world is the state of a mother, pleasant the state of a father, pleasant the state of a Samana, pleasant the state of a Brâhmana

333 Pleasant is virtue lasting to old age, pleasant is a faith firmly rooted, pleasant is attainment of intelligence, pleasant is avoiding of sins

332 The commentator throughout takes these words, like mat-teyyatâ, &c, to signify, not the status of a mother, or maternity, but reverence shown to a mother

CHAPTER XXIV

THIRST

334 The thirst of a thoughtless man grows like a creeper, he runs from life to life, like a monkey seeking fruit in the forest

335 Whomsoever this fierce thirst overcomes, full of poison, in this world, his sufferings increase like the abounding Bīraṇa grass

336 He who overcomes this fierce thirst, difficult to be conquered in this world, sufferings fall off from him, like water-drops from a lotus leaf

337 This salutary word I tell you, 'Do ye, as many as are here assembled, dig up the root of thirst, as he who wants the sweet-scented Uśīra root must dig up the Bīraṇa grass, that Māra (the tempter) may not crush you again and again, as the stream crushes the reeds'

338 As a tree, even though it has been cut down, is firm so long as its root is safe, and grows again, thus, unless the feeders of thirst are destroyed, this pain (of life) will return again and again

339 He whose thirst running towards pleasure is exceeding strong in the thirty-six channels, the

334 This is explained by a story in the Chinese translation Beal, Dhammapada, p 148

335 Bīraṇa grass is the Andropogon muricatum, and the scented root of it is called Uśīra (cf verse 337)

338 On Anusaya, i e Anusaya (Anlage), see Wassiljew, Der Buddhismus, p 240 seq

339 The thirty-six channels, or passions, which are divided by the commentator into eighteen external and eighteen internal, are wavèr will carry away that misguided man, viz his desires which are set on passion

340 The channels run everywhere, the creeper (of passion) stands sprouting, if you see the creeper springing up, cut its root by means of knowledge

341 A creature's pleasures are extravagant and luxurious, sunk in lust and looking for pleasure, men undergo (again and again) birth and decay

342 Men, driven on by thirst, run about like a snared hare, held in fetters and bonds, they undergo pain for a long time, again and again

343 Men, driven on by thirst, run about like a snared hare, let therefore the mendicant drive out thirst, by striving after passionlessness for himself

344 He who having got rid of the forest (of lust) (i.e. after having reached Nirvâna) gives himself over to forest-life (i.e. to lust), and who, when removed from the forest (i.e. from lust), runs to the forest (i.e. to lust), look at that man! though free, he runs into bondage explained by Burnouf (Lotus, p 649), from a gloss of the Gîta alankâra 'L'indication précise des affections dont un Buddha acte indépendant, affections qui sont au nombre de dix huit, nous est fourni par la glose d'un livre appartenant aux Buddhistes de Ceylan,' &c Subhûti gives the right reading as manâpassavanâ, cf Childers, Notes, p 12

Vâhâ, which Dr Fausboll translates by 'equi,' may be vahâ, 'undae' Cf Suttanipâta, v 1034

344 This verse seems again full of puns, all connected with the twofold meaning of vana, 'forest and lust' By replacing 'forest' by 'lust,' we may translate 'He who, when free from lust, gives himself up to lust, who, when removed from lust runs into lust, look at that man,' &c Nibbana, though with a short a, may be intended to remind the hearer of Nibbâna The right reading is nubbanatho, see Childers, Notes, p 8

345 Wise people do not call that a strong fetter which is made of iron, wood, or hemp, far stronger is the care for precious stones and rings, for sons and a wife

346 That fetter wise people call strong which drags down, yields, but is difficult to undo, after having cut this at last, people leave the world, free from cares, and leaving desires and pleasures behind

347 Those who are slaves to passions, run down with the stream (of desires), as a spider runs down the web which he has made himself, when they have cut this, at last, wise people leave the world, free from cares, leaving all affection behind

348 Give up what is before, give up what is behind, give up what is in the middle, when thou goest to the other shore of existence, if thy mind is altogether free, thou wilt not again enter into birth and decay

349 If a man is tossed about by doubts, full of strong passions, and yearning only for what is delightful, his thirst will grow more and more, and he will indeed make his fetters strong

350 If a man delights in quieting doubts, and, always reflecting, dwells on what is not delightful

345 Apekshā, apekshā, 'care,' see Manu VI, 41, 49, Suttanipāta, v 37, and Gāṭaka, vol II p 140

346 Paribbaga, i.e. parivraṇa, see Manu VI, 41

347 The commentator explains the simile of the spider as follows 'As a spider, after having made its thread-web, sits in the middle, and after killing with a violent rush a butterfly or a fly which has fallen in its circle, drinks its juice, returns, and sits again in the same place, in the same manner creatures who are given to passions, depraved by hatred, and maddened by wrath, run along the stream of thirst which they have made themselves, and cannot cross it,' &c

(the impurity of the body, &c), he certainly will remove, nay, he will cut the fetter of Mâra

351 He who has reached the consummation, who does not tremble, who is without thirst and without sin, he has broken all the thorns of life this will be his last body

352 He who is without thirst and without affection, who understands the words and their interpretation, who knows the order of letters (those which are before and which are after), he has received his last body, he is called the great sage, the great man

353 'I have conquered all, I know all, in all conditions of life I am free from taint, I have left all, and through the destruction of thirst I am free, having learnt myself, whom shall I teach?'

354 The gift of the law exceeds all gifts, the sweetness of the law exceeds all sweetness, the delight in the law exceeds all delights, the extinction of thirst overcomes all pain

355 Pleasures destroy the foolish, if they look not for the other shore, the foolish by his thirst for pleasures destroys himself, as if he were his own enemy

352 As to nirutti, and its technical meaning among the Buddhists, see Burnouf, Lotus, p 841 Fausboll translates 'nirutis vocabulorum peritus,' which may be right, if we take nirutti in the sense of the language of the Scriptures See note to verse 363 Could not sannipâta mean samhitâ or sannikarsha? Sannipâta occurs in the Sâkala-prâtisâkhyâ, but with a different meaning

353 Cf Suttanipâta, v 210

354 The dhammadâna, or 'gift of the law,' is the technical term for instruction in the Buddhist religion See Buddhaghosha's Parables, p 160, where the story of the Sakkadevarâga is told, and where a free rendering of our verse is given

356 The fields are damaged by weeds, mankind is damaged by passion therefore a gift bestowed on the passionless brings great reward

357 The fields are damaged by weeds, mankind is damaged by hatred therefore a gift bestowed on those who do not hate brings great reward

358 The fields are damaged by weeds, mankind is damaged by vanity therefore a gift bestowed on those who are free from vanity brings great reward

359 The fields are damaged by weeds, mankind is damaged by lust therefore a gift bestowed on those who are free from lust brings great reward

CHAPTER XXV

THE BHIKSHU (MENDICANT)

360 Restraint in the eye is good, good is restraint in the ear, in the nose restraint is good, good is restraint in the tongue

361 In the body restraint is good, good is restraint in speech, in thought restraint is good, good is restraint in all things A Bhikshu, restrained in all things, is freed from all pain

362 He who controls his hand, he who controls his feet, he who controls his speech, he who is well controlled, he who delights inwardly, who is collected, who is solitary and content, him they call Bhikshu

363 The Bhikshu who controls his mouth, who speaks wisely and calmly, who teaches the meaning and the law, his word is sweet

364 He who dwells in the law, delights in the law, meditates on the law, follows the law, that Bhikshu will never fall away from the true law

365 Let him not despise what he has received,

364 The expression dhammârâmo, 'having his garden or de light (Lustgarten) in the law,' is well matched by the Brahmanic expression ekârâma, i e nirdvandva (Mahâbh XIII, 1930) Cf Suttanipâta, v 326, Dhammapada, v 32

nor ever envy others a mendicant who envies others does not obtain peace of mind

366 A Bhikshu who, though he receives little, does not despise what he has received, even the gods will praise him, if his life is pure, and if he is not slothful

367 He who never identifies himself with name and form, and does not grieve over what is no more, he indeed is called a Bhikshu

368 The Bhikshu who acts with kindness, who is calm in the doctrine of Buddha, will reach the quiet place (Nirvâna), cessation of natural desires, and happiness

369 O Bhikshu, empty this boat! if emptied, it will go quickly, having cut off passion and hatred, thou wilt go to Nirvâna

370 Cut off the five (senses), leave the five, rise above the five A Bhikshu, who has escaped from the five fetters, he is called Oghatîna, 'saved from the flood'

371 Meditate, O Bhikshu, and be not heedless! Do not direct thy thought to what gives pleasure, that thou mayest not for thy heedlessness have to swallow the iron ball (in hell), and that thou mayest not cry out when burning, 'This is pain'

367 Nâmarûpa is here used again in its technical sense of mind and body, neither of which, however, is with the Buddhists âtman, or 'self' Asat, 'what is not,' may therefore mean the same as nâmarûpa, or we may take it in the sense of what is no more, as, for instance, the beauty or youth of the body, the vigour of the mind, &c

371 The swallowing of hot iron balls is considered as a punishment in hell, see verse 308 Professor Weber has perceived the

372 Without knowledge there is no meditation, without meditation there is no knowledge he who has knowledge and meditation is near unto Nirvâna

373 A Bhikshu who has entered his empty house, and whose mind is tranquil, feels a more than human delight when he sees the law clearly

374 As soon as he has considered the origin and destruction of the elements (khandha) of the body, he finds happiness and joy which belong to those who know the immortal (Nirvâna)

375 And this is the beginning here for a wise Bhikshu watchfulness over the senses, contentedness, restraint under the law, keep noble friends whose life is pure, and who are not slothful

376 Let him live in charity, let him be perfect in his duties, then in the fulness of delight he will make an end of suffering

377 As the Vassikâ plant sheds its withered flowers, men should shed passion and hatred, O ye Bhikshus !

378 The Bhikshu whose body and tongue and mind are quieted, who is collected, and has rejected the baits of the world, he is called quiet

379 Rouse thyself by thyself, examine thyself by thyself, thus self-protected and attentive wilt thou live happily, O Bhikshu !

380 For self is the lord of self, self is the refuge of self, therefore curb thyself as the merchant curbs, a good horse right meaning of bhavassu, which can only be bhâvayasva, but I doubt whether the rest of his rendering is right, for who would swallow an iron ball by accident ?

372 Cf Beal, Catena, p 247

381 The Bhikshu, full of delight, who is calm in the doctrine of Buddha will reach the quiet place (Nirvâṇa), cessation of natural desires, and happiness

382 He who, even as a young Bhikshu, applies himself to the doctrine of Buddha, brightens up this world, like the moon when free from clouds

381 See verse 368 D'Alwis translates, 'dissolution of the sankhâras (elements of existence)'

CHAPTER XXVI

THE BRĀHMAṆA (ARHAT)

383 Stop the stream valiantly, drive away the desires, O Brāhmaṇa! When you have understood the destruction of all that was made, you will understand that which was not made

384 If the Brāhmaṇa has reached the other shore in both laws (in restraint and contemplation), all bonds vanish from him who has obtained knowledge

385 He for whom there is neither this nor that shore, nor both, him, the fearless and unshackled I call indeed a Brāhmaṇa

386 He who is thoughtful, blameless, settled, dutiful, without passions, and who has attained the highest end, him I call indeed a Brāhmaṇa

387 The sun is bright by day, the moon shines by night, the warrior is bright in his armour, the Brāhmaṇa is bright in his meditation, but Buddha the Awakened, is bright with splendour day and night

388 Because a man is rid of evil, therefore he is called Brāhmaṇa, because he walks quietly, therefore he is called Samana, because he has sent away his own impurities, therefore he is called Pravagita (Pabbagita, a pilgrim)

385 The exact meaning of the two shores is not quite clear, and the commentator who takes them in the sense of internal and external organs of sense, can hardly be right See verse 86

388 These would-be etymologies are again interesting as showing the decline of the etymological life of the spoken language of 389 No one should attack a Brâhmana, but no Brâhmana (if attacked) should let himself fly at his aggressor! Woe to him who strikes a Brâhmana, more woe to him who flies at his aggressor!

390 It advantages a Brâhmana not a little if he holds his mind back from the pleasures of life, when all wish to injure has vanished, pain will cease

391 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who does not offend by body, word, or thought, and is controlled on these three points

392 After a man has once understood the law as taught by the Well-awakened (Buddha), let him worship it carefully, as the Brâhmana worships the sacrificial fire

393 A man does not become a Brâhmana by his platted hair, by his family, or by birth, in whom there is truth and righteousness, he is blessed, he is a Brâhmana

394 What is the use of platted hair, O fool! what of the raiment of goat-skins? Within thee there is ravening, but the outside thou makest clean

395 The man who wears dirty raiments, who is

India at the time when such etymologies became possible In order to derive Brâhmana from vâh, it must have been pronounced bâhmano, vâh, 'to remove,' occurs frequently in the Buddhistical Sanskrit Cf Lal Vist p 551, l 1, 553, l 7 See note to verse 265

390 I am afraid I have taken too much liberty with this verse Dr Fausbøll translates, 'Non Brâhmanae hoc paulo melius, quando retentio fit mentis a jucundis'

393 Fausbøll proposes to read gakkâ (gâtyâ) 'Both' in the first edition of my translation was a misprint for 'birth'

394 I have not copied the language of the Bible more than I was justified in The words are abbhantaran te gahanam, bâhram parimaggasi, 'interna est abyssus, externum mundas' Cf Gâtaka, vol 1 p 481

395 The expression Kisan dhamamsanthatam is the Sanskrit

401 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who does not cling to pleasures, like water on a lotus leaf, like a mustard seed on the point of a needle

402 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who, even here, knows the end of his suffering, has put down his burden, and is unshackled

403 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana whose knowledge is deep, who possesses wisdom, who knows the right way and the wrong, and has attained the highest end

404 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who keeps aloof both from laymen and from mendicants, who frequents no houses, and has but few desires

405 Him I call indeed a Brahmana who finds no fault with other beings, whether feeble or strong, and does not kill nor cause slaughter

406 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who is tolerant with the intolerant, mild with fault-finders, and free from passion among the passionate

407 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana from whom anger and hatred, pride and envy have dropt like a mustard seed from the point of a needle

408 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who utters true speech, instructive and free from harshness, so that he offend no one

409 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who takes nothing in the world that is not given him, be it long or short, small or large, good or bad

410 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who fosters no desires for this world or for the next, has no inclinations, and is unshackled

405 On tasa and thâvara, see Childers, s v, and D Alwis, Nirvâna, p 115 On danda, 'the rod,' see Hibbert Lectures, p 355, note

411 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who has no interests, and when he has understood (the truth), does not say How, how? and who has reached the depth of the Immortal

412 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who in this world is above good and evil, above the bondage of both, free from grief, from sin, and from impurity

413 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who is bright like the moon, pure, serene, undisturbed, and in whom all gaiety is extinct

414 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who has traversed this miry road, the impassable world and its vanity, who has gone through, and reached the other shore, is thoughtful, guileless, free from doubts, free from attachment, and content

415 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who in this world, leaving all desires, travels about without a home, and in whom all concupiscence is extinct

416 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who, leaving all longings, travels about without a home, and in whom all covetousness is extinct

417 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who, after leaving all bondage to men, has risen above all

411 Akathankathâ is explained by Buddhaghosa as meaning, 'free from doubt or hesitation' He also uses kathankathâ in the sense of 'doubt' (verse 414) In the Kâvyâdarsa, III, 17, the commentator explains akatham by kathârahitam, nirvivâdam, which would mean, 'without a kathâ, a speech, a story without contradiction, unconditionally' From our passage, however, it seems as if kathankathâ was a noun derived from kathankathayati, 'to say How, how?' so that neither the first nor the second element had anything to do with kath, 'to relate,' and in that case akatham, too, ought to be taken in the sense of 'without a Why'

412 See verse 39 The distinction between good and evil vanishes when a man has retired from the world, and has ceased to act, longing only for deliverance bondage to the gods, and is free from all and every bondage

418 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who has left what gives pleasure and what gives pain, who is cold, and free from all germs (of renewed life), the hero who has conquered all the worlds

419 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who knows the destruction and the return of beings everywhere, who is free from bondage, welbeing (Sugata), and awakened (Buddha)

418 Upadhi, if not used in a technical sense, is best translated by 'passions or affections' Technically there are four upadhis or substrata, viz the kandhas, kâma, 'desire,' kilesa, 'sin,' and kamma, 'work' The Brâhmana may be called nirupadhi, as being free from desire, misery, and work and its consequences, but not yet of the kandhas, which end through death only The commentator explains nirupadhi by nirupakkilesa, 'free from sin' See Childers, s v nibbâna, p 268 a

419 Sugata is one of those many words in Buddhist literature which it is almost impossible to translate, because they have been taken in so many acceptations by the Buddhists themselves Sugata etymologically means 'one who has fared well,' sugati means 'happiness and blessedness' It is wrong to translate it literally by 'welcome,' for that in Sanskrit is svâgata, and we cannot accept Dr Eitel's statement (Handbook, p 138) that sugata stands incorrectly for svâgata Sugata is one of the not very numerous technical terms in Buddhism for which hitherto we know of no antecedents in earlier Brahmanism It may have been used in the sense of 'happy and blessed,' but it never became a title, while in Buddhism it has become, not only a title, but almost a proper name of Buddha The same applies to tathâgata, lit 'thus come,' but used in Sanskrit very much like tathâvidha, in the sense of talis, while in Buddhism it means a Buddha There are of course many interpretations of the word, and many reasons are given why Buddhas should be called Tathâgata (Burnouf, Introduction, p 75, &c) Boehtlingk s v supposed that, because Buddha had so many predicates, he was, for the sake of brevity, called 'such a one as he really is' I think we may go a step further Another word, tâdṛśa, meaning

420 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana whose path the gods do not know, nor spirits (Gandharvas), nor men, whose passions are extinct, and who is an Arhat (venerable)

421 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who calls nothing his own, whether it be before, behind, or between, who is poor, and free from the love of the world

422 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana, the manly, the noble, the hero, the great sage, the conqueror, the impassible, the accomplished, the awakened

423 Him I call indeed a Brâhmana who knows his former abodes, who sees heaven and hell, has reached the end of births, is perfect in knowledge, a sage, and whose perfections are all perfect

talis, becomes in Pâli, under the form of tâdî, a name of Buddha's disciples, and afterwards of Buddha himself. If applied to Buddha's disciples, it may have meant originally 'such as he,' i.e. his fellows, but when applied to Buddha himself, it can only mean 'such a one,' i.e. 'so great a man'. The Sanskrit mârsha is probably the Pâli mârîso, which stands for mâtiso, Sk mâtṛīsa, 'like me,' used in Pâli when a superior addresses others as his equals, and afterwards changed into a mere title of respect

THE SUTTA-NIPĀTA

THE Collection of Discourses, Sutta-Nipāta, which I have here translated<sup>1</sup>, is very remarkable, as there can be no doubt that it contains some remnants of Primitive Buddhism. I consider the greater part of the Mahāvagga, and nearly the whole of the Attakavagga as very old. I have arrived at this conclusion from two reasons, first from the language, and secondly from the contents.

I. We not only find here what we meet with in other Pāli poetry, the fuller Vedic forms of nouns and verbs in the plural, as avītatamhāse, paṇḍitāse, dhammāse, sītāse, upatthitāse, pavādiyāse, &c, and kāramāse, asmāse, sikkhissāmāse, the shorter Vedic plurals and the instrumental singular of nouns, as vinikkhayā, lakkhanā for vinikkhayāni, lakkhanāni, mantā, pariññā, vinayā, lābhakamyā for mantāya, &c, Vedic infinitives, as vippahātave, sampayātave, unnametave, contracted (or sometimes old) forms, as santiyā, gakkā, duggakkā, sammukkā, titthiyā, thiyo, parihīrati for santiyā, gātiyā, sammutiya, titthiyā, itthiyo, parihariyati, by the side of protracted forms, such as ātumānam, but also some unusual (sometimes old) forms and words, as apukkhasi, sagghasi<sup>2</sup>=sakkhissasi, sussam=sunissāmi (Sansk. śrośyāmi), pāva and pāvā=vadati, pavekkhe=paveseyya, parikkissati=parikkhissati, vineyya, vikeyya, nikkheyya, pappuyya,= vinayitvā, &c, dattū=disvā (S. drishṭvā), atitvā=atikkamitvā, anuvikkā=anuvīditvā, paribbasāna=vasamāna, amhanā (S. asmanā)=pāsānena, vāḷibhi, katubbhi, rattamahābhi, ise (vocative), suvāmi=sāmi, maga=miga,

tumo = so, parovara = parāvara, bhûnahu = bhûtihanaka, upaya, âmagandha, dhona, vyappatha, vyappathi, vevikkhâ, visenibhûta, visenikatvâ, pañseniyanti Sometimes we meet also with difficult and irregular constructions, and very condensed expressions All this proves, I think, that these parts of the book are much older than the Suttas in which the language is not only fluent, but of which some verses are even singularly melodious

2 In the contents of the Suttanipâta we have, I think, an important contribution to the right understanding of Primitive Buddhism, for we see here a picture not of life in monasteries, but of the life of hermits in its first stage We have before us not the systematizing of the later Buddhist church, but the first germs of a system, the fundamental ideas of which come out with sufficient clearness From the Attakavagga especially it is evident where Buddha takes his stand in opposition to Philosophy (ditthi = darsana)

Indian society at the time of Buddha had two large and distinguished religious sects, Samanas and Brâhmanas This is apparent from several passages where they are mentioned together, for instance, Vinaya, ed Oldenberg, II, p 295, Grimblot, Sept Suttas Pâlis, p 1x, 8 &c, 118 &c, 158 &c, 306 &c, 309, Dhammapada, p 392, Suttanipâta, vv 99, 129, 189, 440, 529, 859, 1078, Sabbhiyasutta, at the beginning, the Inscriptions of Asoka, Mahâbhâshya, II, 4, 9 (fol 398 a), Lalita Vistara, pp 309, l 10, 318, l 18, 320, l 20, and lastly, Megasthenes (Schwanbeck, p 45), δύο γένη φιλοσόφων, ὃν τοὺς μὲν Βραχμῶν αὖς καλεῖ, τοὺς δὲ Σαρμῶνας

Famous teachers arose and gathered around them flocks of disciples As such are mentioned Pûrana-Kassapa, Makkhali-Gosâla, Agita-Kesakambali, Pakudha-Kakkâyana, Saṅgaya-Belattiputta, and Nigantha-Nâtaputta<sup>1</sup>, see Suttanipâta, p 86, Mahâparinibbânasutta, ed Childers, p 58, Vinaya II, p 111, Grimblot, Sept Suttas Pâlis, p 114, &c, Milindapañha, ed Trenckner, p 4 Besides these there is Bâvari (Suttanipâta, p 184), and his disciples Agita, Tissametteyya, Punnaka, Mettagû, Dhotaka, Upasiva, Nanda,

Hemaka, Todeyya, Kappa, Gatukanṇin, Bhadrāvudha, Udaya, Posāla, Mogharāgan (Pīṅgiya, vv 1006–1008, Sela, p 98), and Kankin, Tārukkha, Pokkharasāti, Ganussoni, Vāsetṭha, and Bhāradvāga, p 109

We learn that there were four kinds of Samanas, viz Maggagīnas, Maggadesakas (or Maggadesins, Maggaggāyins), Maggagīvins, and Maggadūsins, vv 83–88. Among these Samanas disputes arose, vv 828, 883–884, a number of philosophical systems were formed, and at the time of Buddha there were as many as sixty-three of them, v 538. These systems are generally designated by ditṭhi, vv 54, 151, 786, 837, 851, &c, or by ditṭhigata, vv 834, 836, 913, or by ditṭhasuta, v 778, or by ditṭha, suta, and muta, vv 793, 813, 914, or by ditṭha, suta, silavata<sup>1</sup>, and muta, vv 790, 797–798, 836, 887, 1080. The doctrines themselves are called ditṭhinivesa, v 785, or nivesana, vv 209, 470, 801, 846, or vinikkhaya, vv 838, 866, 887, 894, and he who entertains any of them, is called nivissavādin, vv 910, 913.

What is said of the Samanas seems mostly to hold good about the Brāhmanas also. They too are called disputatious, vādasūla, v 381, &c, p 109, and three kinds of them are mentioned, viz Titthiyas, Āgīvikas, and Niganthas, vv 380, 891–892. In contradistinction to the Samanas the Brāhmanas are designated as Teviggas, vv 594, 1019, they are Padakas, Veyyākaranas, and perfect in Gappa, Nighandu, Ketubha, Itihāsa, &c, v 595, p 98. They are called friends of the hymns, v 139, well versed in the hymns, v 976, and their principal hymn is Sāvitti<sup>2</sup>, vv 568, 456. They worship and make offerings to the fire, pp 74, 20. In Brāhmanadhammikasutta the ancient and just Brahmanas are described in opposition to the later

<sup>1</sup> I am not sure whether silavata is to be understood as one notion or two. It is generally written in one word, but at p 109 Vāsetṭha says when one is virtuous and-endowed with works he is a Brāhmaṇa yato kho bho silavā ka hoti vatasampanno ka ettāvata kho brāhmaṇo hoti. Silavata, I presume, refers chiefly to the Brāhmanas.

Brāhmaṇas, who slay innocent cows and have acquired wealth through the favour of the kings, vv 307, 308, 311, 302<sup>1</sup>

All these disputants hold fast to their own prejudiced views, v 910 They say that purity comes from philosophical views, from tradition, and from virtuous works, and in many other ways, v 1078, and that there is no bliss excepting by following their opinions, vv 889, 891, 892

Buddha himself has, it is true, sprung from the Samanas he is called Samana Gotama, p 96, he shines like a sun in the midst of the Samanas, v 550, and intercourse with Samanas is said to be the highest blessing, v 265 But Buddha has overcome all their systems, v 538, there is nothing which has not been seen, heard, or thought by him, and nothing which has not been understood by him, v 1121 All the disputatious Brāhmaṇas do not overcome him in understanding, v 380, and he asserts that no one is purified and saved by philosophy or by virtuous works, vv 1079, 839 Sanctification, in fact, does not come from another, vv 773, 790, 813, it can be attained only by going into the yoke with Buddha, v 834, by believing in him and in the Dhamma of the Saints, vv 183, 185, 370, 1142, on the whole, by being what Buddha is What then is Buddha?

First he is a Visionary, in the good sense of the word, his knowledge is intuitive, 'Seeing misery,' he says, 'in the philosophical views, without adopting any of them, searching for truth, I saw inward peace,' vv 837, 207 And again, 'He, a conqueror unconquered, saw the Dhamma visibly, without any traditional instruction,' vv 934, 1052, 1065 He teaches an instantaneous, an immediate religious life, vv 567, 1136 He is called kakkhumat, endowed with an eye, clearly-seeing, vv 160, 405, 540, 562, 596, 956, 992, 1028, 1115, 1127, samanta-kakkhu, the all-seeing, vv 1062, 1068, and as such he has become an eye to the world, v 599 He sees the subtle meaning of things, vv 376, 175, he is, in one word, Sambuddha, the perfectly-enlightened, vv 177, 555, 596, 992, and by knowledge he is delivered, vv 1106,

727, 733 Existence is aviggā, ignorance, v 729, viggā, knowledge, is the extinction of the world, v 730

Secondly, he is an Ascetic, a Muni<sup>1</sup>, one that forsakes the world and wanders from the house to the houseless state, vv 273, 375, 1003, because from house-life arises defilement, v, 206 An ascetic has no prejudiced ideas, v 802, he has shaken off every philosophical view, v 787, he does not enter into disputes, v 887, he is not pleased nor displeased with anything, v 813, he is indifferent to learning, v 911, he does not cling to good and evil, vv 520, 547, 790, he has cut off all passion and all desire, vv 2, 795, 1130, 916, he is free from marks, v 847, and possessionless, akiñkana, vv 175, 454, 490, 620, 1058, 1062, 976, 1069, 1114 He is equable, v 855, under all circumstances the same, v 952, still as the deep water, v 920, calm, vv 459, 861 He has reached peace, vv 837, 845, 919, he knows that bliss consists in peace, v 933, he has gone to immortal peace, the unchangeable state of Nibbāna, v 203 And how is this state brought about? By the destruction of consciousness, vv 734-735 And how does consciousness cease? By the cessation of sensation vv 1109-1110, by being without breathing, vv 1089-1090<sup>2</sup>

1 What then is sin according to Buddha?

Subjectively sin is desire, in all its various forms, vv 923, 1103, viz desire for existence generally, vv 776, 1059, 1067, and especially for name and form, i e individual existence, vv 354, 1099. As long as man is led by desire he will be whirled about in existence, v 740, for as long as there is birth, there will be death, v 742 Existence is called the stream of death, v 354, the realm of Māra, vv 164, 1145 Those who continually go to samsāra with birth and death, are the ignorant, v 729

But desire originates in the body, vv 270, 1099, sin lies objectively in embodiment or matter, and consequently the human body is looked upon as a contemptible thing. See Vigayasutta, p 32

2 And what is bliss?

Subjectively, it is emancipation from desire by means of the peace that Buddha preaches, vv 1065-1066, 1069, 1084, 1108, 838-839

Objectively, it is emancipation from body and matter. One must destroy the elements of existence, upadhi, vv 373, 546, 1050, 1056, and leave the body behind, that one may not come to exist again, vv 1120, 1122, 761. The ignorant only create upadhi, v 1050, and go again and again to samsāra, v 729. The wise do not enter time, kappa, vv 521, 535, 860, they look upon the world as void, v 1118, hold that there is nothing really existing, v 1069, and those whose minds are disgusted with a future existence, the wise who have destroyed their seeds (of existence), go out like a lamp, vv 234, 353-354. As a flame, blown about by the violence of the wind, goes out, and cannot be reckoned (as existing), even so a Muni, delivered from name and body, disappears, and cannot be reckoned (as existing), v 1073. For him who has disappeared, there is no form, that by which they say he is, exists for him no longer, v 1075

'Exert thyself, then,—O Dhotaka,' so said Bhagavat,— 'being wise and thoughtful in this world, let one, having listened to my utterance, learn his own extinction,' v 1061

Tena h' ātappam karohi,—Dhotakā 'ti Bhagavā,—

With this short sketch of the contents of the Suttanipāta for a guide, I trust it will be easy to understand even the more obscure parts of the book

The Bhikkhu who discards all human passions is compared to a snake that casts his skin —Text and translation in Fr Spiegel's Anecdota Pālica

1 He who restrains his anger when it has arisen, as (they) by medicines (restrain) the poison of the snake spreading (in the body), that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (1)

2 He who has cut off passion entirely, as (they cut off) the lotus-flower growing in a lake, after diving (into the water), that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (2)

3 He who has cut off desire entirely, the flowing, the quickly running, after drying it up, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (3)

4 He who has destroyed arrogance entirely, as the flood (destroys) a very frail bridge of reeds, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (4)

5 He who has not found any essence in the existences, like one that looks for flowers on fig-trees, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (5)

6 He in whose breast there are no feelings of anger, who has thus overcome reiterated existence, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (6)

7 He whose doubts are scattered, cut off entirely inwardly, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (7)

8 He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, who overcame all this (world of) delusion, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (8)

9 He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, having seen that all this in the world is false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (9)

10 He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, being free from covetousness, (seeing) that all this is false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (10)

11 He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, being free from passion, (seeing) that all this is false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (11)

12 He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, being free from hatred, (seeing) that all this is false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (12)

13 He who did not go too fast forward, nor was left behind, being free from folly, (seeing) that all this is false, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (13)

14 He to whom there are no affections whatsoever, whose sins are extirpated from the root, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (14)

15 He to whom there are no (sins) whatsoever originating in fear, which are the causes of coming back to this shore, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (15)

16 He to whom there are no (sins) whatsoever originating in desire, which are the causes of binding (men) to existence, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (16)

17 He who, having left the five obstacles, is free from suffering, has overcome doubt, and is without pain, that Bhikkhu leaves this and the further shore, as a snake (quits its) old worn out skin (17)

2 DHANIYASUTTA

A dialogue between the rich herdsman Dhaniya and Buddha, the one rejoicing in his worldly security and the other in his religious belief — This beautiful dialogue calls to mind the parable in the Gospel of S Luke xii 16

1 'I have boiled (my) rice, I have milked (my cows),'—so said the herdsman Dhaniya,—'I am living together with my fellows near the banks of the Mahi (river), (my) house is covered, the fire is kindled therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (18)

2 'I am free from anger, free from stubbornness,'—so said Bhagavat — I am abiding for one night near the banks of the Mahi (river), my house is uncovered, the fire (of passions) is extinguished therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky !' (19)

3 'Gad flies are not to be found (with me),'—so said the herdsman Dhaniya,—'in meadows abounding with grass the cows are roaming, and they can endure rain when it comes therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky !' (20)

4 '(By me) is made a well-constructed raft,'—so said Bhagavat,—'I have passed over (to Nibbâna), I have reached the further bank, having overcome the torrent (of passions), there is no (further) use for a raft therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky !' (21)

5 'My wife is obedient, not wanton,'—so said the herdsman Dhaniya,—'for a long time she has been living together (with me) she is winning, and I hear nothing wicked of her therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky !' (22)

6 'My mind is obedient, delivered (from all worldliness),'—so said Bhagavat,—'it has for a long time been highly cultivated and well-subdued, there is no longer anything wicked in me therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky !' (23)

7 'I support myself by my own earnings,'—so said the herdsman Dhaniya,—'and my children are (all) about me, healthy, I hear nothing wicked of them therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky !' (24)

8 'I am no one's servant,'—so said Bhagavat,—'with what I have gained I wander about in all the world, there is no need (for me) to serve therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky !' (25)

9 'I have cows, I have calves,'—so said the herdsman Dhaniya,—'I have cows in calf and heifers, and I have also a bull as lord over the cows therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky !' (26)

10 'I have no cows, I have no calves,'—so said Bhagavat,—'I have no cows in calf and no heifers, and I have no bull as a lord over the cows therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (27)

11 'The stakes are driven in, and cannot be shaken,'—so said the herdsman Dhaniya,—'the ropes are made of muṅga grass, new and well-made, the cows will not be able to break them therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (28)

12 'Having, like a bull, rent the bonds, having, like an elephant, broken through the galuḅḅu creeper, I shall not again enter into a womb therefore, if thou like, rain, O sky!' (29)

Then at once a shower poured down, filling both sea and land. Hearing the sky raining, Dhaniya spoke thus

13 No small gain indeed (has accrued) to us since we have seen Bhagavat, we take refuge in thee, O (thou who art) endowed with the eye (of wisdom), be thou our master, O great Mtṇi!' (30)

14 'Both my wife and myself are obedient, (if) we lead a holy life before Sugata, we shall conquer birth and death, and put an end to pain' (31)

15 'He who has sons has delight in sons,'—so said the wicked Māra,—'he who has cows has delight likewise in cows, for upadhī (substance) is the delight of man, but he who has no upadhī has no delight' (32)

16 'He who has sons has care with (his) sons,'—so said Bhagavat,—'he who has cows has likewise care with (his) cows, for upadhī (is the cause of) people's cares, but he who has no upadhī has no care' (33)

3 KHAGGAVISÂNASUTTA

Family life and intercourse with others should be avoided, for society has all vices in its train, therefore one should leave the corrupted state of society and lead a solitary life

1 Having laid aside the rod against all beings, and not hurting any of them, let no one wish for a son, much less for a companion, let him wander alone like a rhinoceros<sup>1</sup> (34)

2 In him who has intercourse (with others) affections arise, (and then) the pain which follows affection, considering the misery that originates in affection let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (35)

3 He who has compassion on his friends and confidential (companions) loses (his own) advantage, having a fettered mind, seeing this danger in friendship let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (36)

4 Just as a large bamboo tree (with its branches) entangled (in each other, such is) the care one has with children and wife, (but) like the shoot of a bamboo not clinging (to anything) let one wander alone like a rhinoceros<sup>2</sup> (37)

5 As a beast unbound in the forest goes feeding at pleasure, so let the wise man, considering (only his) own will, wander alone like a rhinoceros (38)

6 There is (a constant) calling in the midst of company, both when sitting, standing, walking, and going away, (but) let one, looking (only) for freedom from desire and for following his own will, wander alone like a rhinoceros (39)

7 There is sport and amusement in the midst of company, and for children there is great affection , (although) disliking separation from his dear friends, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (40)

8 He who is at home in (all) the four regions and is not hostile (to any one), being content with this or that, overcoming (all) dangers fearlessly, let him wander alone like a rhinoceros (41)

9 Discontented are some pabbagītas (ascetics), also some gahattīhas (householders) dwelling in houses, let one, caring little about other people's children, wander alone like a rhinoceros (42)

10 Removing the marks of a gihin (a householder) like a Kovidāra tree whose leaves are fallen, let one, after cutting off heroically the ties of a gihin, wander alone like a rhinoceros (43)

11 If one acquires a clever companion, an associate righteous and wise, let him, overcoming all dangers, wander about with him glad and thoughtful<sup>1</sup> (44)

12 If one does not acquire a clever companion, an associate righteous and wise, then as a king abandoning (his) conquered kingdom, let him wander alone like a rhinoceros<sup>2</sup> (45)

13 Surely we ought to praise the good luck of having companions, the best (and such as are our) equals ought to be sought for, not having acquired such friends let one, enjoying (only) allowable things, wander alone like a rhinoceros<sup>3</sup> (46)

14 Seeing bright golden (bracelets), well-wrought by the goldsmith, striking (against each other when there are) two on one arm, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (47)

15 Thus (if I join myself) with another I shall swear or scold, considering this danger in future, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (48)

16 The sensual pleasures indeed, which are various, sweet, and charming, under their different shapes agitate the mind, seeing the misery (originating) in sensual pleasures, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (49)

17 These (pleasures are) to me calamities, boils, misfortunes, diseases, sharp pains, and dangers, seeing this danger (originating) in sensual pleasures, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (50)

18 Both cold and heat, hunger and thirst, wind and a burning sun, and gad-flies and snakes—having overcome all these things, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros<sup>1</sup> (51)

19 As the elephant, the strong, the spotted, the large, after leaving the herd walks at pleasure in the forest, even so let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (52)

20 For him who delights in intercourse (with others, even) that is inconvenient which tends to temporary deliverance, reflecting on the words of (Buddha) the kinsman of the Âdikka family, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (53)

21 The harshness of the (philosophical) views I have overcome, I have acquired self-command, I have attained to the way (leading to perfection), I am in possession of knowledge, and not to be led by others, so speaking, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (54)

22 Without covetousness, without deceit, without craving, without detraction, having got rid of passions and folly, being free from desire in all the world, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (55)

23 Let one avoid a wicked companion who teaches what is useless and has gone into what is wrong, let him not cultivate (the society of) one who is devoted (to and) lost in sensual pleasures, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (56)

24 Let one cultivate (the society of) a friend who is learned and keeps the Dhamma, who is magnanimous and wise, knowing the meaning (of things and) subduing his doubts, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (57)

25 Not adorning himself, not looking out for sport, amusement, and the delight of pleasure in the world, (on the contrary) being loath of a life of dressing, speaking the truth, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (58)

26 Having left son and wife, father and mother, wealth, and corn, and relatives, the different objects of desire, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (59)

27 'This is a tie, in this there is little happiness, little enjoyment, but more of pain, this is a fish-hook,' so having understood, let a thoughtful man wander alone like a rhinoceros (60)

28 Having torn the ties, having broken the net as a fish in the water, being like a fire not returning to the burnt place, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (61)

30 Removing the characteristics of a gihin (householder), like a Pârîkhatta tree whose leaves are cut off, clothed in a yellow robe after wandering away (from his house), let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (63)

31 Not being greedy of sweet things, not being unsteady, not supporting others, going begging from house to house, having a mind which is not fettered to any household, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (64)

32 Having left the five obstacles of the mind, having dispelled all sin, being independent, having cut off the sin of desire, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (65)

33 Having thrown behind (himself bodily) pleasure and pain, and previously (mental) joy and distress, having acquired equanimity, tranquillity, purity, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (66)

34 Strenuous for obtaining the supreme good (i e Nibbâna), with a mind free from attachment, not living in idleness, being firm, endowed with bodily and mental strength, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (67)

36 Wishing for the destruction of desire (i e Nibbâna), being careful, no fool, learned, strenuous, considerate, restrained, energetic, let one wander alone like a rhinoceros (69)

4 KASIBHÂRADVÂGASUTTA

The Brâhmana Kasibhâradvâga reproaches Gotama with idleness, but the latter convinces him that he (Buddha) also works, and so the Brâhmana is converted, and finally becomes a saint
Compare Sp Hardy, A Manual of Buddhism, p 214, Gospel of S John v 17

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt in Magadha at Dakkhinâgiri in the Brâhmana village Ekanaṇḍa. And at that time the Brâhmana Kasibhâradvâga's five hundred ploughs were tied (to the yokes) in the sowing season. Then Bhagavat, in the morning, having put on his raiment and taken his bowl and robes, went to the place where the Brâhmana Kasibhâradvâga's work (was going on). At that time the Brâhmana Kasibhâradvâga's distribution of food took place. Then Bhagavat went to the place where the distribution of food took place, and having gone there, he stood apart. The Brâhmana Kasibhâradvâga saw Bhagavat standing there to get alms, and having seen him, he said this to Bhagavat:

'I, O Samana, both plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown, I eat, thou also, O Samana, shouldst plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown, thou shouldst eat.'

'I also, O Brâhmana, both plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown, I eat,' so said Bhagavat.

'Yet we do not see the yoke, or the plough, or the ploughshare, or the goad, or the oxen of the venerable Gotama.'

And then the venerable Gotama spoke in this way:

'I also, O Brâhmana, both plough and sow, and having ploughed and sown, I eat,' so said Bhagavat.

Then the Brâhmana Kasibhâradvâga addressed Bhagavat in a stanza:

1 'Thou professest to be a ploughman, and yet we do not see thy ploughing, asked about (thy) ploughing, tell us (of it), that we may know thy ploughing' (75)

2 Bhagavat answered: 'Faith is the seed, penance the rain, understanding my yoke and plough, modesty the pole of the plough, mind the tie, thoughtfulness my ploughshare and goad' (76)

3 'I am guarded in respect of the body, I am and gods and Māras and Brahmans, amongst beings comprising gods and men, and Samanas and Brāhmanas, any by whom this rice-milk when eaten can be properly digested with the exception of Tathāgata, or a disciple of Tathāgata. Therefore, O Brāhmaṇa, thou shalt throw this rice-milk in (a place where there is) little grass, or cast it into water with no worms,' so said Bhagavat

Then the Brāhmaṇa Kasibhāradvāga threw the rice-milk into some water with no worms. Then the rice milk thrown into the water splashed, hissed, smoked in volumes, for as a ploughshare that has got hot during the day when thrown into the water splashes, hisses, and smokes in volumes, even so the rice-milk (when) thrown into the water splashed, hissed, and smoked in volumes

Then the Brāhmaṇa Kasibhāradvāga alarmed and terrified went up to Bhagavat, and after having approached and fallen with his head at Bhagavat's feet, he said this to Bhagavat

'It is excellent, O venerable Gotama! It is excellent, O venerable Gotama! As one raises what has been overthrown, or reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an oil lamp in the dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in manifold ways the Dhamma (has been) illustrated. I take refuge in the venerable Gotama and in the Dhamma and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus, I wish to receive the pabbaggā, I wish to receive the upasampadā (the robe and the orders) from the venerable Gotama,' so said Kasibhāradvāga

Then the Brāhmaṇa Kasibhāradvāga received the pabbaggā from Bhagavat, and he received also the upasampadā, and the venerable Bhāradvāga having lately received the upasampadā, leading a solitary, retired, strenuous, ardent, energetic life, lived after having in a short time in this existence by his own understanding ascertained and possessed himself of that highest perfection of a religious life for the sake of which men of good family rightly wander away from their houses to a houseless state 'Birth had been destroyed, a religious life had been led, what was to be done had been done, there was nothing else (to be done) for this existence,' so he perceived, and the venerable Bhāradvāga became one of the arahats (saints)

5 KUNDASUTTA

Buddha describes the four different kinds of Samanas to Kunda, the smith

1 'I ask the Muni of great understanding,'—so said Kunda, the smith,—'Buddha, the lord of the Dhamma, who is free from desire, the best of bipeds, the most excellent of charioteers, how many (kinds of) Samanas are there in the world, pray tell me that?'

2 'There are four (kinds of) Samanas, (there is) not a fifth,' O Kunda,—so said Bhagavat,—'these I will reveal to thee, being asked in person, (they are) Maggagīnas and Maggadesakas, Maggagīvins and Maggadūsins'

(83)

3 'Whom do the Buddhās call a Maggagīna?'—so said Kunda, the smith,—'How is a Maggagīyāyīn unequalled? Being asked, describe to me a Maggagīvin, and reveal to me a Maggadūsīn' (84)

4 Bhagavat said 'He who has overcome doubt, is without pain, delights in Nibbāna, is free from greed, a leader of the world of men and gods, such a one the Buddhas call a maggagīna (that is, victorious by the way) (85)

5 'He who in this world having known the best (i.e. Nibbāna) as the best, expounds and explains here the Dhamma, him, the doubt-cutting Muni, without desire, the second of the Bhikkhus they call a maggadesīn (that is, teaching the way) (86)

6 'He who lives in the way that has so well been taught in the Dhammapada, and is restrained, attentive, cultivating blameless words, him the third of the Bhikkhus they call a maggagīvin (that is, living in the way<sup>1</sup>) (87)

7 'He who although counterfeiting the virtuous is forward, disgraces families, is impudent, deceitful, unrestrained, a babbler, walking in disguise, such a one is a maggadūsīn (that is, defiling the way)<sup>2</sup> (88)

8 'He who has penetrated these (four Samānas), who is a householder, possessed of knowledge, a pupil of the venerable ones, wise, having known that they all are such,—having seen so, his faith is not lost, for how could he make the undepraved equal to the depraved and the pure equal to the impure?' A dialogue between a deity and Buddha on the things by which a man loses and those by which he gains in this world —Text by Grimblot, in Journal Asiatique, t xviii (1871), p 237, translation by L. Feer, in Journal Asiatique, t xviii (1871), p 309, and by Gogerly, reprinted in Journal Asiatique, t xx (1872), p 226

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Sāvattthī, in Geta-vana, in the park of Anāthapīṇḍika. Then when the night had gone, a certain deity of a beautiful appearance, having illuminated the whole Getavana, went up to Bhagavat, and having approached and saluted him, he stood apart, and standing apart that deity addressed Bhagavat in stanzas

1 'We ask (thee), Gotama, about a man that suffers loss, having come to ask, Bhagavat, (tell us) what is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (90)

2 Bhagavat 'The winner is easily known, easily known (is also) the loser — he who loves Dhamma is the winner, he who hates Dhamma is the loser' (91)

3 Deity 'We know this to be so, this is the first loser, tell (us) the second, O Bhagavat, what is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (92)

4 Bhagavat 'Wicked men are dear to him, he does not do anything that is dear to the good, he approves of the Dhamma of the wicked,—that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (93)

5 Deity 'We know this to be so, this is the second loser, tell us the third, O Bhagavat, what is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (94)

6 Bhagavat 'The man who is drowsy, fond of society and without energy, lazy, given to anger,— that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (95)

7 Deity 'We know this to be so, this is the third loser, tell us the fourth, O Bhagavat, what is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (96)

8 Bhagavat 'He who being rich does not support mother or father who are old or past their youth,—that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (97)

9 Deity 'We know this to be so, this is the fourth loser, tell us the fifth, O Bhagavat, what is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (98)

10 Bhagavat 'He who by falsehood deceives either a Brāhmaṇa or a Samāṇa or any other mendicant,—that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (99)

20 Bhagavat 'The man who, past his youth, brings home a woman with breasts like the timbaru fruit, and for jealousy of her cannot sleep,—that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (109)

21 Deity 'We know this to be so, this is the tenth loser, tell us the eleventh, O Bhagavat, what is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (110)

22 Bhagavat 'He who places in supremacy a woman given to drink and squandering, or a man of the same kind,—that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (111)

23 Deity 'We know this to be so, this is the eleventh loser, tell us the twelfth, O Bhagavat what is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (112)

24 Bhagavat 'He who has little property, (but) great desire, is born in a Khattiya family and wishes for the kingdom in this world,—that is the cause (of loss) to the losing (man)' (113)

25 Having taken into consideration these losses in the world, the wise, venerable man, who is endowed with insight, cultivates the happy world (of the gods)' (114)

7 VASALASUTTA

The Brāhmaṇa Aggikabhāradvāja is converted by Buddha, after hearing his definition of an outcast, illustrated by the story of Mātanga, told in the Mātanga-gāthaka Comp Sp Hardy, The Legends and Theories of the Buddhists, p 49 —Text and translation in Alwis's Buddhist Nirvāṇa, p 119

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Sāvattthī, in Geta-vana, in the park of Anāthapīṇḍika Then Bhagavat having put on his raiment in the morning, and having taken his bowl and his robes, entered Sāvattthī for alms

Now at that time in the house of the Brāhmaṇa Aggikabhāradvāja the fire was blazing, the offering brought forth Then Bhagavat going for alms from house to house in Sāvattthī went to the house of the Brāhmaṇa Aggikabhāradvāja The Brāhmaṇa Aggikabhāradvāja saw Bhagavat coming at a distance, and seeing him he said this 'Stay there, O Shaveling, (stay) there, O Samanaka (i e wretched Samana), (stay) there, O Vasalaka (i e outcast)'

This having been said, Bhagavat replied to the Brāhmaṇa Aggikabhāradvāja 'Dost thou know, O Brāhmaṇa, an outcast, or the things that make an outcast ?'

'No, O venerable Gotama, I do not know an outcast, or the things that make an outcast, let the venerable Gotama teach me this so well that I may know an outcast, or the things that make an outcast'

'Listen then, O Brāhmaṇa, attend carefully, I will tell (thee)'

'Even so, O venerable one,' so the Brāhmaṇa Aggikabhāradvāja replied to Bhagavat

Then Bhagavat said this

1 'The man who is angry and bears hatred, who is wicked and hypocritical, who has embraced wrong views, who is deceitful, let one know him as an outcast (115)

2 'Whosoever in this world harms living beings, whether once or twice born, and in whom there is no compassion for living beings, let one know him as an outcast (116)

3 'Whosoever destroys or lays siege to villages and towns, and is known as an enemy, let one know him as an outcast (117)

4 'Be it in the village or in the wood, whosoever appropriates by theft what is the property of others and what has not been given, let one know him as an outcast (118)

5 'Whosoever, having really contracted a debt, runs away when called upon (to pay), saying, "There is no debt (that I owe) thee," let one know him as an outcast (119)

6 'Whosoever for love of a trifle having killed a man going along the road, takes the trifle, let one know him as an outcast (120)

7 'The man who for his own sake or for that of others or for the sake of wealth speaks falsely when asked as a witness, let one know him as an outcast (121)

8 'Whosoever is seen with the wives of relatives or of friends either by force or with their consent, let one know him as an outcast (122)

9 'Whosoever being rich does not support mother or father when old and past their youth, let one know him as an outcast (123)

10 'Whosoever strikes or by words annoys mother or father, brother, sister, or mother-in-law, let one know him as an outcast (124)

11 'Whosoever, being asked about what is good, teaches what is bad and advises (another, while) concealing (something from him), let one know him as an outcast (125)

12 'Whosoever, having committed a bad deed, hopes (saying), "Let no one know me" (as having done it, who is) a dissembler, let one know him as an outcast (126)

13 'Whosoever, having gone to another's house and partaken of his good food, does not in return honour him when he comes, let one know him as an outcast. (127)

14 'Whosoever by falsehood deceives either a Brâhmana or a Samana or any other mendicant, let one know him as an outcast (128)

15 'Whosoever by words annoys either a Brâhmana or a Samana when meal-time has come and does not give (him anything), let one know him as an outcast (129)

16 'Whosoever enveloped in ignorance in this world predicts what is not (to take place), coveting a trifle, let one know him as an outcast (130)

17 'Whosoever exalts himself and despises others, being mean by his pride, let one know him as an outcast (131)

18 'Whosoever is a provoker and is avaricious, has sinful desires, is envious, wicked, shameless, and fearless of sinning, let one know him as an outcast (132)

19 'Whosoever reviles Buddha or his disciple, be he a wandering mendicant (paribbâga) or a householder (gahattâ), let one know him as an outcast (133)

20 'Whosoever without being a saint (arahat) pretends to be a saint, (and is) a thief in all the worlds including<sup>1</sup> that of Brahman, he is indeed the lowest outcast, (all) these who have been described by me to you are indeed called outcasts (134)

21 'Not by birth does one become an outcast, not by birth does one become a Brâhmana, by deeds one becomes an outcast, by deeds one becomes a Brâhmana (135)

22 'Know ye this in the way that this example of mine (shows) There was a Kandâla of the Sopâka caste, well known as Mâtanga (136)

23 'This Mâtanga reached the highest fame, such as was very difficult to obtain, and many Khattiyas and Brâhmanas went to serve him (137)

24 'He having mounted the vehicle of the gods, (and entered) the high road (that is) free from dust, having abandoned sensual desires, went to the Brahma world (138)

25 'His birth did not prevent him from being re-born in the Brahma world, (on the other hand) there are Brâhmanas, born in the family of preceptors, friends of the hymns (of the Vedas), (139)

26 'But they are continually caught in sinful deeds, and are to be blamed in this world, while in the coming (world) hell (awaits them), birth does not save them from hell nor from blame (140)

27 '(Therefore) not by birth does one become an outcast, not by birth does one become a Brâhmana, by deeds one becomes an outcast, by deeds one becomes a Brâhmana' (141)

This having been said, the Brâhmana Aggikabhâradvâga answered Bhagavat as follows

'Excellent, O venerable Gotama! Excellent, O

venerable Gotama! As one, O venerable Gotama, raises what has been overthrown, or reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an oil lamp in the dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in manifold ways the Dhamma has been illustrated, I take refuge in the venerable Gotama and in the Dhamma and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus. Let the venerable Gotama accept me as an upāsaka (a follower, me) who henceforth for all my life have taken refuge (in him).'

8 METTASUTTA

A peaceful mind and goodwill towards all beings are praised —Text by Grimblot in Journal Asiatique, t xviii (1871), p 250, and by Childers in Khuddaka Pāṭha, p 15, translation (?) by Gogerly in the Ceylon Friend, 1839, p 211, by Childers in Kh Pāṭha and by L. Feer in Journal Asiatique, t xviii (1871), p 328

1 Whatever is to be done by one who is skilful in seeking (what is) good, having attained that tranquil state (of Nibbāna) —Let him be able and upright and conscientious and of soft speech, gentle, not proud, (142)

2 And contented and easily supported and having few cares, unburdened and with his senses calmed and wise, not arrogant, without (showing) greediness (when going his round) in families (143)

3 And let him not do anything mean for which others who are wise might reprove (him), may all beings be happy and secure, may they be happy-minded. (144)

4 Whatever living beings there are, either feeble or strong, all either long or great, middle-sized, short, small or large, (145)

5 Either seen or which are not seen, and which live far (or) near, either born or seeking birth, may all creatures be happy-minded (146)

6 Let no one deceive another, let him not despise (another) in any place, let him not out of anger or resentment wish harm to another (147)

7 As a mother at the risk of her life watches over her own child, her only child, so also let every one cultivate a boundless (friendly) mind towards all beings (148)

8 And let him cultivate goodwill towards all the world, a boundless (friendly) mind, above and below and across, unobstructed, without hatred, without enmity (149)

9 Standing, walking or sitting or lying, as long as he be awake, let him devote himself to this mind, this (way of) living they say is the best in this world (150)

10 He who, not having embraced (philosophical) views, is virtuous, endowed with (perfect) vision, after subduing greediness for sensual pleasures, will never again go to a mother's womb (151)

9 HEMAVATASUTTA

A dialogue between two Yakkhas on the qualities of Buddha
They go to Buddha, and after having their questions answered they, together with ten hundred Yakkhas, become the followers of Buddha

1 'To-day is the fifteenth, a fast day, a lovely night has come,'—so said the Yakkha Sâtâgira,—'let us (go and) see the renowned Master Gotama' (152)

2 'Is the mind of such a one well disposed towards all beings?'—so said the Yakkha Hemavata,—'are his thoughts restrained as to things wished for or not wished for?' (153)

3 'His mind is well disposed towards all beings, (the mind) of such a one,'—so said the Yakkha Sâtâgira,—'and his thoughts are restrained as to things wished for or not wished for' (154)

4 'Does he not take what has not been given (to him)?'—so said the Yakkha Hemavata,—'is he self-controlled (in his behaviour) to living beings? is he far from (a state of) carelessness? does he not abandon meditation?' (155)

5 'He does not take what has not been given (to him),'—so said the Yakkha Sâtâgira,—'and he is self-controlled (in his behaviour) to living beings, and he is far from (a state of) carelessness, Buddha does not abandon meditation' (156)

6 'Does he not speak falsely?'—so said the Yakkha Hemavata,—'is he not harsh-spoken? does he not utter slander? does he not talk nonsense?' (157)

7 'He does not speak falsely,'—so said the Yakkha Sâtâgira,—'he is not harsh-spoken, he does not utter slander, with judgment he utters what is good sense' (158)

8 'Is he not given to sensual pleasures?'—so said the Yakkha Hemavata,—'is his mind undisturbed? has he overcome folly? does he see clearly in (all) things (dhammas)?' (159)

9 'He is not given to sensual pleasures,'—so said the Yakkha Sâtâgira,—'and his mind is undisturbed, he has overcome all folly, Buddha sees clearly in (all) things' (160)

10 'Is he endowed with knowledge?'—so said the Yakkha Hemavata,—'is his conduct pure? have his passions been destroyed? is there no new birth (for him)?' (161)

11 'He is endowed with knowledge,'—so said the Yakkha Sâtâgira,—'and his conduct is pure, all his passions have been destroyed, there is no new birth for him' (162)

12 'The mind of the Muni is accomplished in deed and word, Gotama, who is accomplished by his knowledge and conduct, let us (go and) see' (163)

13 'Come, let us (go and) see Gotama, who has legs like an antelope, who is thin, who is wise, living on little food, not covetous, the Muni who is meditating in the forest' (164)

14 'Having gone to him who is a lion amongst those that wander alone and does not look for sensual pleasures, let us ask about the (means of) deliverance from the snares of death' (165)

15 'Let us ask Gotama, the preacher, the expounder, who has penetrated all things, Buddha who has overcome hatred and fear' (166)

16 'In what has the world originated?'—so said the Yakkha Hemavata,—'with what is the world intimate? by what is the world afflicted, after having grasped at what?' (167)

17 'In six the world has originated, O Hemavata,'—so said Bhagavat,—'with six it is intimate, by six the world is afflicted, after having grasped at six' (168)

18 Hemavata said 'What is the grasping by which the world is afflicted ? Asked about salvation, tell (me) how one is released from pain ?' (169)

19 Bhagavat said 'Five pleasures of sense are said to be in the world, with (the pleasure of) the mind as the sixth, having divested oneself of desire for these, one is thus released from pain (170)

20 'This salvation of the world has been told to you truly, this I tell you thus one is released from pain' (171)

21 Hemavata said 'Who in this world crosses the stream (of existence) ? who in this world crosses the sea ? who does not sink into the deep, where there is no footing and no support ?' (172)

22 Bhagavat said 'He who is always endowed with virtue, possessed of understanding, well composed, reflecting within himself, and thoughtful, crosses the stream that is difficult to cross (173)

23 'He who is disgusted with sensual pleasures, who has overcome all bonds and destroyed joy, such a one does not sink into the deep' (174)

24 Hemavata said 'He who is endowed with a profound understanding, seeing what is subtle, possessing nothing, not clinging to sensual pleasures, behold him who is in every respect liberated, the great Isi, walking in the divine path (175)

25 'He who has got a great name, sees what is subtle, imparts understanding, and does not cling to the abode of sensual pleasures, behold him, the all-knowing, the wise, the great Isi, walking in the noble path (176)

26 'A good sight indeed (has met) us to-day, a good daybreak, a beautiful rising, (for) we have seen the perfectly enlightened (sambuddham), who has crossed the stream, and is free from passion (177)

27 'These ten hundred Yakkhas, possessed of supernatural power and of fame, they all take refuge in thee, thou art our incomparable Master (178)

28 'We will wander about from village to village, from mountain to mountain, worshipping the perfectly enlightened and the perfection of the Dhamma<sup>1</sup>' (179)

10 ĀLAVAKASUTTA

The Yakkha Ālavaka first threatens Buddha, then puts some questions to him which Buddha answers, whereupon Ālavaka is converted

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Āvāṇi, in the realm of the Yakkha Ālavaka. Then the Yakkha Ālavaka went to the place where Bhagavat dwelt, and having gone there he said this to Bhagavat

'Come out, O Samana!'

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat came out

'Enter, O Samana!'

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat entered

A second time the Yakkha Ālavaka said this to Bhagavat 'Come out, O Samana!'

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat came out.

'Enter, O Samana!'

'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat entered

A third time the Yakkha Ālavaka said this to Bhagavat 'Come out, O Samana!'

• 'Yes, O friend!' so saying Bhagavat came out.

'Enter, O Samana!'

<sup>1</sup> Dhammassa ka sudhammatam

‘Yes, O friend!’ so saying Bhagavat entered

A fourth time the Yakkha Âlavaka said this to Bhagavat ‘Come out, O Samana!’

‘I shall not come out to thee, O friend, do what thou pleasest’

‘I shall ask thee a question, O Samana, if thou canst not answer it, I will either scatter thy thoughts or cleave thy heart, or take thee by thy feet and throw thee over to the other shore of the Gangâ’

‘I do not see, O friend, any one in this world nor in the world of gods, Mâras, Brahmans, amongst the beings comprising gods, men, Samanas, and Brâhmanas, who can either scatter my thoughts or cleave my heart, or take me by the feet and throw me over to the other shore of the Gangâ, however, O friend, ask what thou pleasest’

Then the Yakkha Âlavaka addressed Bhagavat in stanzas

1 ‘What in this world is the best property for a man? what, being well done, conveys happiness? what is indeed the sweetest of sweet things? how lived do they call life the best?’ (180)

2 Bhagavat said ‘Faith is in this world the best property for a man, Dhamma, well observed, conveys happiness, truth indeed is the sweetest of things, and that life they call the best which is lived with understanding’ (181)

3 Âlavaka said ‘How does one cross the stream (of existence)? how does one cross the sea? how does one conquer pain? how is one purified?’ (182)

4 Bhagavat said ‘By faith one crosses the stream, by zeal the sea, by exertion one conquers pain, by understanding one is purified’ (183)

5 Ālavaka said 'How does one obtain understanding? how does one acquire wealth? how does one obtain fame? how does one bind friends (to himself)? how does one not grieve passing away from this world to the other?' (184)

6 Bhagavat said 'He who believes in the Dhamma of the venerable ones as to the acquisition of Nibbāna, will obtain understanding from his desire to hear, being zealous and discerning' (185)

7 'He who does what is proper, who takes the yoke (upon him and) exerts himself, will acquire wealth, by truth he will obtain fame, and being charitable he will bind friends (to himself)' (186)

8 'He who is faithful and leads the life of a householder, and possesses the following four Dhammas (virtues), truth, justice (dhamma), firmness, and liberality,—such a one indeed does not grieve when passing away' (187)

9. 'Pray, ask also other Samanas and Brāhmanas far and wide, whether there is found in this world anything greater than truth, self-restraint, liberality, and forbearance' (188)

10 Ālavaka said 'Why should I now ask Samanas and Brāhmanas far and wide? I now know what is my future good' (189)

11 'For my good Buddha came to live at Āḷavi, now I know where (i e on whom bestowed) a gift will bear great fruit' (190)

12 'I will wander about from village to village, from town to town, worshipping the perfectly enlightened (sambuddha) and the perfection of the Dhamma.' (191)

Ālavakasutta is ended

11 VIGAYASUTTA

A reflection on the worthlessness of the human body, a follower of Buddha only sees the body as it really is, and consequently goes to Nibbāna —Comp Gātaka I, p 146

1 If either walking or standing, sitting or lying, any one contracts (or) stretches (his body, then) this is the motion of the body (192)

2 The body which is put together with bones and sinews, plastered with membrane and flesh, and covered with skin, is not seen as it really is (193)

3 It is filled with the intestines, the stomach, the lump of the liver, the abdomen, the heart, the lungs, the kidneys, the spleen (194)

4 With mucus, saliva, perspiration, lymph, blood, the fluid that lubricates the joints, bile, and fat (195)

5 Then in nine streams impurity flows always from it, from the eye the eye-excrement, from the ear the ear-excrement, (196)

6 Mucus from the nose, through the mouth it ejects at one time bile and (at other times) it ejects phlegm, and from (all) the body come sweat and dirt (197)

7 Then its hollow head is filled with the brain A fool led by ignorance thinks it a fine thing (198)

8 And when it lies dead, swollen and livid, discarded in the cemetery, relatives do not care (for it) (199)

9 Dogs eat it and jackals, wolves and worms, crows and vultures eat it, and what other living creatures there are (200)

10 The Bhikkhu possessed of understanding in this world, having listened to Buddha's words, he certainly knows it (i e the body) thoroughly, for he sees it as it really is (201)

11 As this (living body is) so is that (dead one), as this is so that (will be<sup>1</sup>), let one put away desire for the body, both as to its interior and as to its exterior (202)

12 Such a Bhikkhu who has turned away from desire and attachment, and is possessed of understanding in this world, has (already) gone to the immortal peace, the unchangeable state of Nibbāna (203)

13 This (body) with two feet is cherished (although) impure, ill-smelling, filled with various kinds of stench, and trickling here and there (204)

14 He who with such a body thinks to exalt himself or despises others—what else (is this) but blindness? (205)

12 MUNISUTTA

Definition of a Muni

1 From acquaintanceship arises fear, from house-life arises defilement, the houseless state, freedom from acquaintanceship—this is indeed the view of a Muni (206)

2 Whosoever, after cutting down the (sin that has) arisen, does not let (it again) take root and does not give way to it while springing up towards him, him

the solitarily wandering they call a Muni, such a great Isi has seen the state of peace<sup>1</sup> (207)

3 Having considered the causes (of sin, and) killed the seed, let him not give way to desire for it, such a Muni who sees the end of birth and destruction<sup>2</sup> (i e Nibbâna), after leaving reasoning behind, does not enter the number (of living beings)<sup>2</sup> (208)

4 He who has penetrated all the resting-places<sup>3</sup> (of the mind, and) does not wish for any of them,—such a Muni indeed, free from covetousness and free from greediness, does not gather up (resting-places), for he has reached the other shore (209)

5 The man who has overcome everything, who knows everything, who is possessed of a good understanding, undefiled in all things (dhamma), abandoning everything, liberated in the destruction of desire (i e Nibbâna), him the wise style a Muni<sup>4</sup> (210)

6 The man who has the strength of understanding, is endowed with virtue and (holy) works, is composed, delights in meditation, is thoughtful, free from ties, free from harshness (akhila), and free from passion, him the wise style a Muni (211)

7 The Muni that wanders solitarily, the zealous,

<sup>1</sup> Yo gâtam ukkhigga na ropayeyya
Gâyantam assa nânuppavekkhe
Tam âhu ekam muninam karantam,
Addakkhi so santupadam mahesi

<sup>2</sup> Samkhâya vatthûni pamâya bîgam
Sineham assa nânuppavekkhe,
Sa ve muni gâtikhayantadassi
Takkam pahâya na upeti samkham

that is not shaken by blame and praise, like a lion not trembling at noises, like the wind not caught in a net, like a lotus not soiled by water, leading others, not led by others, him the wise style a Muni (212)

8 Whosoever becomes firm as the post in a bathing-place, in whom others acknowledge propriety of speech, who is free from passion, and (endowed) with well-composed senses such a one the wise style a Muni (213)

9 Whosoever is firm, like a straight shuttle, and is disgusted with evil actions, reflecting on what is just and unjust, him the wise style a Muni (214)

10 Whosoever is self-restrained and does not do evil, is a young or middle-aged Muni, self-subdued, one that should not be provoked (as) he does not provoke any, him the wise style a Muni (215)

11 Whosoever, living upon what is given by others, receives a lump of rice from the top, from the middle or from the rest (of the vessel, and) does not praise (the giver) nor speak harsh words, him the wise style a Muni (216)

12 The Muni that wanders about abstaining from sexual intercourse, who in his youth is not fettered in any case, is abstaining from the insanity of pride, liberated, him the wise style a Muni (217)

13 The man who, having penetrated the world, sees the highest truth, such a one, after crossing the stream and sea (of existence), who has cut off all ties, is independent, free from passion, him indeed the wise style a Muni (218)

14 Two whose mode of life and occupation are quite different, are not equal a householder maintaining a wife, and an unselfish virtuous man A householder (is intent) upon the destruction of other living creatures, being unrestrained, but a Muni always protects living creatures, being restrained (219)

15 As the crested bird with the blue neck (the peacock) never attains the swiftness of the swan, even so a householder does not equal a Bhikkhu, a secluded Muni meditating in the wood (220)

1 RATANASUTTA

For all beings salvation is only to be found in Buddha, Dhamma, and Sangha — Text and translation in Childers' Khuddaka Pâṭha, p 6

1 Whatever spirits have come together here, either belonging to the earth or living in the air, let all spirits be happy, and then listen attentively to what is said (221)

2 Therefore, O spirits, do ye all pay attention, show kindness to the human race who both day and night bring their offerings, therefore protect them strenuously (222)

3 Whatever wealth there be here or in the other world, or whatever excellent jewel in the heavens, it is certainly not equal to Tathagata. This excellent jewel (is found) in Buddha, by this truth may there be salvation (223)

4 The destruction (of passion), the freedom from passion, the excellent immortality which Sakyamuni attained (being) composed, — there is nothing equal to that Dhamma. This excellent jewel (is found) in the Dhamma, by this truth may there be salvation (224)

5 The purity which the best of Buddhas praised, the meditation which they call uninterrupted, there is no meditation like this. This excellent jewel (is found) in the Dhamma, by this truth may there be salvation (225)

6 The eight persons that are praised by the righteous<sup>1</sup>, and make these four pairs, they are worthy of offerings, (being) Sugata's disciples, what is given to these will bear great fruit This excellent jewel (is found) in the Assembly (sangha), by this truth may there be salvation (226)

7 Those who have applied themselves studiously with a firm mind and free from desire to the commandments of Gotama, have obtained the highest gain, having merged into immortality, and enjoying happiness after getting it for nothing This excellent jewel (is found) in the Assembly, by this truth may there be salvation (227)

8 As a post in the front of a city gate is firm in the earth and cannot be shaken by the four winds, like that I declare the righteous man to be who, having penetrated the noble truths, sees (them clearly) This excellent jewel (is found) in the Assembly, by this truth may there be salvation (228)

9 Those who understand the noble truths well taught by the profoundly wise (i e Buddha), though they be greatly distracted, will not (have to) take the eighth birth This excellent jewel (is found) in the Assembly, by this truth may there be salvation (229)

10 On his (attaining the) bliss of (the right) view three things (dhammas) are left behind (by him) conceit and doubt and whatever he has got of virtue and (holy) works He is released also from the four hells, and he is incapable of committing the six

6 'Those who are rough, harsh, backbiting, treacherous, merciless, arrogant, and (who being) illiberal do not give anything to any one,—this is Âmagandha, but not the eating of flesh (243)

7 'Anger, intoxication, obstinacy, bigotry, deceit, envy, grandiloquence, pride and conceit, intimacy with the unjust,—this is Âmagandha, but not the eating of flesh (244)

8 'Those who in this world are wicked, and such as do not pay their debts, are slanderers, false in their dealings, counterfeiters, those who in this world being the lowest of men commit sin,—this is Âmagandha, but not the eating of flesh (245)

9 'Those persons who in this world are unrestrained (in their behaviour) towards living creatures, who are bent upon injuring after taking others' (goods), wicked, cruel, harsh, disrespectful,—this is Âmagandha, but not the eating of flesh (246)

10 'Those creatures who are greedy of these (living beings, who are) hostile, offending, always bent upon (evil) and therefore, when dead, go to darkness and fall with their heads downwards into hell,—this is Âmagandha, but not the eating of flesh (247)

11 'Neither the flesh of fish, nor fasting, nor nakedness, nor tonsure, nor matted hair, nor dirt, nor rough skins, nor the worshipping of the fire, nor the many immortal penances in the world, nor hymns, nor oblations, nor sacrifice, nor observance of the

13 Thus Bhagavat preached this subject again and again, (and the Brāhmaṇa) who was accomplished in the hymns (of the Vedas) understood it, the Muni who is free from defilement, independent, and difficult to follow, made it clear in various stanzas (250)

14 Having heard Buddha's well-spoken words, which are free from defilement and send away all pain, he worshipped Tathāgata's (feet) in humility, and took orders at once (251)

Buddha defines the highest blessing to a deity — Text by Grimblot in Journal Asiatique, t xviii (1871), p 229, and by Childers in Kh Pâṭha, p 4, translation by Gogerly in the Ceylon Friend, 1839, p 208, by Childers in Kh Pâṭha, p 4, and by L. Feer in Journal Asiatique, t xviii (1871), p 296

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Sâvatthî, in Geta-vana, in the park of Anâthapîṇḍika. Then, when the night had gone, a deity of beautiful appearance, having illuminated the whole Getavana, approached Bhagavat, and having approached and saluted him, he stood apart, and standing apart that deity addressed Bhagavat in a stanza

1 'Many gods and men have devised blessings, longing for happiness, tell thou (me) the highest blessing' (257)

5 SŪKILOMASUTTA

The Yakkha Sūkiloma threatens to harm Buddha, if he cannot answer his questions. Buddha answers that all passions proceed from the body.

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Gayā (seated) on a stone seat in the realm of the Yakkha Sūkiloma. And at that time the Yakkha Khara and the Yakkha Sūkiloma passed by, not far from Bhagavat. And then the Yakkha Khara said this to the Yakkha Sūkiloma: 'Is this man a Samana?'

Sūkiloma answered: 'He is no Samana, he is a Samanaka (a wretched Samana), however I will ascertain whether he is a Samana or a Samanaka.'

Then the Yakkha Sūkiloma went up to Bhagavat, and having gone up to him, he brushed against Bhagavat's body. Then Bhagavat took away his body. Then the Yakkha Sūkiloma said this to Bhagavat: 'O Samana, art thou afraid of me?'

Bhagavat answered: 'No, friend, I am not afraid of thee, but thy touching me is sinful.'

Sūkiloma said: 'I will ask thee a question, O Samana, if thou canst not answer it I will either scatter thy thoughts or cleave thy heart, or take thee by the feet and throw thee over to the other shore of the Gangā.'

Bhagavat answered: 'I do not see, O friend, neither in this world together with the world of the Devas, Māras, Brahmans, nor amongst the generation of Samana and Brāhmanas, gods and men, the one who can either scatter my thoughts or cleave my heart, or take me by the feet and throw me over to the other shore of the Gangā However ask, O friend, what thou pleasest' Then the Yakkha Sūkiloma addressed Bhagavat in a stanza

1 'What origin have passion and hatred, disgust, delight, and horror? wherefrom do they arise? whence arising do doubts vex the mind, as boys vex a crow?' (269)

2 Buddha said 'Passion and hatred have their origin from this (body), disgust, delight, and horror arise from this body, arising from this (body) doubts vex the mind, as boys vex a crow' (270)

3 'They originate in desire, they arise in self, like the shoots of the banyan tree, far and wide they are connected with sensual pleasures, like the māluvā creeper spread in the wood' (271)

4 'Those who know whence it (sin) arises, drive it away Listen, O Yakkha! They cross over this stream that is difficult to cross, and has not been crossed before, with a view to not being born again' (272)

6 DHAMMAKARIYASUTTA OR KAPILA-SUTTA

The Bhikkhus are admonished to rid themselves of sinful persons, and advised to lead a pure life

1 A just life, a religious life, this they call the best gem, if any one has gone forth from house-life to a houseless life (273)

2 But if he be harsh-spoken, and like a beast delighting in injuring (others), then the life of such a one is very wicked, and he increases his own pollution (274)

3 A Bhikkhu who delights in quarrelling and is shrouded in folly, does not understand the Dhamma that is preached and taught by Buddha (275)

4 Injuring his own cultivated mind, and led by ignorance, he does not understand that sin is the way leading to hell (276)

5 Having gone to calamity, from womb to womb, from darkness to darkness, such a Bhikkhu verily, after passing away, goes to pain (277)

6 As when there is a pit of excrement (that has become) full during a number of years,—he who should be such a one full of sin is difficult to purify (278)

7 Whom you know to be such a one, O Bhikkhus, (a man) dependent on a house, having sinful desires, sinful thoughts, and being with sinful deeds and objects, (279)

8 Him do avoid, being all in concord, blow him away as sweepings, put him away as rubbish (280)

9 Then remove as chaff those that are no Samānas, (but only) think themselves, blowing away those that have sinful desires and those with sinful deeds and objects (281)

10 Be pure and live together with the pure, being thoughtful, then agreeing (and) wise you will put an end to pain (282)

7 BRĀHMANADHAMMIKASUTTA

Wealthy Brāhmaṇas come to Buddha, asking about the customs of the ancient Brāhmaṇas. Buddha describes their mode of life and the change wrought in them by seeing the king's riches, and furthermore, how they induced the king to commit the sin of having living creatures slain at sacrifices On hearing Buddha's enlightened discourse the wealthy Brāhmanas are converted Compare Sp Hardy's Legends, p 46

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Sāvattthī, in Geta-vana, in the park of Anāthapīṇḍika Then many wealthy Brāhmanas of Kosala, decrepit, elderly, old, advanced in age, or arrived at extreme old age, went to Bhagavat, and having gone to him they talked pleasantly with him, and after having had some pleasant and remarkable talk with him, they sat down apart Sitting down apart these wealthy Brāhmanas said this to Bhagavat 'O venerable Gotama, are the Brāhmanas now-a-days seen (engaged) in the Brāhmanical customs (dhamma) of the ancient Brāhmanas ?'

Bhagavat answered 'The Brāhmanas now-a-days, O Brāhmanas, are not seen (engaged) in the Brāhmanical customs of the ancient Brāhmanas'

The Brāhmanas said 'Let the venerable Gotama tell us the Brāhmanical customs of the ancient Brāhmanas, if it is not inconvenient to the venerable Gotama'

Bhagavat answered 'Then listen, O Brāhmanas, pay great attention, I will speak'

'Yes,' so saying the wealthy Brāhmanas listened to Bhagavat Bhagavat said this

1 The old sages (isayo) were self-restrained, penitent, having abandoned the objects of the five senses, they studied their own welfare (283)

2 There were no cattle for the Brāhmanas, nor gold, nor corn, (but) the riches and corn of meditation were for them, and they kept watch over the best treasure (284)

3 What was prepared for them and placed as food at the door, they thought was to be given to those that seek for what has been prepared by faith (285)

4 With garments variously coloured, with beds and abodes, prosperous people from the provinces and the whole country worshipped those Brâhmanas (286)

5 Inviolable were the Brâhmanas, invincible, protected by the Dhamma, no one opposed them (while standing) at the doors of the houses anywhere (287)

6 For forty-eight years they practised juvenile chastity, the Brâhmanas formerly went in search of science and exemplary conduct (288)

7 The Brâhmanas did not marry (a woman belonging to) another (caste), nor did they buy a wife, they chose living together in mutual love after having come together (289)

8 Excepting from the time about the cessation of the menstruation else the Brâhmanas did not indulge in sexual intercourse<sup>1</sup> (290)

9 They praised chastity and virtue, rectitude, mildness, penance, tenderness, compassion, and patience (291)

10 He who was the best of them, a strong Brâhmana, did not (even) in sleep indulge in sexual intercourse (292)

11 Imitating his practices some wise men in this world praised chastity and patience (293)

12 Having asked for rice, beds, garments, butter, and oil, and gathered them justly, they made sacrifices out of them, and when the sacrifice came on, they did not kill cows (294)

13 Like unto a mother, a father, a brother, and other relatives the cows are our best friends, in which medicines are produced (295)

14 They give food, and they give strength, they likewise give (a good) complexion and happiness, knowing the real state of this, they did not kill cows (296)

15 They were graceful, large, handsome, renowned, Brâhmaṇas by nature, zealous for their several works, as long as they lived in the world, this race prospered (297)

16 But there was a change in them after gradually seeing the king's prosperity and adorned women, (298)

17 Well-made chariots drawn by noble horses, carpets in variegated colours, palaces and houses, divided into compartments and measured out, (299)

18 The great human wealth, attended with a number of cows, and combined with a flock of beautiful women, the Brâhmaṇas became covetous (300)

19 They then, in this matter, having composed hymns, went to Okkāka, and said 'Thou hast much wealth and corn, sacrifice thy great property, sacrifice thy great wealth' (301)

20 And then the king, the lord of chariots, instructed by the Brâhmaṇas, brought about assamedha, purisamedha, sammâpâsa, and vâṭapeyya without any hinderance, and having offered these sacrifices he gave the Brâhmaṇas wealth (302)

21 Cows, beds, garments, and adorned women, and well-made chariots, drawn by noble horses, carpets in variegated colours, (303)

31 So Dhamma being lost, the Suddas and the Vessikas disagreed, the Khattiyas disagreed in manifold ways, the wife despised her husband (313)

32 The Khattiyas and the Brâhmanas and those others who had been protected by their castes, after doing away with their disputes on descent, fell into the power of sensual pleasures (314)

This having been said, those wealthy Brâhmanas said to Bhagavat as follows

‘ It is excellent, O venerable Gotama ! It is excellent, O venerable Gotama ! As one raises what has been overthrown, or reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an oil lamp in the dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in manifold ways the Dhamma has been illustrated, we take refuge in the venerable Gotama, in the Dhamma, and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus, may the venerable Gotama receive us as followers (upâsaka), who from this day for life have taken refuge (in him) ’

8 NĀVĀSUTTA

On choosing a good and learned teacher

1. A man should worship him from whom he learns the Dhamma, as the gods (worship) Indra, the learned man being worshipped and pleased with him, makes the (highest) Dhamma manifest (315)

2 Having heard and considered that (Dhamma), the wise man practising the Dhamma that is in accordance with the (highest) Dhamma, becomes learned, expert, and skilful, strenuously associating with such a (learned teacher) (316)

3 He who serves a low (teacher), a fool who has not understood the meaning, and who is envious, goes to death not having overcome doubt, and not having understood the Dhamma (317)

4 As a man, after descending into a river, a turbid water with a rapid current, is borne along following the current,—how will he be able to put others across? (318)

5 Even so how will a man, not having understood the Dhamma, and not attending to the explanation of the learned and not knowing it himself, not having overcome doubt, be able to make others understand it? (319)

6 As one, having gone on board a strong ship, provided with oars and rudder, carries across in it many others, knowing the way to do it, and being expert and thoughtful, (320)

7 So also he who is accomplished, of a cultivated mind, learned, intrepid, makes others endowed with attention and assiduity understand it, knowing (it himself) (321)

8 Therefore indeed one should cultivate (the society of) a good man, who is intelligent and learned, he who leads a regular life, having understood what is good and penetrated the Dhamma, will obtain happiness (322)

9 KIMSĪLASUTTA

How to obtain the highest good

1 By what virtue, by what conduct, and performing what works, will a man be perfectly established (in the commandments) and obtain the highest good? (323)

2 Let him honour old people, not be envious, let him know the (right) time for seeing his teachers, let him know the (right) moment for listening to their religious discourses, let him assiduously hearken to their well-spoken (words) (324)

3 Let him in due time go to the presence of his teachers, let him be humble after casting away obstinacy, let him remember and practise what is good, the Dhamma, self-restraint, and chastity (325)

4 Let his pleasure be the Dhamma, let him delight in the Dhamma, let him stand fast in the Dhamma, let him know how to enquire into the Dhamma, let him not raise any dispute that pollutes the Dhamma, and let him spend his time in (speaking) well-spoken truths<sup>1</sup> (326)

5 Having abandoned ridiculous talk, lamentation, corruption, deceit, hypocrisy, greediness and haughtiness, clamour and harshness, depravity and foolishness, let him live free from infatuation, with a steady mind (327)

6 The words, the essence of which is understood, are well spoken, and what is heard, if understood, contains the essence of meditation, but the understanding and learning of the man who is hasty and careless, does not increase (328)

Advice not to be lukewarm and slothful

1 Rise, sit up, what is the use of your sleeping, to those who are sick, pierced by the arrow (of pain), and suffering, what sleep is there? (330)

2 Rise, sit up, learn steadfastly for the sake of peace, let not the king of death, knowing you to be indolent (pamatta), befool you and lead you into his power (331)

3 Conquer this desire which gods and men stand wishing for and are dependent upon, let not the (right) moment pass by you, for those who have let the (right) moment pass, will grieve when they have been consigned to hell (332)

4 Indolence (pamâda) is defilement, continued indolence is defilement, by earnestness (appamâda) and knowledge let one pull out his arrow (333)

11 RÂHULASUTTA

Buddha recommends the life of a recluse to Râhula, and admonishes him to turn his mind away from the world and to be moderate

1 Bhagavat said 'Dost thou not despise the wise man, from living with him constantly?' Is he who holds up a torch to mankind honoured by thee ?' (334)

2 Râhula 'I do not despise the wise man, from living with him constantly, he who holds up a torch to mankind is always honoured by me' (335)

Vatthugâthâ

3 Bhagavat 'Having abandoned the objects of the five senses, the beautiful, the charming, and gone out from thy house with faith, do thou put an end to pain (336)

4 'Cultivate (the society of) virtuous friends and a distant dwelling-place, secluded and quiet, be moderate in food<sup>1</sup> (337)

5 'Robes, alms (in bowl), requisites (for the sick), a dwelling-place,—do not thirst after these (things), that thou mayest not go back to the world again (338)

6 'Be subdued according to the precepts, and as to the five senses, be attentive as regards thy body, and be full of disgust (with the world) (339)

7 'Avoid signs, what is pleasant and is accompanied with passion, turn thy mind undisturbed and well composed to what is not pleasant (340)

8 'Cherish what is signless, leave the inclinations for pride, then by destroying pride thou shalt wander calm' (341)

12 VANGĪSASUTTA

Vangīsa desires to know the fate of Nigrodhakappa, whether he has been completely extinguished, or whether he is still with some elements of existence left behind. He is answered by Buddha

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Āḷavi, in the temple of Aggāḷava. At that time the teacher of the venerable Vangīsa, the Thera, by name Nigrodhakappa, had attained bliss not long before (aśīra-parinibbūta). Then this reflection occurred to the venerable Vangīsa, while retired and meditating

Whether my teacher be blessed (parinibbūta) or whether he be not blessed. Then the venerable Vangīsa, at the evening time, coming forth from his retirement went to Bhagavat, and having gone to him he sat down apart after saluting him, and sitting down apart the venerable Vangīsa said this to Bhagavat

‘Lord, while retired and meditating, this reflection occurred to me here. Whether my teacher be blessed or whether he be not blessed’

Then the venerable Vangīsa, rising from his seat, throwing his robe over one shoulder and bending his joined hands towards Bhagavat, addressed him in stanzas

1 ‘We ask the Master of excellent understanding he who in this world had cut off doubt, died at Aggāḷava, a Bhikkhu, well known, famous, and of a calm mind (342)

2 ‘The name “Nigrodhakappa” was given to that Brāhmaṇa by thee, O Bhagavat, he wandered about worshipping thee, having liberation in view, strong, and seeing Nibbāna (343)

3 'O Sakka, thou all-seeing, we all wish to learn (something about) this disciple, our ears are ready to hear, thou art our Master, thou art incomparable (344)

4 'Cut off our doubt, tell me of him, inform us of the blessed, O thou of great understanding, speak in the midst of us, O thou all-seeing, as the thousand-eyed Sakka (speaks in the midst) of the gods (345)

5 'Whatever ties there are in this world (constituting) the way to folly, combined with ignorance, forming the seat of doubt, they do not exist before Tathāgata, for he is the best eye of men (346)

6 'If a man does not for ever dispel the sin as the wind (dispels) a mass of clouds, all the world will be enveloped in darkness, not even illustrious men will shine (347)

7 'Wise men are light-bringers, therefore, O wise man, I consider thee as such a one, we have come to him who beholds meditation, reveal Kappa to us in the assembly (348)

8 'Uplift quickly, O thou beautiful one, thy beautiful voice, like the swans drawing up (their necks), sing softly with a rich and well-modulated voice, we will all listen to thee attentively (349)

9 'Having earnestly called upon him who has completely left birth and death behind and shaken off (sin), I will make him proclaim the Dhamma, for ordinary people cannot do what they want, but the Tathāgatas act with a purpose<sup>1</sup> (350)

3 'Let the Bhikkhu subdue his passion for human and divine pleasures, then after conquering existence and understanding the Dhamma, such a one will wander rightly in the world' (360)

14 DHAMMIKASUTTA

Buddha shows Dhammika what the life of a Bhikkhu and what the life of a householder ought to be

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Sāvattthī, in Geta-vana, in the park of Anāthapīṇḍika. Then the follower (upāsaka) Dhammika, together with five hundred followers, went to Bhagavat, and having gone to Bhagavat and saluted him, he sat down apart, sitting down apart the follower Dhammika addressed Bhagavat in stanzas

1 'I ask thee, O Gotama of great understanding, How is a Sāvaka (disciple) to act to be a good one? is it the one who goes from his house to the wilderness, or the followers with a house?' (375)

2 'For thou knowest the doings of this world and that of the gods, and the final end, there is nobody like thee seeing the subtle meaning (of things), they call thee the excellent Buddha' (376)

3 'Knowing all knowledge thou hast revealed the Dhamma, having compassion on creatures, thou hast removed the veil (of the world), thou art all-seeing, thou shinest spotless in all the world' (377)

4 'The king of elephants, Erāvaṇa by name, hearing that thou wert Gīṇa (the Conqueror), came to thy presence, and having conversed with thee he went away delighted, after listening (to thee, and saying), "Very good!"' (378)

5 'Also king Vessavaṇa Kuvera came to ask thee about the Dhamma, him, too, thou, O wise man, answeredst when asked, and he also after listening was delighted' (379)

6 'All these disputatious Tittḥīyas and Āgīvikas and Nigantḥas do not any of them overcome thee in understanding, as a man standing (does not overcome) the one that is walking quickly' (380)

7 'All these disputatious Brāhmaṇas, and there are even some old Brāhmaṇas, all are bound by thy opinion, and others also that are considered disputants' (381)

8 'This subtle and pleasant Dhamma that has been well proclaimed by thee, O Bhagavat, and which we all long to hear, do thou, O thou best of Buddhas, speak to us when asked (382)

9 'Let all these Bhikkhus and also Upâsakas that have sat down to listen, hear the Dhamma learnt (anubuddha) by the stainless (Buddha), as the gods (hear) the well-spoken (words) of Vâsava' (383)

10 Bhagavat 'Listen to me, O Bhikkhus, I will teach you the Dhamma that destroys sin, do ye keep it, all of you, let him who looks for what is salutary, the thoughtful, cultivate the mode of life suitable for Pabbagitas (384)

11 'Let not the Bhikkhu walk about at a wrong time, let him go to the village for alms at the right time, for ties ensnare the one that goes at a wrong time, therefore Buddhas do not go at a wrong time (385)

12 'Form, sound, taste, smell, and touch which intoxicate creatures, having subdued the desire for (all) these things (dhammas), let him in due time go in for his breakfast (386)

13 'And let the Bhikkhu, after having obtained his food at the right time and returned, sit down alone and privately, reflecting within himself let him not turn his mind to outward things, (but be) self-collected (387)

14 'If he speak with a Sâvaka or with anybody else, or with a Bhikkhu, let him talk about the excellent Dhamma, (but let him) not (utter) slander, nor blaming words against others (388)

15 'For some utter language contradicting others<sup>1</sup>, those narrow-minded ones we do not praise Ties

from here and there ensnare them, and they send their mind far away in that (dispute) (389)

16 ' Let a Sāvaka of him with the excellent understanding (Buddha), after hearing the Dhamma taught by Sugata, discriminately seek for food, a monastery, a bed and a chair, and water for taking away the dirt of his clothes. (390)

17 ' But without clinging to these things, to food, to bed and chair, to water for taking away the dirt of his clothes, let a Bhikkhu be like a waterdrop on a lotus (391)

18 ' A householder's work I will also tell you, how a Sāvaka is to act to be a good one, for that complete Bhikkhu-dhamma cannot be carried out by one who is taken up by (worldly) occupations (392)

19 ' Let him not kill, nor cause to be killed any living being, nor let him approve of others killing, after having refrained from hurting all creatures, both those that are strong and those that tremble in the world (393)

20 ' Then let the Sāvaka abstain from (taking) anything in any place that has not been given (to him), knowing (it to belong to another), let him not cause any one to take, nor approve of those that take, let him avoid all (sort of) theft (394)

21 ' Let the wise man avoid an unchaste life as a burning heap of coals, not being able to live a life of chastity, let him not transgress with another man's wife (395)

22 ' Let no one speak falsely to another in the hall of justice or in the hall of the assembly, let him not cause (any one) to speak (falsely), nor approve of those that speak (falsely), let him avoid all (sort of) untruth (396)

23 'Let the householder who approves of this Dhamma, not give himself to intoxicating drinks, let him not cause others to drink, nor approve of those that drink, knowing it to end in madness (397)

24 'For through intoxication the stupid commit sins and make other people intoxicated, let him avoid this seat of sin, this madness, this folly, delightful to the stupid (398)

25 'Let him not kill any living being, let him not take what has not been given (to him), let him not speak falsely, and let him not drink intoxicating drinks, let him refrain from unchaste sexual intercourse, and let him not at night eat untimely food (399)

26 'Let him not wear wreaths nor use perfumes, let him lie on a couch spread on the earth —this they call the eightfold abstinence (uposatha), proclaimed by Buddha, who has overcome pain (400)

27 'Then having with a believing mind kept abstinence (uposatha) on the fourteenth, fifteenth, and the eighth days of the half-month, and (having kept) the complete Pāṭihārapakkha<sup>1</sup> consisting of eight parts, (401)

28 'And then in the morning, after having kept abstinence, let a wise man with a believing mind, gladdening the assembly of Bhikkhus with food and drink, make distributions according to his ability (402)

29 'Let him dutifully maintain his parents, and practise an honourable trade, the householder who observes this strenuously goes to the gods by name Sayampabhas' (403)

1 PABBAGGÂSUTTA

King Bimbisâra feeling interested in Buddha tries to tempt him with wealth, but is mildly rebuked by Buddha.

1 I will praise an ascetic life such as the clearly-seeing (Buddha) led, such as he thinking (over it) approved of as an ascetic life (404)

2 'This house life is pain, the seat of impurity,' and 'an ascetic life is an open-air life,' so considering he embraced an ascetic life (405)

3 Leading an ascetic life, he avoided with his body sinful deeds, and having (also) abandoned sin in words, he cleansed his life (406)

4 Buddha went to Râgagaha, he entered the Giribbaga in Magadha for alms with a profusion of excellent signs (407)

5 Bimbisâra standing in his palace saw him, and seeing him endowed with these signs, he spoke these words (408)

6 'Attend ye to this man, he is handsome, great, clean, he is both endowed with good conduct, and he does not look before him further than a yuga (the distance of a plough) (409)

7 'With downcast eyes, thoughtful, this one is not like those of low caste, let the king's messengers run off, (and ask) "Where is the Bhikkhu going?"' (410)

8 The king's messengers followed after (him, and said) 'Where is the Bhikkhu going, where will he reside?' (411)

9 'Going begging from house to house, watching the door (of the senses), well restrained, he quickly filled his bowl, conscious, thoughtful' (412)

10 'Wandering about in search of alms, having gone out of town, the Muni repaired to (the mountain) Pandava, it must be there he lives' (413)

11 Seeing that he had entered his dwelling, the messengers then sat down, and one messenger having returned announced it to the king (414)

12 'This Bhikkhu, O great king, is sitting on the east side of Pandava, like a tiger, like a bull, like a lion in a mountain cave' (415)

13 Having heard the messenger's words, the Khattiya in a fine chariot hastening went out to the Pandava mountain (416)

14 Having gone as far as the ground was practicable for a chariot, the Khattiya, after alighting from the chariot, and approaching on foot, having come up (to him), seated himself (417)

15 Having sat down the king then exchanged the usual ceremonious greetings with him, and after the complimentary talk he spoke these words (418)

16 'Thou art both young and delicate, a lad in his first youth, possessed of a fine complexion, like a high-born Khattiya' (419)

17 'I will ornament the army-house, and at the head of the assembly of chiefs (nāga) give (thee) wealth, enjoy it and tell me thy birth, when asked' (420)

18 Buddha 'Just beside Himavanta, O king, there lives a people endowed with the power of wealth, the inhabitants of Kosala' (421)

19 'They are Âdikâs by family, Sâkiyas by birth, from that family I have wandered out, not longing for sensual pleasures (422)

20 'Seeing misery in sensual pleasures, and considering the forsaking of the world as happiness, I will go and exert myself, in this my mind delights' (423)

On well-spoken language

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Sâvatthî in Geta-that is provided with four requisites is well-spoken, not ill-spoken, both faultless and blameless to the wise'

'Which four?'

'O Bhikkhus, the Bhikkhu speaks well-spoken (language), not ill-spoken, he speaks what is right (dhamma), not what is unrighteous (adhamma), he speaks what is pleasing, not what is displeasing, he speaks what is true, not what is false O Bhikkhus, and blameless to the wise' This said Bhagavat

When Sugata had said this, then the Master spoke the following

1 'Well-spoken language the just call the principal (thing), let one speak what is right (dhamma), not what is unrighteous (adhamma), that is the second, let one speak what is pleasing, not what is unpleasing, that is the third, let one speak what is true, not what is false, that is the fourth' (449)

Then the venerable Vangisa, rising from his seat, throwing his robe over one shoulder and bending his joined hands towards Bhagavat, said this 'It occurs to me, O Sugata'

'Let it occur to thee, O Vangisa!' said Bhagavat

Then the venerable Vangisa, standing before Bhagavat, praised him with appropriate stanzas

2 'Let one say such words by which he does not pain himself, nor hurt others, such words are truly well-spoken (450)

3 'Let one speak pleasing words which are received joyfully (by all), and which (saying) he, without committing sins, speaks what is pleasing to others (451)

4 'Truth verily is immortal speech, this is a true saying, in what is true, in what is good, and in what is right, the just stand firm, so they say (452)

4 SUNDARIKABHĀRADVĀGASUTTA

Buddha shows to Sundarikabhāradvāga on whom to bestow oblations, and the Brāhmaṇa is finally converted

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt in Kosala on the bank of the river Sundarikā And during that time the Brāhmaṇa Sundarikabhāradvāga made offerings to the fire and worshipped the fire Then the Brāhmaṇa Sundarikabhāradvāga, having made offerings to the fire and worshipped the fire, and having risen from his seat, looked about him on all sides towards the four quarters of the globe, saying 'Who is to enjoy the rest of this oblation?' The Brāhmaṇa Sundarikabhāradvāga saw Bhagavat sitting not far off at the root of a tree, wrapped up head and body, and seeing him he, after taking the rest of the oblation with his left hand and the waterpot with his right hand, went up to Bhagavat Then Bhagavat, on hearing the footsteps of Sundarikabhāradvāga, the Brāhmaṇa, uncovered his head Then the Brāhmaṇa Sundarikabhāradvāga thought 'This man is shaved, this man is a shaveling,' and he wished to return again from there Then this came to the mind of Sundarikabhāradvāga, the Brāhmaṇa 'Some Brāhmaṇas also here are shaved, I think I shall go up and ask him about his descent' Then the Brāhmaṇa Sundarikabhāradvāga went up to Bhagavat, and having gone up he said this 'Of what family art thou?'

Then Bhagavat answered Sundarikabhāradvāga, the Brāhmaṇa, in stanzas

1 'No Brāhmaṇa am I, nor a king's son, nor any

Vessa, having thoroughly observed the class of common people, I wander about the world reflectingly, possessing nothing (454)

2 'Dressed in a sanghâ<sup>1</sup> and houseless I wander about, with my hair cut off, calm, not intermixing with people in this world Thou askest me an unseasonable question about (my) family, O Brâhmana !' (455)

3 Sundarikabhâradvâga 'Sir, Brâhmanas together with Brâhmanas ask truly, Art thou a Brâhmana ?'

Bhagavat 'If thou sayest, I am a Brâhmana, and callest me no Brâhmana, then I ask thee about the Sâvittî that consists of three padas and twenty-four syllables<sup>2</sup>' (456)

4 Sundarikabhâradvâga 'For what (reason) did the Isis, men, Khattiyas, Brâhmanas make offerings to the gods abundantly in this world ?'

Bhagavat 'He who, perfect and accomplished at the time of offering, obtains the ear of one or the other (god), he will succeed, so I say' (457)

5 'Surely his offering will bear fruit,'—so said the Brâhmana,—'because we saw such an accomplished man, for by not seeing such as you, somebody else will enjoy the oblation' (458)

6 Bhagavat 'Therefore, O Brâhmana, as you have come here to ask for something, ask, perhaps thou mightest here find one that is calm, without anger, free from pain, free from desire, one with a good understanding' (459)

7 Sundarikabhâradvâga 'I delight in offering, O Gotama, I desire to make an offering, but I do not understand it, do thou instruct me, tell me in what case the offering succeeds' (460)

8 Bhagavat 'Therefore, O Brâhmaṇa, lend me thy ear, I will teach thee the Dhamma (461)

9 'Do not ask about descent, but ask about conduct, from wood, it is true, fire is born, (likewise) a firm Muni, although belonging to a low family, may become noble, when restrained (from sinning) by humility (462)

10 'He who is subdued by truth, endowed with temperance, accomplished, leading a religious life, on such a one in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brâhmaṇa who has good works in view, offer (463)

11 'Those who, after leaving sensual pleasures, wander about houseless, well restrained, being like a straight shuttle, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brâhmaṇa who has good works in view, offer (464)

12 'Those whose passions are gone, whose senses are well composed, who are liberated like the moon out of the grasp of Râhu, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brâhmaṇa who has good works in view, offer (465)

13 'Those who wander about in the world without clinging (to anything), always thoughtful, having left selfishness, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brâhmaṇa who has good works in view, offer (466)

14 'He who, after leaving sensual pleasures, wanders about victorious, he who knows the end of birth and death, who is perfectly happy (parinib-

buta), calm like a deep water, Tathâgata deserves the oblation (467)

15 'Just with the just and far from the unjust<sup>1</sup>, Tathâgata is possessed of infinite understanding, undefiled both in this world and in the other, Tathâgata deserves the oblation (468)

16 'He in whom there lives no deceit, no arrogance, he who is free from cupidity, free from selfishness, free from desire, who has banished anger, who is calm, the Brâhmaṇa who has removed the taint of grief, Tathâgata deserves the oblation (469)

17 'He who has banished (every) resting-place of the mind, he for whom there is no grasping, he who covets nothing either in this world or in the other, Tathâgata deserves the oblation<sup>2</sup> (470)

18 'He who is composed, who has crossed over the stream (of existence) and knows the Dhamma by (taking) the highest view (of it), he whose passions are destroyed, who is wearing the last body, Tathâgata deserves the oblation (471)

19 'He whose passion for existence and whose harsh talk are destroyed, are perished, (and therefore) exist not, he the accomplished and in every respect liberated Tathâgata deserves the oblation (472)

20 'He who has shaken off all ties, for whom there are no ties, who amongst arrogant beings is free from arrogance, having penetrated pain together with its domain and subject, Tathâgata deserves the oblation (473)

21 'He who, without giving himself up to desire, sees seclusion (i e Nibbâna), who has overcome the view that is to be taught by others, to whom there are no objects of sense whatever, Tathâgata deserves the oblation<sup>1</sup> (474)

22 'He to whom all Dhammas of every description, after he has penetrated them, are destroyed, are perished, (and therefore) exist not, he who is calm, liberated in the destruction of attachment (1 e Nibbâna), Tathâgata deserves the oblation (475)

23 'He who sees the destruction of bond and birth, who has totally evaded the path of passion, (who is) pure, faultless, spotless, undepraved, Tathâgata deserves the oblation (476)

24 'He who does not measure himself by himself, who is composed, upright, firm, without desire, free from harshness (akhila), free from doubt, Tathâgata deserves the oblation (477)

25 'He to whom there is no cause of folly, who has a supernatural insight in all Dhammas, who wears the last body, and who has acquired perfect enlightenment, the highest, the blessed, (for him) thus a Yakkha's purification (takes place)<sup>2</sup>' (478)

26 Sundarikabhâradvâga 'May my offering be a true offering, because I met with such a one out of the accomplished, Brahman is my witness, may Bhagavat accept me, may Bhagavat enjoy my oblation' (479)

27 Bhagavat 'What is obtained by stanzas is not to be enjoyed by me, this is not the custom of the clearly-seeing, O Brâhmana, Buddhas reject what is obtained by stanzas While the Dhamma

the venerable Gotama, in the Dhamma, and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus, I wish to receive the robe and the orders from the venerable Gotama'

The Brāhmaṇa Sundarikabhâradvâga received the pabbaggâ from Bhagavat, and he received also the upasampadâ, and the venerable Bhâradvâga, having lately received the upasampadâ, leading a solitary, retired, strenuous, ardent, energetic life, lived after having in a short time in this existence by his own understanding ascertained and possessed himself of that highest perfection of a religious life for the sake of which men of good family rightly wander away from their houses to a houseless state 'Birth had been destroyed, a religious life had been led, what was to be done had been done, there was nothing else (to be done) for this existence,' so he perceived, and the venerable Bhâradvâga became one of the arahats

5 MĀGHASUTTA

Buddha on being asked tells Mâgha of those worthy of offerings and the blessing of offering

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Râgagaha, in the mountain (called) the Vulture's Peak (Gigghakûta)

Then the young man Mâgha went to Bhagavat, and having gone to him he talked pleasantly with him, and after having had some pleasant, remarkable conversation with him he sat down apart, sitting down apart the young man Mâgha spoke this to Bhagavat

‘O venerable Gotama, I am a liberal giver, bountiful, suitable to beg of, justly I seek for riches, and having sought for riches justly, I give out of the justly obtained and justly acquired riches to one, to two, to three, to four, to five, to six, to seven, to eight, to nine, to ten, to twenty, to thirty, to forty, to fifty, to a hundred, I give still more (I should like to know), O venerable Gotama, whether I, while so giving, so offering, produce much good’

‘Certainly, O young man, dost thou in so offering produce much good, he, O young man, who is a liberal giver, bountiful, suitable to beg of, and who justly seeks for riches, and having sought for riches justly, gives out of his justly obtained and justly acquired riches to one, to two, to three, to four, to five, to six, to seven, to eight, to nine, to ten, to twenty, to thirty, to forty, to fifty, to a hundred, and gives still more, produces much good’

Then the young man Mâgha addressed Bhagavat in stanzas

1 ‘I ask the venerable Gotama, the bountiful,’—so said the young man Mâgha,—‘wearing the yellow robe, wandering about houseless’ ‘He who is a householder, suitable to beg of, a donor, who, desirous of good, offers having what is good in view, and giving to others in this world food and drink,—where (1 e on whom bestowed) will the oblation of such an offerer prosper?’ (487)

2 ‘He who is a householder, suitable to beg of, a donor,’ O Mâgha,—so said Bhagavat,—‘who, desirous of good, offers having what is good in view, and giving to others in this world food and drink, such a one will prosper with those worthy of offerings’ (488)

3 'He who is a householder, suitable to beg of, a donor,'—so said the young man,—'who, desirous of good, offers having what is good in view, and giving to others in this world food and drink,—tell me (I being such a one), O Bhagavat, of those worthy of offerings' (489)

4 Bhagavat 'Those indeed who wander about in the world without clinging to anything and without possessing anything, perfect, self-restrained, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (490)

5 'Those who have cut through all bonds and fetters, who are subdued, liberated, free from pain, and free from desire, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (491)

6 'Those who are released from all bonds, who are subdued, liberated, free from pain, and free from desire on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (492)

7 'Those who, having forsaken both passion and hatred and folly, have destroyed their desires and lead a religious life, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer<sup>1</sup> (493)

8 'Those in whom there lives no deceit, no arrogance, who are free from cupidity, free from selfishness, free from desire, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (494)

9 'Those indeed who without being lost in desire,

after crossing the stream (of existence), wander about free from selfishness, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (495)

10 'Those in whom there is no desire for anything in the world, nor for existence after existence here or in the other world, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (496)

11 'Those who, after leaving sensual pleasures, wander about houseless, well restrained, being like a straight shuttle, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (497)

12 'Those whose passions are gone, whose senses are well composed, who are liberated like the moon out of the grasp of Rāhu, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (498)

13 'Those who are calm, whose passions are gone, who are without anger, and for whom there is no transmigration after having left here, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (499)

14 'Those who, after leaving birth and death altogether, have conquered all doubt, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (500)

15 'Those who wander about in the world with themselves for a light, not possessed of anything, in every respect liberated, on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (501)

16 'Those who in this world rightly understand this "This is the last (birth), there is no re-birth," on such in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer (502)

17 'He who is accomplished, and delights in meditation, thoughtful, possessed of thorough enlightenment, a refuge for many, on such a one in due time people should bestow oblations, let the Brāhmaṇa who has good (works) in view, offer' (503)

18 'Certainly my question was not in vain, Bhagavat has told me of those worthy of offerings, for thou truly knowest this in this world, as surely to thee this Dhamma is known. (504)

19 'He who is a householder, suitable to beg of, a donor,'—so said the young man Māgha,—'who, desirous of good, offers having what is good in view, and giving to others in this world food and drink,—tell me (I being such a one), O Bhagavat, of the blessing of offering' (505)

20 'Offer, O Māgha,'—so said Bhagavat,—'and while offering make calm thy mind in all things, the object of the one that offers is the oblation, standing fast in this he leaves hatred behind (506)

21 'Such a one whose passion is gone will repress hatred, cultivating an unbounded friendly mind, continually strenuous night and day he will spread infinite goodness through all regions' (507)

22 Māgha 'Who prospers? who is liberated and who is bound? In which way can one by himself go to Brahmaloṇa? Tell this to me who does not know, O Muni, when asked Bhagavat is indeed my witness that Brahman is seen by me to-day, for thou art to us equal to Brahman, this is the truth, how can one attain Brahmaloṇa, O thou glorious one?' (508)

23 'He who offers the threefold blessing of oblation,' O Mâgha,—so said Bhagavat,—'such a one will prosper with those worthy of offerings, so, having offered properly, he who is suitable to beg of attains Brahmaloaka, so I say' (509)

This having been said, Mâgha the young man spoke as follows to Bhagavat 'Excellent, O venerable Gotama! Excellent, O venerable Gotama! As one raises what has been overthrown, or reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an oil lamp in the dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in manifold ways the Dhamma has been illustrated, I take refuge in the venerable Gotama and in the Dhamma and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus Let the venerable Gotama accept me as an upâsaka (a follower, me), who henceforth for all my life have taken refuge (in him)'

6 SABHIYASUTTA

Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka, goes to the six famous teachers of his time to have his questions answered, but not having his doubts solved, he repairs to Gotama and asks him how one is to behave to become a Brâhmana, a Samana, a Nahâtaka, a Khettagina, a Kusala, a Pandita, a Muni, a Vedagâ, an Anuvâdita, a Dhîra, an Âgânîya, a Sottiya, an Ariya, a Karanavat, a Paribbâgaka Bhagavat answers his questions, and Sabhiya finally receives the robe and the orders from Buddha

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Râgagaha, in Veḷuvana, in Kalandakanivâpa And at that time questions were recited to Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka

(wandering mendicant), by an old benevolent deity 'He who, O Sabhiya, be it a Samana or a Brâhmana, explains these questions to thee when asked, near him thou shouldst live a religious life'

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka, having learnt the questions from that deity, went to whatever Samanas and Brâhmanas there were that had an assembly (of Bhikkhus), a crowd (of followers), and were well-known teachers, famous leaders, considered excellent by the multitude, as Pûrana-Kassapa, Makkhali-Gosâla, Agita-Kesakambali, Pakudha-Kakkâyana, Sañgaya-Belatthiputta, and Nigantha-Nâtaputta. Those he went to, and after going to them, he asked the questions. They, being asked the questions by Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka, did not succeed (in answering them), and not succeeding they showed wrath and hatred and discontent, and they also in return put questions to Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka.

Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka. 'Whatever Samanas and Brâhmanas there are that have an assembly (of Bhikkhus), a crowd (of followers), and are well-known teachers, famous leaders, considered excellent by the multitude, as Pûrana-Kassapa, Makkhali-Gosâla, Agita-Kesakambali, Pakudha-Kakkâyana, Sañgaya-Belatthiputta, and Nigantha-Nâtaputta, they, being asked questions by me, did not succeed (in answering them), and not succeeding they showed wrath and hatred and discontent, and they also in return put questions to me in this matter, surely I think I shall go back to what I have left, and enjoy sensual pleasures.'

Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka. 'This Samana Gotama has both an assembly (of Bhikkhus) and a crowd (of followers), and is a well-known teacher, a famous leader, considered excellent by the multitude, surely I think I shall go to Samana Gotama and ask these questions' Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbāgaka 'Whatever Samanas and Brahmanas there are that are decayed, old, aged, advanced in years, having reached old age, experienced elders, long ordained, having assemblies (of Bhikkhus), crowds (of followers), being teachers well known, famous leaders, considered excellent by the multitude, as Pūrana-Kassapa, Makkhali-Gosāla, Agita-Kesakambali, Pakudha-Kakkāyana, Sañjaya-Belattthiputta, and Nigantha-Nātaputta, they, being asked questions by me, did not succeed (in answering them), and not succeeding they showed wrath and hatred and discontent, and they also in return put questions to me in this matter, (I should like to know) whether Samana Gotama being asked these questions will be able to explain them to me, for Samana Gotama is both young by birth and new in ascetic life'

Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbāgaka 'Samana Gotama is not to be slighted because he is young, even if the Samana is young, yet he is mighty and powerful, surely I think I shall go to Samana Gotama and ask these questions' Then Sabhiya, the Paribbāgaka, went on a journey to Rāgagaha, and wandering on his journey in regular order he came to Rāgagaha Vekuvana Kalandakanivāpa, to Bhagavat, and having come to Bhagavat he talked pleasantly with him, and after having had some pleasant and remarkable conversation with him he sat down apart, sitting down apart

Sabhiya, the Paribbāgaka, spoke to Bhagavat in stanzas

1 'Anxious and doubtful I have come,'—so said Sabhiya,—'longing to ask questions Do thou put an end to these (doubts when) asked these questions by me, in regular order, and rightly explain them to me' (510)

2 'Thou hast come from afar, O Sabhiya,'—so said Bhagavat,—'longing to ask questions, I shall put an end to those (doubts when) asked those questions by thee, in regular order, and rightly I shall explain them to thee (511)

3 'Ask me, O Sabhiya, a question, whatsoever thou wishest in thy mind that question I (will explain, and) put an end to (thy doubt)' (512)

Then this came to the mind of Sabhiya, the Paribbāgaka 'It is marvellous, it is wonderful indeed, the reception which I did not get from other Samanas and Brāhmanas has been given me by Gotama,' so saying he glad, rejoicing, delighted, and highly elated asked Bhagavat a question

4 'What should a man (necessarily) have obtained that people may call him a Bhikkhu?'—so said Sabhiya,—'how may they call him compassionate, and how subdued? how can he be called enlightened (buddha)? Asked (about this) do thou, Bhagavat, explain it to me' (513)

5 'He who by the path he has himself made, O Sabhiya,'—so said Bhagavat,—'has attained to perfect happiness, who has conquered doubt, who lives after having left behind both gain and goods, who has destroyed re-birth, he is a Bhikkhu (514)

6. 'Always resigned and attentive, he will not hurt any one in all the world, the Samana who has not enter time (kappa) amongst gods and men who are subject to time, him they call a Nahâtaka (cleansed)<sup>1</sup> (521)

13 'He who does not commit any crime in the world, who, after abandoning all bonds and fetters, clings to nothing, being liberated, such a one is called a Nâga (sinless) by being so<sup>2</sup>' (522)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagavat, glad, rejoicing, delighted, highly elated, further asked Bhagavat a question

14 'Whom do the Buddhas call a Khettagîna?'—so said Sabhiya,—'how (can they call any one) a Kusala? and how a Pandita? how can he be called a Muni? Asked (about this) do thou Bhagavat explain it to me' (523)

15 'He who, after examining all regions, O Sabhiya,'—so said Bhagavat,—'the divine and the human, and Brahman's region, is delivered from the radical bond of all regions, such a one is called a Khettagîna (he who has conquered the regions) by being so (524)

16 'He who, after examining all treasures, the divine and the human, and Brahman's treasure, is delivered from the radical bond of all treasures, such a one is called a Kusala (happy) by being so (525)

17 'He who, after examining both kinds of senses, internally and externally, is endowed with a

18 'He who, having understood the Dhamma of the just and the unjust, internally and externally, in all the world, is to be worshipped by gods and men, he, after breaking through the net of ties, is called a Muni (sage)' (527)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbāgaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagavat, glad, rejoicing, delighted, highly elated, further asked Bhagavat a question

19 'What should one (necessarily) have obtained that people may call him Vedagū?'—so said Sabhiya, —'and how (may they call him) Anuvidita?' and how Viriyavat? How does one become Āgāṇiya? Asked (about this) do thou, O Bhagavat, explain it to me' (528)

20 'He who, having conquered all sensations, O Sabhiya,'—so said Bhagavat,—'which are (known) to Samanas and to Brāhmanas, is free from passion for all sensations, he is Vedagū (having passed sensation) after conquering all sensation' (529)

21 'He who, having seen the delusion of name and form<sup>1</sup>, internally and externally, the root of sickness, and is delivered from the radical bond of all sickness, such a one is called Anuvidita (well-informed) by being so' (530)

22 'He who is disgusted in this world with all sins, is strong after conquering the pain of hell, is strong and powerful, such a one is called Dhīra (= viriyavat, firm) by being so' (531)

23 'He whose bonds are cut off internally and externally, the root of ties<sup>1</sup>, who is delivered from the radical bond of all ties, such a one is called Āgāṇiya (high-bred) by being so' (532)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbāgaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagavat, glad, rejoicing, delighted, highly elated, further asked Bhagavat a question

24 'What should a man (necessarily) have obtained that people may call him a Sottiya ? — so said Sabhiya,—'how (may they call him) an Ariya ? and how a Karaṇavat ? how may he become a Paribbāgaka ? Asked (about this) do thou, O Bhagavat, explain it to me' (533)

25 'Whosoever, after having heard and understood every Dhamma in the world, O Sabhiya,—so said Bhagavat,—'whatsoever is wrong and whatsoever is blameless, is victorious, free from doubt, liberated, free from pain in every respect, him they call a Sottiya (learned in the revelation) (534)

26 'Whosoever, after having cut off passions and desires, is wise and does not (again) enter the womb, having driven away the threefold sign, the mud (of lust), and who does not (again) enter time (kappa), him they call an Ariya (noble) (535)

27 'He who in this world, after having attained the (highest) gain in the Karaṇas, is skilful, has always understood the Dhamma, clings to nothing, is liberated, and for whom there are no passions, he is a Karaṇavat (endowed with the observances) (536)

the middle, who wanders with understanding, who has put an end to deceit, arrogance, cupidity and anger, name and form, him they call a Paribbâgaka (a wandering mendicant) who has attained the (highest) gain' (537)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbâgaka, having approved of and rejoiced at the words of Bhagavat, glad, rejoicing, delighted, highly elated, having risen from his seat, and having put his upper robe upon one shoulder, bending his joined hands towards Bhagavat, praised Bhagavat face to face in appropriate stanzas

29 'Having conquered the three and sixty (philosophical) views referring to the disputations of the Samanas, thou hast crossed over the darkness of the stream<sup>1</sup> (?) (538)

30 'Thou hast passed to the end of and beyond pain, thou art a saint, perfectly enlightened, I consider thee one that has destroyed his passions, thou art glorious, thoughtful, of great understanding, O thou who puts an end to pain, thou hast carried me across (539)

31 'Because thou sawest my longing, and carriedst me across my doubt, adoration be to thee, O Muni, who hast attained the (highest) gain in the ways of wisdom, O thou who art a true kinsman of the Âdikâs, thou art compassionate (540)

32 'The doubt I had before thou hast cleared away for me, O thou clearly-seeing, surely thou art a Muni, perfectly enlightened, there is no obstacle for thee (541)

35 'Adoration be to thee, O noble man, adoration be to thee, O thou best of men, in the world of men and gods there is no man equal to thee (544)

37 'The elements of existence (upadhi) are overcome by thee, the passions are destroyed by thee, thou art a lion, free from desire, thou hast left behind fear and terror (546)

38 'As a beautiful lotus does not adhere to the water, so thou dost not cling to good and evil, to either, stretch forth thy feet, O hero, Sabhiya worships the Master's (feet)' (547)

Then Sabhiya, the Paribbāgaka, stooping with his head to Bhagavat's feet, said this to Bhagavat

'It is excellent, O venerable! It is excellent, O venerable! As one raises what has been overthrown, or reveals what has been hidden, or tells the way to him who has gone astray, or holds out an oil lamp in the dark that those who have eyes may see the objects, even so by the venerable Gotama in manifold ways the Dhamma has been illustrated, I take refuge in the venerable Gotama, in the Dhamma, and in the Assembly of Bhikkhus, I wish to receive the robe and the orders from the venerable Bhagavat.

'He who, O Sabhiya, formerly belonging to another creed (aññatitthiyapubba), wishes to be adopted into this religion (dhammavinaya), and wishes to receive the robe and the orders, he serves for four months, after the lapse of four months Bhikkhus who have appeased their thoughts will give him the robe and the orders to become a Bhikkhu, (for) I also in this matter acknowledge a difference of persons'

'If, O venerable, those that formerly belonged to another creed and wish to be adopted into this religion and to receive the robe and the orders, serve for four months, and after the lapse of four months Bhikkhus who have appeased their thoughts give them the robe and the orders that they may become Bhikkhus, I will (also) serve for four months, and after the lapse of four months Bhikkhus who have appeased their thoughts shall give (me) the robe and the orders that I may become a Bhikkhu'

Sabhiya, the Paribbāga, received the robe and the orders from Bhagavat, and the venerable Sabhiya, having lately received the upasampadā, leading a solitary, retired, strenuous, ardent, energetic life, lived after having in a short time in this existence by his own understanding ascertained and possessed himself of that highest perfection of a religious life for the sake of which men of good family rightly wander away from their houses to a houseless state 'Birth had been destroyed, a religious life had been led, what was to be done had been done, there was nothing else (to be done) for this existence,' so he perceived, and the venerable Sabhiya became one of the saints

7 SELASUTTA

Kenya, the Gaṇḍa, invites Buddha with his assembly to take his meals with him on the morrow. Sela, the Brāhmaṇa, arrived at that place with his three hundred young men, seeing the preparations he asks what is going on, and is answered that Buddha is expected the next day. On hearing the word 'Buddha,' Sela asks where Buddha lives, goes to him, converses with him, and is converted, so are his followers.

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat wandering about in Anguttarāpa, with a large assembly of Bhikkhus, with 1250 Bhikkhus, went to Āpana, a town in Anguttarāpa.

And Kenya, the ascetic, with matted hair (gaṇḍa) heard the following: 'The Samana, the venerable Gotama, the Sakya son, gone out from the family of the Sakyas, wandering about in Anguttarāpa with a large assembly of Bhikkhus, with 1250 Bhikkhus, has reached Āpana, and the following good praising words met the venerable Gotama: "And so he is Bhagavat, the venerable, the perfectly enlightened, endowed with science and works (viggāharaṇa), the happy, knowing the world, the incomparable, the charioteer of men that are to be subdued, the master, the enlightened of gods and men, the glorious, he teaches this world and the world of gods, of Māras, of Brahmanas, and beings comprising Samanas and Brāhmanas, gods and men, having himself known and seen them face to face, he teaches the Dhamma (which is) good in the beginning, in the middle, and in the end, is full of meaning and rich in words, quite complete, he teaches a religious life, and good is the sight of such saints "'

Then Kenya, the Gaṇḍa, went (to the place) where Bhagavat was, and having gone there he talked pleasantly with him, and after having had some pleasant and remarkable conversation (with him) he sat down apart, and while Kemīya, the Gaṭīla, was sitting down apart, Bhagavat, by religious talk, taught, advised, roused, and delighted him. Then Kemīya, the Gaṭīla, having been taught, advised, roused, and delighted by Bhagavat through religious talk, said this to Bhagavat

‘Let the venerable Gotama accept my food to-morrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus’

This having been said, Bhagavat answered Kemīya, the Gaṭīla ‘Large, O Kemīya, is the assembly of Bhikkhus, one thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, and thou art intimate with the Brāhmaṇas’

A second time Kemīya, the Gaṭīla, said this to Bhagavat ‘Although, O venerable Gotama, the assembly of Bhikkhus is large, one thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, and I am intimate with the Brāhmaṇas, let the venerable Gotama accept my food to-morrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus’

A second time Bhagavat said this to Kemīya, the Gaṭīla ‘Large, O Kemīya, is the assembly of Bhikkhus, one thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, and thou art intimate with the Brāhmaṇas’

A third time Kemīya, the Gaṭīla, said this to Bhagavat ‘Although, O venerable Gotama, the assembly of Bhikkhus is large, one thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, and I am intimate with the Brāhmaṇas, yet let the venerable Gotama accept my food to-morrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus’ Bhagavat assented by being silent

Then Kenya, the Gatila, having learnt the assent of Bhagavat, after rising from his seat went to his hermitage, and having gone there he addressed his friends and servants, his relatives and kinsmen (as follows) 'Let my venerable friends and servants, relatives and kinsmen hear me,—the Samana Gotama has been invited by me to (take his) food (with me) to-morrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus, wherefore you must render me bodily service'

'Surely, O venerable one,' so saying the friends and servants, relatives and kinsmen of Kenya, the Gatila, complying with his request, some of them dug fireplaces, some chopped firewood, some washed the vessels, some placed waterpots, some prepared seats Kenya, the Gatila, on the other hand, himself provided a circular pavilion

At that time the Brāhmaṇa Sela lived at Āpana, perfect in the three Vedas, vocabulary, Keṭubha, etymology, Itihāsa as the fifth (Veda), versed in metre, a grammarian, one not deficient in popular controversy and the signs of a great man, he taught three hundred young men the hymns<sup>1</sup> At that time Kenya, the Gatila, was intimate with the Brāhmaṇ Sela Then the Brāhmaṇa Sela surrounded by three hundred young men, walking on foot, arrived at the place where the hermitage of Kenya, the Gatila, was And the Brāhmaṇa Sela saw the Gatilas in Kenya's hermitage, some of them digging fireplaces, some chopping firewood, some washing the vessels, some placing waterpots, some preparing seats, and Kenya, the Gatila, on the other hand, himself providing a circular pavilion, seeing Kenya, the Gatila, he said this 'Is the venerable Kenya to celebrate the marriage of a son or the marriage of a daughter, or is there a great sacrifice at hand, or has Bimbisâra, the king of Magadha, who has a large body of troops, been invited for to-morrow, together with his army?'

'I am not to celebrate the marriage of a son or the marriage of a daughter, nor has Bimbisâra, the king of Magadha, who has a large body of troops, been invited for to-morrow, together with his army, yet a great sacrifice of mine is at hand The Samaṇa Gotama, the Sakya son, gone out from the Sakya family, wandering about in Anguttarapa with a large assembly of Bhikkhus, one thousand two hundred and fifty Bhikkhus, has reached Âpama, and the following good praising words met the venerable Gotama "And so he is Bhagavat, the venerable, the perfectly enlightened, endowed with science and works (viggâkarana), the happy, knowing the world the incomparable, the charioteer of men that are to be subdued, the master, the enlightened of gods and men, the glorious, he has been invited by me for to-morrow, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus''

'Yes, I say, O venerable Sela, that he is a Buddha '

'Didst thou say that he is a Buddha, O venerable Kenya ?'

'Yes, I say, O venerable Sela that he is a Buddha '

Then this occurred to the Brâhmana Sela 'This sound " Buddha " is (indeed) rare but in our hymns are to be found the thirty-two signs of a great man, and for a great man endowed with these there are two conditions and no more if he lives in a house he is a king, a universal (king), a just religious king, a lord of the four-cornered (earth), a conqueror, one who has obtained the security of his people (and) is possessed of the seven gems These are his seven gems, namely, the wheel gem, the elephant gem, the horse gem, the pearl gem, the woman gem, the householder gem, and the chief gem as the seventh He has more than a thousand sons, heroes, possessing great bodily strength and crushing foreign armies, he having conquered this ocean-girt earth without a rod and without a weapon, but by justice, lives (in a house) But if, on the other hand, he goes out from (his) house to the houseless state, he becomes a saint, a perfectly enlightened, one who has removed the veil in the world And where, O venerable Kenya, dwells now that venerable Gotama, the saint and the perfectly enlightened ?'

This having been said, Kenya, the Gaṭṭa, stretching out his right arm, spoke as follows to the Brāhmaṇa Sela 'There, where yon blue forest line is, O venerable Sela '

Then the Brāhmaṇa Sela together with (his) three hundred young men went to the place where Bhagavat was Then the Brāhmaṇa Sela addressed those young men 'Come ye, venerable ones, with but little noise, walking step by step, for Bhagavats are difficult of access, walking alone like lions, and when I speak to the venerable Samana Gotama, do ye not utter interrupting words, but wait ye venerable ones, for the end of my speech '

Then the Brāhmaṇa Sela went to the place where Bhagavat was, and having gone there he talked pleasantly with Bhagavat, and after having had some pleasant and remarkable conversation with him he sat down apart, and while sitting down apart Sela, the Brâhmaṇa, looked for the thirty-two signs of a great man on the body of Bhagavat. And the Brâhmaṇa Sela saw the thirty-two signs of a great man on the body of Bhagavat with the exception of two, in respect to two of the signs of a great man he had doubts, he hesitated, he was not satisfied, he was not assured as to the member being enclosed in a membrane and as to his having a large tongue.

Then this occurred to Bhagavat 'This Brâhmaṇa Sela sees in me the thirty-two signs of a great man with the exception of two, in respect to two of the signs of a great man he has doubts, he hesitates, he is not satisfied, he is not assured as to the member being enclosed in a membrane, and as to my having a large tongue.' Then Bhagavat created such a miraculous creature that the Brâhmaṇa Sela might see Bhagavat's member enclosed in a membrane. Then Bhagavat having put out his tongue touched and stroked both his ears, touched and stroked both nostrils, and the whole circumference of his forehead he covered with his tongue.

Then this occurred to the Brâhmaṇa Sela 'The Samana Gotama is endowed with the thirty-two signs of a great man, with them all, not with (only) some of them, and yet I do not know whether he is a Buddha or not, I have heard old and aged Brâhmaṇas, teachers and their previous teachers, say that those who are saints and perfectly enlightened manifest themselves when their praise is uttered. I think I shall praise the Samana Gotama face to face in suitable stanzas' Then the Brāhmaṇa Sela praised Bhagavat face to face in suitable stanzas

1 'Thou hast a perfect body, thou art resplendent, well-born, of beautiful aspect, thou hast a golden colour, O Bhagavat, thou hast very white teeth, thou art strong (548)

2 'All the signs that are for a well-born man, they are on thy body, the signs of a great man (549)

3 'Thou hast a bright eye, a handsome countenance, thou art great, straight, majestic, thou shinest like a sun in the midst of the assembly of the Samanas (550)

4 'Thou art a Bhikkhu of a lovely appearance, thou hast a skin like gold, what is the use of being a Samana to thee who art possessed of the highest beauty? (551)

8 'Thou acknowledgest thyself (to be) perfectly enlightened (sambuddha),'—so said Sela, the Brāhmaṇa,— 'an incomparable, religious king, "with justice I turn the wheel," so thou sayest, O Gotama (555)

9 'Who is thy general, (who is thy) disciple, (who is) the successor of the master, who is to turn after thee the wheel of religion turned (by thee)?' (556)

10 'The wheel turned by me, O Sela,'—so said Bhagavat,—'the incomparable wheel of religion, Sâriputta is to turn after (me), he taking after Tathâgata' (557)

11 'What is to be known is known (by me), what is to be cultivated is cultivated (by me), what is to be left is left by me, therefore I am a Buddha, O Brâhmaṇa' (558)

12 'Subdue thy doubt about me, have faith (in me), O Brâhmaṇa, difficult (to obtain) is the sight of Buddhas repeatedly' (559)

13 'Of those whose manifestation is difficult for you (to obtain) in the world repeatedly, I am, O Brâhmaṇa, a perfectly enlightened, an incomparable physician,' (560)

14 'Most eminent, matchless, a crusher of Mâra's army, having subjected all enemies I rejoice secure on every side' (561)

15 Sela 'O venerable ones, pay attention to this as the clearly-seeing (Buddha) says, (so it is) he is a physician, a great hero, and roars like a lion in the forest' (562)

16 'Who, having seen him, the most eminent, the matchless, the crusher of Mâra's army, is not appeased, even if he be of black origin (kaṇhâbhigâtika)' (563)

17 'He who likes me, let him follow after (me), he who does not like me, let him go away, I shall at once take the orders in the presence of him of excellent understanding (i.e. Buddha)' (564)

18 The followers of Sela 'If this doctrine of the perfectly enlightened pleases thee, we also shall take the orders in the presence of him of excellent understanding' (565)

19 These three hundred Brāhmaṇas asked with clasped hands (to be admitted into the order) 'We want to cultivate a religious life, O Bhagavat, in thy presence' (566)

20 'A religious life is well taught (by me),—O Sela,' so said Bhagavat,—'an instantaneous, an immediate (life), in which it is not in vain to become an ascetic to one who learns in earnest'<sup>1</sup> (567)

Then the Brāhmaṇa Sela together with his assembly took the robe and the orders in the presence of Bhagavat.

Then Kemiya, the Gaṭṭhā, by the expiration of that night, having provided in his hermitage nice hard food and soft food, let Bhagavat know the time (of the meal) 'It is time, O venerable Gotama, the meal is prepared' Then Bhagavat in the morning, having put on his raiment and taken his bowl and robes, went to the Gaṭṭhā Kemiya's hermitage, and having gone there he sat down on the prepared seat, together with the assembly of Bhikkhus Then Kemiya, the Gaṭṭhā, satisfied and served with his own hands the assembly of Bhikkhus, with Buddha at their head, with nice hard food and soft food Then Kemiya, the Gaṭṭhā, having gone up to Bhagavat who had finished eating and had taken his hand out of the bowl, took a low seat and sat down apart, and

22 'Amongst the stars the moon is the principal thing, the sun is the principal thing amongst the burning<sup>3</sup> (objects), amongst those that wish for good works and make offerings the assembly (saṃgha) indeed is the principal' (569)

Then Bhagavat, having delighted Keniya, the Gatīla, with these stanzas, rose from (his) seat and went away

Then the venerable Sela together with his assembly leading a solitary, retired, strenuous, ardent, energetic life, lived after having in a short time in this existence by his own understanding ascertained and possessed himself of that highest perfection of a religious life for the sake of which men of good family rightly wander away from their houses to a houseless state, 'birth (had been) destroyed, a religious life (had been) led, what was to be done (had been) done, there was nothing else (to be done) for this existence,' so he perceived, and the venerable Sela together with his assembly became one of the saints

Then the venerable Sela together with his assembly went to Bhagavat, and having gone (to him) he put his upper robe on one shoulder, and bending his joined hands towards Bhagavat he addressed him in stanzas

8 SALLASUTTA

Life is short, all mortals are subject to death, but knowing the terms of the world the wise do not grieve, and those who have left sorrow will be blessed—Text in the Dasaratha-Gāṭaka, p 34

1 Without a cause and unknown is the life of mortals in this world, troubled and brief, and combined with pain (574)

2 For there is not any means by which those that have been born can avoid dying, after reaching old age there is death, of such a nature are living beings (575)

3 As ripe fruits are early in danger of falling, so mortals when born are always in danger of death (576)

4 As all earthen vessels made by the potter end in being broken, so is the life of mortals. (577)

5 Both young and grown-up men, both those who are fools and those who are wise men, all fall into the power of death, all are subject to death (578)

6 Of those who, overcome by death, go to the other world, a father does not save his son, nor relatives their relations (579)

7 Mark! while relatives are looking on and lamenting greatly, one by one of the mortals is carried off, like an ox that is going to be killed (580)

8 So the world is afflicted with death and decay, therefore the wise do not grieve, knowing the terms of the world (581)

9 For him, whose way thou dost not know, either when he is coming or when he is going, not seeing both ends, thou grieveest in vain (582)

10 If he who grieves gains anything, (although he is only) a fool hurting himself, let the wise man do the same (583)

11 Not from weeping nor from grieving will any one obtain peace of mind, (on the contrary), the greater his pain will be, and his body will suffer (584)

12 He will be lean and pale, hurting himself by himself, (and yet) the dead are not saved, lamentation (therefore) is of no avail (585)

13 He who does not leave grief behind, goes (only) deeper into pain, bewailing the dead he falls into the power of grief (586)

14 Look at others passing away, men that go (to what they deserve) according to their deeds, beings trembling already here, after falling into the power of death (587)

15 In whatever manner people think (it will come to pass), different from that it becomes, so great is the disappointment<sup>1</sup> (in this world), see, (such are) the terms of the world (588)

16 Even if a man lives a hundred years or even more, he is at last separated from the company of his relatives, and leaves life in this world (589)

17 Therefore let one, hearing (the words of) the saint, subdue his lamentation, seeing the one that has passed away and is dead, (let him say) 'He will not be found by me (any more)' (590)

18 As a house on fire is extinguished by water, so also the wise, sensible, learned, clever man rapidly drives away sorrow that has arisen, as the wind a tuft of cotton (591)

19 He who seeks his own happiness should draw out his arrow (which is) his lamentation, and complaint, and grief (592)

20 He who has drawn out the arrow and is not dependent (on anything) will obtain peace of mind, he who has overcome all sorrow will become free from sorrow, and blessed (nibbuta) (593)

9 VĀSETTHASUTTA

A dispute arose between two young men, Bhāradvāga and Vāsettha, the former contending man to be a Brāhmaṇa by birth, the latter by deeds. They agreed to go and ask Samana Gotama, and he answered that man is a Brāhmaṇa by his work only. The two young men are converted — Text (from Maggħumanikāya) and translation in Alwis's Buddhist Nirvāṇa, p 103

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Ikkhānamkala, in the Ikkhānamkala forest. At that time many dis-

tinguished, wealthy Brâhmanas lived at Ikkhânamkala, as the Brâhmana Kamkin, the Brâhmana Târukkha, the Brâhmana Pokkharasâti, the Brâhmana Gânussoni, the Brâhmana Todeyya, and other distinguished, wealthy Brâhmanas

Then this dialogue arose between the young men Vâsettha and Bhâradvâga while walking about ‘How does one become a Brâhmana?’

The young man Bhâradvâga said ‘When one is noble by birth on both sides, on the mother’s and on the father’s side, of pure conception up to the seventh generation of ancestors, not discarded and not reproached in point of birth, in this way one is a Brâhmana’

The young man Vâsettha said ‘When one is virtuous and endowed with (holy) works, in this way he is a Brâhmana’

Neither could the young man Bhâradvâga convince the young man Vâsettha, nor could the young man Vâsettha convince the young man Bhâradvâga. Then the young man Vâsettha addressed the young man Bhâradvâga ‘O Bhâradvâga, this Samana Gotama, the Sakya son, gone out from the Sakya family, dwells at Ikkhânamkala, in the forest of Ikkhânamkala, and the following good praising words met the venerable Gotama “And so he is Bhagavat, the venerable, the enlightened, the glorious, let us go, O venerable Bhâradvâga, let us go (to the place) where the Samana Gotama is, and having gone there let us ask the Samana Gotama about this matter, and as the Samana Gotama replies so will we understand it.”’

‘Very well, O venerable one,’ so the young man Bhâradvâga answered the young man Vâsettha

Then the young men Vāsetṭha and Bhāradvāga went (to the place) where Bhagavat was, and having gone, they talked pleasantly with Bhagavat, and after having had some pleasant and remarkable conversation (with him) they sat down apart. Sitting down apart the young man Vāsetṭha addressed Bhagavat in stanzas

1 'We are accepted and acknowledged masters of the three Vedas<sup>1</sup>, I am (a pupil) of Pokkharasāti, and this young man is (the pupil) of Tārukkha (594)

2 'We are accomplished in all the knowledge propounded by those who are acquainted with the three Vedas, we are padakas (versed in the metre), veyyākaraṇas (grammarians<sup>2</sup>), and equal to our teachers in recitation (gappa)<sup>2</sup> (595)

3 'We have a controversy regarding (the distinctions of) birth, O Gotama! Bhāradvāga says, one is a Brāhmaṇa by birth, and I say, by deeds, know this, O thou clearly-seeing! (596)

4. 'We are both unable to convince each other, (therefore) we have come to ask thee (who art) celebrated as perfectly enlightened. (597)

5 'As people adoring the full moon worship (her) with uplifted clasped hands, so (they worship) Gotama in the world (598)

6 'We ask Gotama who has come as an eye to the world. Is a man a Brāhmaṇa by birth, or is he so by deeds? Tell us who do not know, that we may know a Brâhmaṇa' (599)

7 'I will explain to you,—O Vâsettha,' so said Bhagavat,—'in due order the exact distinction of living beings according to species, for their species are manifold (600)

8 'Know ye the grass and the trees, although they do not exhibit (it), the marks that constitute species are for them, and (their) species are manifold (601)

9 'Then (know ye) the worms, and the moths, and the different sorts of ants, the marks that constitute species are for them, and (their) species are manifold (602)

11 'Know ye also the serpents, the long-backed snakes, the marks that constitute species are for them, and (their) species are manifold (604)

12 'Then know ye also the fish which range in the water, the marks that constitute species are for them, and (their) species are manifold (605)

13 'Then know ye also the birds that are borne along on wings and move through the air, the marks that constitute species are for them, and (their) species are manifold (606)

14 'As in these species the marks that constitute species are abundant, so in men the marks that constitute species are not abundant. (607)

15 'Not as regards their hair, head, ears, eyes, mouth, nose, lips, or brows, (608)

16 'Nor as regards their neck, shoulders, belly, back, hip, breast, female organ, sexual intercourse, (609)

17 'Nor as regards their hands, feet, palms, nails, calves, thighs, colour, or voice are there marks that constitute species as in other species (610)

18 'Difference there is in beings endowed with bodies, but amongst men this is not the case, the difference amongst men is nominal (only)<sup>1</sup> (611)

10 KOKĀLIYASUTTA

Kokāliya abuses Sāriputta and Moggallāna to Buddha, therefore as soon as he has left Buddha, he is struck with boils, dies and goes to the Paduma hell, whereupon Buddha describes to the Bhikkhus the punishment of backbiters in hell

So it was heard by me

At one time Bhagavat dwelt at Sāvattthī, in Getavana, in the park of Anāthapīṇḍika. Then the Bhikkhu Kokāliya approached Bhagavat, and after having approached and saluted Bhagavat he sat down apart, sitting down apart the Bhikkhu Kokāliya said this to Bhagavat 'O thou venerable one, Sāriputta and Moggallāna have evil desires, they have fallen into the power of evil desires'

When this had been said, Bhagavat spoke to the Bhikkhu Kokāliya as follows '(Do) not (say) so, Kokāliya, (do) not (say) so, Kokāliya, appease, O Kokāliya, (thy) mind in regard to Sāriputta and Moggallāna. Sāriputta and Moggallāna are amiable<sup>1</sup>'

A second time the Bhikkhu Kokāliya said this to Bhagavat 'Although thou, O venerable Bhagavat, (appearest) to me (to be) faithful and trustworthy, yet Sāriputta and Moggallāna have evil desires, they have fallen into the power of evil desires'

A second time Bhagavat said this to the Bhikkhu Kokāliya '(Do) not (say) so, Kokāliya, (do) not (say) so, Kokāliya, appease, O Kokāliya, (thy) mind in regard to Sāriputta and Moggallāna. Sāriputta and Moggallāna are amiable'

A third time the Bhikkhu Kokāliya said this to Bhagavat 'Although thou, O venerable Bhagavat, (appearest) to me (to be) faithful and trustworthy, yet Sâriputta and Moggallâna have evil desires, Sâriputta and Moggallâna have fallen into the power of evil desires'

A third time Bhagavat said this to the Bhikkhu Kokâliya '(Do) not (say) so, Kokâliya, (do) not (say) so, Kokâliya, appease, O Kokâliya, (thy) mind in regard to Sâriputta and Moggallâna Sâriputta and Moggallâna are amiable'

Then the Bhikkhu Kokâliya, after having risen from his seat and saluted Bhagavat and walked round him towards the right, went away, and when he had been gone a short time, all his body was struck with boils as large as mustard seeds, after being only as large as mustard seeds, they became as large as kidney beans, after being only as large as kidney beans, they became as large as chick peas, after being only as large as chick peas, they became as large as a Kolattu egg (?), after being only as large as a Kolattu egg, they became as large as the jujube fruit, after being only as large as the jujube fruit, they became as large as the fruit of the emblic myrobalan, after being only as large as the fruit of the emblic myrobalan, they became as large as the unripe beluva fruit, after being only as large as the unripe beluva fruit, they became as large as a billi fruit (?), after being as large as a billi fruit, they broke, and matter and blood flowed out. Then the Bhikkhu Kôkâliya died of that disease, and when he had died the Bhikkhu Kokâliya went to the Paduma hell, having shown a hostile mind against Sâriputta and Moggallâna. Then when the night had passed Brahman Sahampati of a beautiful appearance, having lit up all Getavana, approached Bhagavat, and having approached and saluted Bhagavat, he stood apart, and standing apart Brahman Sahampatī said this to Bhagavat 'O thou venerable one, Kokāliya, the Bhikkhu, is dead, and after death, O thou venerable one, the Bhikkhu Kokāliya is gone to the Paduma hell, having shown a hostile mind against Sāriputta and Moggallāna'

This said Brahman Sahampatī, and after saying this and saluting Bhagavat, and walking round him towards the right, he disappeared there

Then Bhagavat, after the expiration of that night, addressed the Bhikkhus thus 'Last night, O Bhikkhus, when the night had (nearly) passed, Brahman Sahampatī of a beautiful appearance, having lit up all Getavana, approached Bhagavat, and having approached and saluted Bhagavat, he stood apart, and standing apart Brahman Sahampatī said this to Bhagavat "O thou venerable one, Kokāliya, the Bhikkhu, is dead, and after death, O thou venerable one, the Bhikkhu Kokāliya is gone to the Paduma hell, having shown a hostile mind against Sāriputta and Moggallāna" This said Brahman Sahampatī, O Bhikkhus, and having said this and saluted me, and walked round me towards the right, he disappeared there'

When this had been said, a Bhikkhu asked Bhagavat 'How long is the rate of life, O venerable one, in the Paduma hell?'

'Long, O Bhikkhu, is the rate of life in the Paduma hell, it is not easy to calculate either (by saying) so many years or so many hundreds of years or so many thousands of years or so many hundred thousands of years.'

'But it is possible, I suppose, to make a comparison, O thou venerable one?'

'It is possible, O Bhikkhu,' so saying, Bhagavat spoke (as follows) 'Even as, O Bhikkhu, (if there were) a Kosala load of sesamum seed containing twenty khâris, and a man after the lapse of every hundred years were to take from it one sesamum seed at a time, then that Kosala load of sesamum seed, containing twenty khâris, would, O Bhikkhu, sooner by this means dwindle away and be used up than one Abbuda hell, and even as are twenty Abbuda hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Nirabbuda hell, and even as are twenty Nirabbuda hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Ababa hell, and even as are twenty Ababa hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Ahaha hell, and even as are twenty Ahaha hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Aṭaṭa hell, and even as are twenty Aṭaṭa hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Kumuda hell, and even as are twenty Kumuda hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Sogandhika hell, and even as are twenty Sogandhika hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Uppalaka hell, and even as are twenty Uppalaka hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Pundarika hell, and even as are twenty Pundarika hells, O Bhikkhu, so is one Paduma hell, and to the Paduma hell, O Bhikkhu, the Bhikkhu Kokāliya is gone, having shown a hostile mind against Sâriputta and Moggallāna' This said Bhagavat, and having said this Sugata, the Master, furthermore spoke as follows

1 'To (every) man that is born, an axe is born in his mouth, by which the fool cuts himself, when speaking bad language (657)

2 'He who praises him who is to be blamed, or blames him who is to be praised, gathers up sin in his mouth, and through that (sin) he will not find any joy (658)

3 'Trifling is the sin that (consists in) losing riches by dice, this is a greater sin that corrupts the mind against Sugatas (659)

4 'Out of the one hundred thousand Nīrabbudas (he goes) to thirty-six, and to five Abbudas, because he blames an Ariya he goes to hell, having employed his speech and mind badly (660)

5 'He who speaks falsely goes to hell, or he who having done something says, "I have not done it," both these after death become equal, in another world (they are both) men guilty of a mean deed<sup>1</sup> (661)

6 'He who offends an offenceless man, a pure man, free from sin, such a fool the evil (deed) reverts against, like fine dust thrown against the wind<sup>2</sup> (662)

7 'He who is given to the quality of covetousness, such a one censures others in his speech, (being himself) unbelieving, stingy, wanting in affability, niggardly, given to backbiting (663)

8 'O thou foul-mouthed, false, ignoble, blasting, wicked, evil-doing, low, sinful, base-born man, do not be garrulous in this world, (else) thou wilt be an inhabitant of hell<sup>3</sup> (664)

9 'Thou spreadest pollution to the misfortune (of others), thou revilest the just, committing sin (yourself), and having done many evil deeds thou wilt go to the pool (of hell) for a long time (665)

The Iṇi Asita, also called Kaṇhasiri, on seeing the gods rejoicing, asks the cause of it, and having heard that Buddha has been born, he descends from Tusita heaven. When the Sakyas showed the child to him, he received it joyfully and prophesied about it Buddha explains to Nālaka, the sister's son of Asita, the highest state of wisdom — Compare Lalita-vistara, Adhyāya VII, Asita and Buddha, or the Indian Simeon, by J Muir, in the Indian Antiquary, Sept 1878

Vatthugāthā

1 The Isī Asita saw in (their) resting-places during the day the joyful, delighted flocks of the Tīdasa gods, and the gods in bright clothes, always highly praising Inda, after taking their clothes and waving them (679)

2 Seeing the gods with pleased minds, delighted, and showing his respect, he said this on that occasion 'Why is the assembly of the gods so exceedingly pleased, why do they take their clothes and wave them?' (680)

3 'When there was an encounter with the Asuras, a victory for the gods, and the Asuras were defeated, then there was not such a rejoicing What wonderful (thing) have the gods seen that they are so delighted?' (681)

4 'They shout and sing and make music, they throw (about their) arms and dance, I ask you, the inhabitants of the tops of (mount) Meru, remove my doubt quickly, O venerable ones!' (682)

5 'The Bodhisatta, the excellent pearl, the incomparable, is born for the good and for a blessing in the world of men, in the town of the Sakyas, in the country of Lumbinī Therefore we are glad and exceedingly pleased (683)

6 'He, the most excellent of all beings, the pre-eminent man, the bull of men, the most excellent of all creatures will turn the wheel (of the Dhamma) in the forest called after the Isī, (he who is) like the roaring lion, the strong lord of beasts' (684)

7 Having heard that noise he descended from (the heaven of) Tusita. Then he went to Suddhodana's palace, and having sat down there he said this to the Sakyas 'Where is the prince? I wish to see (him)' (685)

8. Then the Sakyas showed to (the Isi), called Asita, the child, the prince who was like shining gold, manufactured by a very skilful (smith) in the mouth of a forge, and beaming in glory and having a beautiful appearance (686)

9 Seeing the prince shining like fire, bright like the bull of stars wandering in the sky, like the burning sun in autumn, free from clouds, he joyfully obtained great delight (687)

10 The gods held in the sky a parasol with a thousand circles and numerous branches, yaks' tails with golden sticks were fanned, but those who held the yaks' tails and the parasol were not seen (688)

11 The Isi with the matted hair, by name Kanhasiri, on seeing the yellow blankets (shining) like a golden coin, and the white parasol held over his head, received him delighted and happy (689)

12 And having received the bull of the Sakyas, he who was wishing to receive him and knew the signs and the hymns, with pleased thoughts raised his voice, saying 'Without superior is this, the most excellent of men' (690)

13 Then remembering his own migration he was displeased and shed tears, seeing this the Sakyas asked the weeping Isi, whether there would be any obstacle in the prince's path (691)

14 Seeing the Sakyas displeased the Isi said: 'I do not remember anything (that will be) unlucky for the prince, there will be no obstacles at

12 DVAYATĀNUPASSANASUTTA.

All pain in the world arises from upadhi, aviggā, saṃkhārā, viññāna, phassa, vedanā, tanhā, upādāna, ārambha, āhāra, viḡita, nissaya, rūpa, mosadhamma, sukha.

So it was heard by me

it being full moon, in the evening was sitting in the open air, surrounded by the assembly of Bhikkhus. Then Bhagavat surveying the silent assembly of Bhikkhus addressed them (as follows)

‘Whichever Dhammas there are, O Bhikkhus, good, noble, liberating, leading to perfect enlightenment,—what is the use to you of listening to these good, noble, liberating Dhammas, leading to perfect enlightenment? If, O Bhikkhus, there should be people that ask so, they shall be answered thus: Yes, for the right understanding of the two Dhammas.’ ‘Which two do you mean?’ ‘(I mean), “this is pain, this is the origin of pain,” this is one consideration, “this is the destruction of pain, this is the way leading to the destruction of pain,” this is the second consideration, thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly<sup>1</sup>, is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anâgâmin (one that does not return)’ This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke

"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is "Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the samkhāras (matter)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of the samkhāras, through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration, thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state

15 'Pleasure or pain, together with want of pleasure and want of pain, whatever is perceived internally and externally, (738)

16 'Looking upon this as pain, having touched what is perishable and fragile, seeing the decay (of everything), the Bhikkhu is disgusted, having from the perishing of the vedanâs become free from desire, and perfectly happy (739)

"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is "Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of tañhâ (desire)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of tañhâ, through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration, thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anâgâmin (one that does not return)' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke

that way, does not overcome transmigration (sam-sāra) (740)

18 'Looking upon this as misery, this origin of the pain of tanhā, let the Bhikkhu free from tanhā, not seizing (upon anything), thoughtful, wander about (741)

"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is "Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the upādānas (the seizures)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of the upādānas, through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration, thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anāgāmin (one that does not return)' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke

19 'The existence is in consequence of the upādānas, he who has come into existence goes to pain, he who has been born is to die, this is the origin of pain (742)

20 'Therefore from the destruction of the upādānas the wise with perfect knowledge, having seen (what causes) the destruction of birth, do not go to re-birth (743)

"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so they shall be told, there is, and how there is "Whatever pain arises is all in

21 'Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the ârambhas, by the destruction of the ârambhas there is no origin of pain (744)

22, 23 'Looking upon this pain that springs from the ârambhas as misery, having abandoned all the ârambhas, birth and transmigration have been crossed over by the Bhikkhu who is liberated in non exertion, who has cut off the desire for existence, and whose mind is calm, there is for him no re-birth (745, 746)

"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is "Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the âhâras (food?)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of the âhâras, through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration, thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anâgâmin (one that does not return)' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke

25 'Looking upon this pain that springs from the âhâras as misery, having seen the result of all âhâras, not resorting to all âhâras, (748)

26 'Having seen that health is from the destruction of desire, he that serves discriminatingly and stands fast in the Dhamma cannot be reckoned as existing, being accomplished<sup>1</sup> (749)

"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is "Whatever pain arises is all in consequence of the ñgītas (commotions)," this is one consideration, "but from the complete destruction of the ñgītas, through absence of passion, there is no origin of pain," this is the second consideration, thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anâgâmin (one that does not return)' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke

“Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way,” if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is “For the niṣṣīdita (dependent) there is vacillation,” this is one consideration, “the independent (man) does not vacillate,” this is the second consideration, thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anāgāmin (one that does not return)’ This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke

29 ‘The independent (man) does not vacillate, and the dependent (man) seizing upon existence in one way or in another, does not overcome sam-sāra (752)

30 ‘Looking upon this as misery (and seeing) great danger in things you depend upon, let a Bhikkhu wander about independent, not seizing (upon anything), thoughtful (753)

“Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way,” if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is “The formless (beings), O Bhikkhus, are calmer than the rūpas (for ruppa, i.e. form-possessing),” this is one consideration, “cessation is calmer than the formless,” this is another consideration, thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anâgâmin (one that does not return)' This said Bhagavat, (and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke

31 'Those beings who are possessed of form, and those who dwell in the formless (world), not knowing cessation, have to go to re-birth (754)

32 'But those who, having fully comprehended the forms, stand fast in the formless (worlds), those who are liberated in the cessation, such beings leave death behind (755)

"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is "What has been considered true by the world of men, together with the gods, Mâra, Brahman, and amongst the Samanas, Brâhmanas, gods, and men, that has by the noble through their perfect knowledge been well seen to be really false," this is one consideration, "what, O Bhikkhus, has been considered false by the world of men, together with the gods, Mâra, Brahman, and amongst the Samanas, Brâhmanas, gods, and men, that has by the noble through their perfect knowledge been well seen to be really true," this is another consideration Thus, O Bhikkhus, by the Bhikkhu that considers the Dyad duly, that is strenuous, ardent, resolute, of two fruits one fruit is to be expected in this world perfect knowledge, or, if any of the (five) attributes still remain, the state of an Anâgâmin (one that does not return)' This said Bhagavat,

(and) when Sugata had said this, the Master further spoke

34 'Whichever way they think (it), it becomes otherwise, for it is false to him, and what is false is perishable<sup>2</sup> (?) (757)

35 'What is not false, the Nibbâna, that the noble conceive as true, they verily from the comprehension of truth are free from desire (and) perfectly happy<sup>3</sup> (758)

"Should there be a perfect consideration of the Dyad in another way," if, O Bhikkhus, there are people that ask so, they shall be told, there is, and how there is "What, O Bhikkhus, has been considered pleasure by the world of men, gods, Mâra, Brahman, and amongst the Samanas, Brâhmanas, gods, and men, that has by the noble by (their) perfect knowledge been well seen to be really pain," this is one consideration, "what, O Bhikkhus, has been considered pain by the world of men, gods, Mâra, Brahman, and amongst the Samanas, Brâhmanas, gods, and men, that has by the noble by their perfect knowledge been well seen to be really pleasure," this is the second consideration Thus, O

1 KĀMASUTTA

Sensual pleasures are to be avoided

1 If he who desires sensual pleasures is successful, he certainly becomes glad-minded, having obtained what a mortal wishes for (766)

2 But if those sensual pleasures fail the person who desires and wishes (for them), he will suffer, pierced by the arrow (of pain) (767)

3 He who avoids sensual pleasures as (he would avoid treading upon) the head of a snake with his foot, such a one, being thoughtful (sato), will conquer this desire (768)

4 He who covets extensively (such) pleasures (as these), fields, goods, or gold, cows and horses, servants, women, relations, (769)

5 Sins will overpower him, dangers will crush him, and pain will follow him as water (pours into) a broken ship (770)

6 Therefore let one always be thoughtful, and avoid pleasures, having abandoned them, let him cross the stream, after baling out the ship, and go to the other shore (771)

2 GUHATTHAKASUTTA .

Let no one cling to existence and sensual pleasures

1 A man that lives adhering to the cave (i e the body), who is covered with much (sin), and sunk into delusion, such a one is far from seclusion, for the sensual pleasures in the world are not easy to abandon (772)

2 Those whose wishes are their motives, those who are linked to the pleasures of the world, they are difficult to liberate, for they cannot be liberated by others, looking for what is after or what is before, coveting these and former sensual pleasures (773)

3 Those who are greedy of, given to, and infatuated by sensual pleasures, those who are niggardly, they, having entered upon what is wicked, wail when they are subjected to pain, saying 'What will become of us, when we die away from here ?' (774)

4 Therefore let a man here<sup>1</sup> learn, whatever he knows as wicked in the world, let him not for the sake of that (?) practise (what is) wicked<sup>2</sup>, for short is this life, say the wise (775)

5 I see in the world this trembling race given to desire for existences, they are wretched men who lament in the mouth of death, not being free from the desire for reiterated existences (776)

6 Look upon those men trembling in selfishness, like fish in a stream nearly dried up, with little water, seeing this, let one wander about unselfish, without forming any attachment to existences (777)

7 Having subdued his wish for both ends<sup>1</sup>, having fully understood touch without being greedy, not doing what he has himself blamed, the wise (man) does not cling to what is seen and heard<sup>2</sup> (778)

8 Having understood name<sup>3</sup>, let the Muni cross over the stream, not defiled by any grasping, having pulled out the arrow (of passion), wandering about strenuous, he does not wish for this world or the other (779)

3 DUTTHATTHAKASUTTA

The Muni undergoes no censure, for he has shaken off all systems of philosophy, and is therefore independent

1 Verily, some wicked-minded people censure, and also just-minded people censure, but the Muni does not undergo the censure that has arisen, therefore there is not a discontented (khīla) Muni anywhere (780)

2 How can he who is led by his wishes and possessed by his inclinations overcome his own (false) view? Doing his own doings let him talk according to his understanding<sup>4</sup> (781)

4 But the Bhikkhu who is calm and of a happy mind, thus not praising himself for his virtues, him the good call noble, one for whom there are no desires anywhere in the world<sup>2</sup> (783)

5 He whose Dhammas are (arbitrarily) formed and fabricated, placed in front, and confused, because he sees in himself a good result, is therefore given to (the view which is called) kuppapaṭikkasanti<sup>3</sup> (?) (784)

6 For the dogmas of philosophy are not easy to overcome, amongst the Dhammas (now this and now that) is adopted after consideration, therefore a man rejects and adopts (now this and now that) Dhamma amongst the dogmas<sup>4</sup> (785)

7 For him who has shaken off (sin) there is nowhere in the world any prejudiced view of the different existences, he who has shaken off (sin), after leaving deceit and arrogance behind, which (way) should he go, he (is) independent<sup>5</sup> (786)

4 SUDDHATTHAKASUTTA

No one is purified by philosophy, those devoted to philosophy run from one teacher to another, but the wise are not led by passion, and do not embrace anything in the world as the highest

1 I see a pure, most excellent, sound man, by his views a man's purification takes place, holding this opinion, and having seen this view to be the highest, he goes back to knowledge, thinking to see what is pure<sup>2</sup> (788)

2 If a man's purification takes place by (his philosophical) views, or he by knowledge leaves pain behind, then he is purified by another (way than the ariyamagga, i e the noble way), together with his upadhis, on account of his views he tells him to say so<sup>3</sup> (789)

4 Having left (their) former (teacher) they go to another, following their desires they do not break asunder their ties, they grasp, they let go like a monkey letting go the branch (just) after having caught (hold of it) (791)

5 Having himself undertaken some (holy) works he goes to various (things) led by his senses, but a man of great understanding, a wise man who by his wisdom has understood the Dhamma, does not go to various (occupations) (792)

6 He being secluded amongst all the Dhammas, whatever has been seen, heard, or thought—how should any one in this world be able to alter him, the seeing one, who wanders openly<sup>2</sup>? (793)

5 PARAMATTHAKASUTTA

One should not give oneself to philosophical disputations, a Brâhmaṇa who does not adopt any system of philosophy, is unchangeable, has reached Nibbāna

1 What one person, abiding by the (philosophical) views, saying, 'This is the most excellent,' considers the highest in the world, everything different from that he says is wretched, therefore he has not overcome dispute<sup>2</sup> (796)

2 Because he sees in himself a good result, with regard to what has been seen (or) heard, virtue and (holy) works, or what has been thought, therefore, having embraced that, he looks upon everything else as bad<sup>3</sup> (797)

3 The expert call just that a tie dependent

Therefore let a Bhikkhu not depend upon what is seen, heard, or thought, or upon virtue and (holy) works<sup>1</sup> (798)

4 Let him not form any (philosophical) view in this world, either by knowledge or by virtue and (holy) works, let him not represent himself equal (to others), nor think himself either low or distinguished (799)

5 Having left what has been grasped, not seizing upon anything he does not depend even on knowledge He does not associate with those that are taken up by different things, he does not return to any (philosophical) view<sup>2</sup> (800)

6 For whom there is here no desire for both ends, for reiterated existence either here or in another world, for him there are no resting-places (of the mind) embraced after investigation amongst the doctrines (dhammesu)<sup>3</sup> (801)

7 In him there is not the least prejudiced idea with regard to what has been seen, heard, or thought,

6 GARĀSUTTA

From selfishness come grief and avarice The Bhikkhu who has turned away from the world and wanders about houseless, is independent, and does not wish for purification through another

1 Short indeed is this life, within a hundred years one dies, and if any one lives longer, then he dies of old age (804)

2 People grieve from selfishness, perpetual cares kill them, this (world) is full of disappointment, seeing this, let one not live in a house (805)

3 That even of which a man thinks 'this is mine' is left behind by death knowing this, let not the wise (man) turn himself to worldliness (while being my) follower<sup>1</sup> (806)

4 As a man awakened does not see what he has met with in his sleep, so also he does not see the beloved person that has passed away and is dead (807)

5 Both seen and heard are the persons whose particular name is mentioned, but only the name

6 The greedy in their selfishness do not leave sorrow, lamentation, and avarice, therefore the Munis leaving greediness wandered about seeing security (1 e Nibbāna) (809)

7 For a Bhikkhu, who wanders about unattached and cultivates the mind of a recluse, they say it is proper that he does not show himself (again) in existence<sup>2</sup> (810)

8 Under all circumstances the independent Muni does not please nor displease (any one), sorrow and avarice do not stick to him (as little) as water to a leaf (811)

9 As a drop of water does not stick to a lotus, as water does not stick to a lotus, so a Muni does not cling to anything, namely, to what is seen or heard or thought<sup>3</sup> (812)

Sexual intercourse should be avoided

1 'Tell me, O venerable one,'—so said the venerable Tissa Metteyya,—'the defeat of him who is given to sexual intercourse, hearing thy precepts we will learn in seclusion' (814)

2 'The precepts of him who is given to sexual intercourse, O Metteyya,'—so said Bhagavat,—'are lost, and he employs himself wrongly, this is what is ignoble in him' (815)

3 'He who, having formerly wandered alone, gives himself up to sexual intercourse, him they call in the world a low, common fellow, like a rolling chariot.' (816)

4 'What honour and renown he had before, that is lost for him, having seen this let him learn to give up sexual intercourse' (817)

5 'He who overcome by his thoughts meditates like a miser, such a one, having heard the (blaming) voice of others, becomes discontented' (818)

Disputants brand each other as fools, they wish for praise, but being repulsed they become discontented, one is not purified by dispute, but by keeping to Buddha, who has shaken off all sin

1 Here they maintain 'purity,' in other doctrines (dhamma) they do not allow purity, what they have devoted themselves to, that they call good, and they enter extensively upon the single truths<sup>2</sup> (824)

4 Because those who have tested his questions say that his dispute is lost and repulsed, he laments and grieves having lost his disputes, 'he has conquered me,' so saying he wails (827)

5 These disputes have arisen amongst the Samanas, in these (disputes) there is (dealt) blow (and) stroke, having seen this, let him leave off disputing, for there is no other advantage in trying to get praise (828)

6 Or he is praised there, having cleared up the dispute in the middle of the assembly, therefore he will laugh and be elated, having won that case as he had a mind to (829)

9 MĀGANDIYASUTTA

A dialogue between Māgandiya and Buddha. The former offers Buddha his daughter for a wife, but Buddha refuses her. Māgandiya says that purity comes from philosophy, Buddha from 'inward peace'. The Muni is a confessor of peace, he does not dispute, he is free from marks.

the (only) expert (saying), '(He) who understands this, he knows the Dhamma, he who reviles this, he is not perfect<sup>1</sup>' (878)

2 So having got into contest they dispute 'The opponent (is) a fool, an ignorant (person),' so they say Which one of these, pray, is the true doctrine (vāda)? for all these assert themselves (to be the only), expert (879)

3 He who does not acknowledge an opponent's doctrine (dhamma), he is a fool, a beast, one of poor understanding, all are fools with a very poor understanding, all these abide by their (own) views (880)

4 They are surely purified by their own view, they are of a pure understanding, expert, thoughtful, amongst them there is no one of poor understanding, their view is quite perfect! (881)

5 I do not say, 'This is the reality,' which fools say mutually to each other, they made their own views the truth, therefore they hold others to be fools (882)

6. What some say is the truth, the reality, that others say is void, false, so having disagreed they dispute Why do not the Samanas say one (and the same thing)? (883)

9 There are not many different truths in the world, no eternal ones except consciousness, but having reasoned on the (philosophical) views they proclaim a double Dhamma, truth and falsehood<sup>1</sup> (886)

10 In regard to what has been seen, or heard, virtue and (holy) works, or what has been thought, and on account of these (views) looking (upon others) with contempt, standing in (their) resolutions joyful, they say that the opponent is a fool and an ignorant person<sup>2</sup> (?) (887)

11 Because he holds another (to be) a fool, therefore he calls himself expert, in his own opinion he is one that tells what is propitious, others he blames, so he said<sup>3</sup> (?) (888)

Philosophers cannot lead to purity, they only praise themselves and stigmatise others But a Brāhmaṇa has overcome all dispute, he is indifferent to learning, he is appeased

1 Those who abiding in the (philosophical) views dispute, saying, 'This is the truth,' they all incur blame, and they also obtain praise in this matter (895)

2 This is little, not enough to (bring about) tranquillity, I say there are two fruits of dispute, having seen this let no one dispute, understanding Khema (i.e. Nibbāna) to be the place where there is no dispute (896)

3 The opinions that have arisen amongst people, all these the wise man does not embrace, he is independent. Should he who is not pleased with what has been seen and heard resort to dependency<sup>1</sup> (?) (897)

6 Having left virtue and (holy) works altogether, and both wrong and blameless work, not praying for purity or impurity, he wanders abstaining (from both purity and impurity), without having embraced peace (900)

7 By means of penance, or anything disliked, or what has been seen, or heard, or thought, going upwards they wail for what is pure, without being free from desire for reiterated existence (901)

8 For him who wishes (for something there always are) desires<sup>1</sup>, and trembling in (the midst of his) plans, he for whom there is no death and no re-birth, how can he tremble or desire anything? (902)

9 What some call the highest Dhamma, that others again call wretched, which one of these, pray, is the true doctrine (vâda)? for all these assert themselves (to be the only) expert (903)

10 Their own Dhamma they say is perfect, another's Dhamma again they say is wretched, so having disagreed they dispute, they each say their own opinions (are) the truth (904)

11 If one (becomes) low by another's censure, then there will be no one distinguished amongst the Dhammas, for they all say another's Dhamma (is) low, in their own they say there is something firm<sup>2</sup> (905)

14 TUVATAKASUTTA

How a Bhikkhu attains bliss, what his duties are, and what he is to avoid

1 'I ask thee, who art a kinsman of the Âdikas and a great Isi, about seclusion (viveka) and the state of peace How is a Bhikkhu, after having seen it, extinguished, not grasping at anything in the world?' (915)

2 'Let him completely cut off the root of what is called papañka<sup>1</sup> (delusion), thinking "I am wisdom,"—so said Bhagavat,—'all the desires that arise inwardly, let him learn to subdue them, always being thoughtful (916)

3 'Let him learn every Dhamma inwardly or outwardly, let him not therefore be proud, for that is not called bliss by the good (917)

4 'Let him not therefore think himself better (than others or) low or equal (to others), questioned by different people, let him not adorn himself<sup>2</sup> (918)

5 'Let the Bhikkhu be appeased inwardly, let him not seek peace from any other (quarter), for him who is inwardly appeased there is nothing grasped or rejected (919)

6 'As in the middle (i.e. depth) of the sea no wave is born, (but as it) remains still<sup>3</sup>, so let the Bhikkhu be still<sup>3</sup>, without desire, let him not desire anything whatever' (920)

15 ATTADANDASUTTA.

Description of an accomplished Muni

1 From him who has seized a stick fear arises Look at people killing (each other), I will tell of grief as it is known to me (935)

2 Seeing people struggling like fish in (a pond with) little water, seeing them obstructed by each other, a fear came over me (936)

3 The world is completely unsubstantial, all quarters are shaken, wishing for a house for myself
I did not see (one) uninhabited (937)

4 But having seen (all beings) in the end ob-

this world an arrow, difficult to see, stuck in the heart (938)

5 He who has been pierced by this arrow runs through all quarters, but having drawn out that arrow, he will not run, he will sit down (quietly) (939)

6 There (many) studies are gone through, what is tied in the world let him not apply himself to (untie) it, having wholly transfixed desire, let him learn his own extinction (nibbâna) (940)

7 Let the Muni be truthful, without arrogance, undeceitful, free from slander, not angry, let him overcome avarice (941)

8 Let the man who has turned his mind to Nibbâna conquer sleepiness, drowsiness, and sloth, let him not live together with indolence, let him not indulge in conceit (942)

9 Let him not be led into falsehood, let him not turn his affection to form, let him penetrate arrogance, let him wander abstaining from violence (943)

10 Let him not delight in what is old, let him not bear with what is new, let him not grieve for what is lost, let him not give himself up to desire<sup>1</sup> (944)

To the Brâhmana Bâvarî, living on the banks of the Godhâvarî, in Assaka's territory, comes another Brâhmana and asks for five hundred pieces of money, but not getting them he curses Bâvarî, saying, 'May thy head on the seventh day hence cleave into seven.' A deity comforts Bâvarî by referring him to Buddha. Then Bâvarî sends his sixteen disciples to Buddha, and each of them asks Buddha a question

1 VATTHUGÂTHÂ

1 From the beautiful city of the Kosalas (Sâvatthî) a Brâhmana, well versed in the hymns, went to the South (Dakkhînâpatha) wishing for nothingness<sup>1</sup> (976)

2 In Assaka's territory, in the neighbourhood of Aśaka, he dwelt on the banks of the Godhâvarî, (living) on gleanings and fruit (977)

3 And close by the bank there was a large village, with the income of which he prepared a great sacrifice (978)

4 Having offered the great sacrifice, he again entered the hermitage. Upon his re-entering, another Brâhmana arrived, (979) to him (i e the first Brâhmana) demanded five hundred (pieces of money) (980)

6 Bâvari, seeing him, bade him be seated, asked him whether he was happy and well, and spoke as follows (981)

7 'What gifts I had are all given away by me, pardon me, O Brâhmana, I have no five hundred' (982)

8 'If thou wilt not give to me who asks, may thy head on the seventh day cleave into seven' (983)

9 So after the usual ceremonies this impostor made known his fearful (curse) On hearing these his words Bâvari became sorrowful (984)

10 He wasted away taking no food, transfixed by the arrow of grief, but yet his mind delighted in meditation (985)

11 Seeing Bâvari struck with horror and sorrowful, the benevolent deity (of that place) approached him and said as follows (986)

12 'He does not know (anything about) the head, he is a hypocrite coveting riches, knowledge of the head and head-splitting is not found in him<sup>1</sup>' (987)

13 'If the venerable (deity) knows it, then tell me, when asked, all about the head and head-splitting, let us hear thy words' (988)

18 'He is Buddha, he is Bhagavat in the world, he, the clearly-seeing, teaches the Dhamma, go thou to him and ask, he will explain it to thee' (993)

5 METTAGŪMĀNAVAPUKKHĀ

1 ‘I ask thee, O Bhagavat, tell me this,’—so said the venerable Mettagū,—‘I consider thee accomplished and of a cultivated mind, why are these (creatures), whatsoever they are of many kinds in the world, always subject to pain?’ (1048)

2 ‘Thou mayest well ask me concerning the origin of pain,—O Mettagū,’ so said Bhagavat,—

'I will explain that to thee in the way I myself know it originating in the upadhîs pains arise, whatsoever they are, of many kinds in the world (1049)

3 'He who being ignorant creates upadhî, that fool again undergoes pain, therefore let not the wise man create upadhî, considering (that this is) the birth and origin of pain' (1050)

4 Mettagû 'What we have asked thee thou hast explained to us, another (question) I ask thee, answer that, pray How do the wise cross the stream, birth and old age, and sorrow and lamentation? Explain that thoroughly to me, O Muni, for this thing (dhamma) is well known to thee' (1051)

5 'I will explain the Dhamma to thee,—O Mettagû,' so said Bhagavat,—'if a man in the visible world, without any traditional instruction, has understood it, and wanders about thoughtful, he may overcome desire in the world'<sup>1</sup> (1052)

6 Mettagû 'And I take a delight in that, in the most excellent Dhamma, O great Isi, which if a man has understood, and he wanders about thoughtful, he may overcome desire in the world' (1053)

7 'Whatsoever thou knowest,—O Mettagû,' so said Bhagavat,—'(of what is) above, below, across, and in the middle, taking no delight and no rest in these things, let thy mind not dwell on existence (1054)

8 'Living so, thoughtful, strenuous, let the Bhikkhu wandering about, after abandoning selfishness, birth,

9 Mettagū 'I delight in these words of the great Isi, well expounded, O Gotama, is (by thee) freedom from upadhī (i e Nibbāna) Bhagavat in truth has left pain, for this Dhamma is well known to thee<sup>1</sup> (1056)

10 'And those also will certainly leave pain whom thou, O Muni, constantly mayest admonish, therefore I bow down to thee, having come hither, O chief (nāga), may Bhagavat also admonish me constantly' (1057)

11 Buddha 'The Brāhmaṇa whom I may acknowledge as accomplished, possessing nothing, not cleaving to the world of lust, he surely has crossed this stream, and he has crossed over to the other shore, free from harshness (akkhila), (and) free from doubt (1058)

12 'And he is a wise and accomplished man in this world, having abandoned this cleaving to reiterated existence he is without desire, free from woe, free from longing, he has crossed over birth and old age, so I say' (1059)

2 'Exert thyself then,—O Dhotaka,' so said Bhagavat,—'being wise and thoughtful in this world, let one, having listened to my utterance, learn his own extinction' (1061)

3 Dhotaka 'I see in the world of gods and men a Brāhmaṇa wandering about, possessing nothing, therefore I bow down to thee, O thou all-seeing one, free me, O Sakka, from doubts' (1062)

4 Buddha 'I shall not go to free any one in the world who is doubtful, O Dhotaka, when thou hast learned the best Dhamma, then thou shalt cross this stream<sup>1</sup>' (1063)

5 Dhotaka 'Teach (me), O Brāhmaṇa, having compassion (on me), the Dhamma of seclusion (i.e. Nibbāna), that I may understand (it and) that I, without falling into many shapes like the air, may wander calm and independent in this world<sup>2</sup>' (?) (1064)

This said Bhagavat, living in Magadha at Pâsâ-naka Ketiya (the Rock Temple) Sought by sixteen Brâhmanas, the followers (of Bâvari, and) questioned by each of them in turn, he responded to the questions If a man, having understood the meaning and tenor of each question, lives according to the Dhamma, then he will go to the further shore of decay and death, for these Dhammas lead to the further shore, and therefore this order of Dhamma was called 'the way to the other shore'

1, 2 Agita, Tissametteyya, Punṇaka and Mettagū, Dhotaka and Upasīva, Nanda and Hemaka, the two Todeyya and Kappa, and the wise Gatukammī, Bhadrāvudha and Udaya, and also the Brāhmaṇa Posāla, and the wise Mogharāga, and Pīṇḍiya the great Isī, (1123, 1124)

3 These went up to Buddha, the Isī of exemplary conduct, asking subtle questions they went up to the supreme Buddha (1125)

4 Buddha, being asked, responded to their questions truly, and in responding to the questions the Muni delighted the Brāhmaṇas (1126)

5 They, having been delighted by the clearly-seeing Buddha, the kinsman of the Ādikētas, devoted themselves to a religious life near the man of excellent understanding (1127)

6 He who lived according to what had been taught by Buddha (in answer) to each single question, went from this shore to the other shore (1128)

7 From this shore he went to the other shore entering upon the most excellent way, this way is to lead to the other shore, therefore it is called 'the way to the other shore' (1129)

8 'I will proclaim accordingly the way to the further shore,'—so said the venerable Pīṇḍiya,—'as he saw it, so he told it, the spotless, the very wise, the passionless, the desireless lord, for what reason should he speak falsely?' (1130)

faith, (as well as) Bhadrâvudha and Â/avi-Gotama, so thou shalt let faith deliver thee, and thou shalt go, O Pingiya, to the further shore of the realm of death<sup>1</sup> (1145)

24 Pingiya 'I am highly pleased at hearing the Muni's words, Sambuddha has removed the veil, he is free from harshness, and wise (1146)

25 'Having penetrated (all things) concerning the gods, he knows everything of every description, the Master will put an end to all questions of the doubtful that (will) admit (him) (1147)

26 'To the insuperable, the unchangeable (Nibbâna), whose likeness is nowhere, I shall certainly go, in this (Nibbâna) there will be no doubt (left) for me, so know (me to be) of a dispossessed mind<sup>2</sup>' (1148)

Pârâyanavagga is ended

Suttanipâta is ended

Pingiya and Bâvarî, shed a golden light Pingiya, who sat picturing Buddha's virtues to Bâvarî, having seen the light, looked round, saying, 'What is this?' And when he saw Bhagavat standing, as it were, before him, he said to the Brâhmana Bâvarî 'Buddha has come' The Brâhmana rose from his seat and stood with folded hands Bhagavat, shedding a light, showed himself to the Brâhmana, and knowing what was beneficial for both, he said this stanza while addressing Pingiya Commentator
